THE TELEPHONE!

PROF. BELL'S TELEPHONE having attained to such perfection, it is now offered to the public, confident that a trial of its merits will ensure its general adoption.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables any one to speak or converse over a SINGLE WIRE to a distance of 250 miles. The tone of the voice is recognized when friend or acquaintance are speaking

THE TELEPHONE

Has an advantage over the present system of Telegraphy, as any one may listen without being an operator, or in other words, there is no Telegraphic alphabet needed.

THE TELEPHONE

Dispatches messages with greater rapidity than telegraphing—as by telegraphing every letter must be distinctly made, and every word properly spelled—by TELEPHONE each word must be distinctly spoken, when it is distinctly heard at every moment of utterance.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables the manufacturer to talk with his factory superintendent: the main office with the branch office, the house with the store, the country residence with the stables, or any part of the grounds, the mouth of the mine with its remotest workings, or in short any given point with any other point, although many miles apart.

THE TELEPHONE

Is neat and portable, and an ornament to any room or office. The yearly cost to the lessee for a set of TELEPHONES—one at each end of his line is $30.00.

AN AUTUMN SONG.

Now gently falls the fading light.
The autumn's dampest veil,
While dusky grows the wavering flight,
Of whip-poor-will and quail.
The grain is heaped, the nuts are brown,
On every wooded hill;
The light is softened on the down,
And silvered on the rill.

The partridge drums; the plovers call.
Seldom the sportsman's ear,
And just above the water fall,
The fisher sets his weir.
The reddened leaves with whitened wings,
Sweep lightly to the sod,
And Autumn wraps the land and sings,
With trusting sadness shod.

NORWOOD

(From the Register.)

NORWOOD PRESBYTERIAN TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION.—We are glad to be able to state that a Temperance Association—having for its motto, "For Christ pleased not Himself,"—has been organized in connection with the Presbyterian Church of this village. At a well attended meeting held on Monday evening last, for organization, the following ladies and gentlemen were elected officers for the current year:—President, Mr. W. E. Roxborough; 1st Vice-President, Mr. Robt. Willson; 2nd Vice-President, Mr. Fotheringham; Secretary, Mr. John Clark; Assistant Secretary, Miss Maggie Wilson; Treasurer, Mr. James Raddos; Committee: Mrs. Roxburgh, Misses Annie Kempt, Annie Raddon, Amelia Harper, Annie Burgess, and Messrs. A. R. Anderson, John A. Harper, Charles McMillan, Geo. Hamilton, A. Robertson, and W. Finlay. Immediately after organization 125 names, principally adults, were subscribed. Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, will preach the inaugural sermon of the Society on Sunday Morning next.

A PROOF.—There is an old and true maxim often quoted, viz: "In the eating of the pudding is the proof of its quality;" and as a proof of some remarks we made last week in reference to the liquor traffic, we this week state that all the tavern keepers of a village in this County were taken up to the big stone building in Peterborough on Saturday last to serve a short prenticeship under keeper McWilliams, on account of being unable to pay a fine imposed upon them for selling liquor contrary to law. To the credit of that village, its people didn't drink worth a cent.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

The Toronto Telegram says:—"The most regrettable feature of our party politics is the disrepute into which the utterances of our public men bring each other abroad. If outsiders believe everything they are asked to, they will require to believe that all the public men in Canada are scamps, and that instead of being members of Parliament and leaders of parties, they should be breaking stones for our public institutions." It is indeed a matter of regret that such a feature should, to so large an extent, pervade our political struggles. As to where the responsibility lies for a course of action so likely to bring discredit upon the country abroad, we have only to glance over the record of our political history since Confederation. The battle of the Opposition of that day against the then Government was not one of personal calumny, vituperation and misrepresentation. It was a struggle for great principles of political advancement, for the extension of the liberties and privileges of the People, for the curtailment of the powers of the Executive and the enlargement of the supervision of Parliament, for the extension and protection of the franchise, and the purity of elections. It was only when the leader of the late Government quarrelled with his colleagues that they were attacked, as in the case of Hon. William McDougall, as traitors to the Queen and country, dishonest men and garblers of State records. The Reform party fought the battle honestly and straightforwardly, contending for principles they believed calculated to improve, elevate and advance the moral and material welfare of the people. These principles were opposed by the late Government, as being dangerous and radical. Both sides had a right to their opinions, and that was the true plane upon which political differences should be fought out. That the Reform party were right is evident from the fact that, through their agitation and their unremitting efforts, one by one, the reforms for which they contended were placed upon the statute books. They opposed the Conservative party, too, by a fair and intelligent criticism of the administrative policy of the Government, as in the case of the extravagant expenditure of the Intercolonial Railway, and the surrender of Canadian interests in the Washington Treaty. The Pacific Scandal, which came like a thunder-clap upon the country, for the time set all political considerations in the back ground. Parliament and people united to vindicate the honor of the country from the disgrace which had been brought upon it by those who had secretly abused the confidence of the people by the perpetration of these crimes. When a new administration took charge of the Government of the country, how were they met? By a criticism of their policy! By the advocacy of principles different from those they proposed in legislation? By a fair and legitimate discussion of intelligent differences of political opinion? By no means. They have been assailed by a system of vile slander and unprincipled misrepresentation. Personal character has been impugned and private relations invaded. Even the bones of dead patriots have been stirred in their graves because they had been connected with the living. A sordid and impure motive has been attributed to every action of the Government; and all this, not in the legitimate arena of political discussion, Parliament, but in an irresponsible way before the people, where they could not be directly answered, Slanders, impugning the personal honor of Ministers, and the honesty of their administration of public affairs, have been repeated and reiterated in the most shameless manner, after the most explicit and unimpeachable refutation. In fact, it has been the deliberate purpose and the only policy of the Opposition, not to challenge the confidence of the country by legitimate criticism of the policy of the Government, or the impeachment of their administration of public affairs before Parliament, or by voting up a policy for the people's approval in opposition to that of the Government; but to villify and degrade public life; to throw lots of dirt at public men in the hope that some of it may stick; to bring down, if possible, the reputation of the leaders of the party in power to the same level which caused the people to rise in the vindication of their honor in 1874. They have sought to make the country believe that, bad as were the sale of the Pacific charter and the plundering of the Northern Railway, the present party in power are no better than they, and that all public men in this country are alike low in public and private morality. Is it any wonder, then, that in defending themselves from such a vile system of opposition as this, members of the Government smailed should remind their detractors of the crimes which are still fresh in the recollection of the country, for which the perpetrators show no sign of repentance, which they either brazenly defend or seek to hide under a fusilade of false charges against the Government and those who support it? Much as these things are to be regretted,—much as it is desirable that our political contests should be fought upon higher, more intelligent and more patriotic grounds—much as it would be to the advantage of the country were contending parties to respect the national reputation by mutual respect—it is not upon the party in power that the fault can be laid, but to those who have shaped that policy of calumny and detraction, upon which the Opposition seem solely to rely. Nor can we hope for a change from this state of affairs until the Conservative party has the self respect to take Sir Alex. Galt's advice, and choose a leader worthy of a great political party,—or the respectable leaders follow Sir Francis Hincks' example, and retire from a party whose Chieftainship every day devises for them some new degradation.

THE FINANCE MINISTER'S REPLY TO SIR JOHN.

The Finance Minister at Simcoe recently retorted after the following manner upon Sir John's action:

Sir there was not a man in Canada who knew bitter than Sir John Macdonald did when he made his statement what my reasons were for withdrawing my support. He had written to me; I have here his letter—a huge letter of six foolcap sheets, filled from the "Dear Cartwright" with which it commences to the "Dear Cartwright" with which it closes with a series of reasons why Sir Francis Hincks was likely to be accepted as a leader by the Reformers of Canada. Now I entirely agree with Sir John Macdonald that all private correspondence should be held sacred, on one condition, that both parties to that correspondence shall continue to keep it sacred; but I say it was an infamous act for Sir John Macdonald to refer to my correspondence and not to dare to publish the whole. (Hear hear.) I say that when Sir John Macdonald brought a false and malicious charge against me, he knew I had in my possession a letter convicting him of falsehood in bringing that charge, and that for him to dare to say that a man may make a false and malicious charge against another, and then say, "Although you have proof in my own had writing that that charge is a false and malicious one, you must not use it because I marked it private"—I say that this is about as fine a specimen of thieves' logic as I ever remember to have heard. (Hear hear.) I do not intend to-day at any rate, to inflict this long letter on you, but I will give you a synopsis of its contents, sparing the private names and references which it contains; and if Sir John Macdonald impeaches the truthfulness of that synopsis, if he dares deny that I have stated truly what it contains, then I will publish the whole letter, and every man in Canada will then have an opportunity of judging for himself who speaks the truth. (Hear and cheers.) It contains six mortal foolscap pages. The first page is chiefly devoted to Sir John's undying gratitude to the Reformers in Canada for having in 1855, and afterwards in 1864, put him where he was. It is to be wished that that gratitude had borne a little better fruit. The second paragraph is devoted to a short description of my friend the Premier and Mr. Blake, with a very ingenious resume of the reasons why he should not at that time put salt on their tails. (Loud laughter.) The third paragraph goes to show in detail what "steeped to the lips in corruption" means, used from one public man to another, and that it is rather a complimentary frase than otherwise. Then he goes on to dilate on the advantage to the old Reformers of Canada, of Sir Francis Hincks going into the Government, to deliver them from the tyranny of George Brown and the Globe, and on the immense rally there would be around him—as in the general election of 1872, for instance. (Laughter.) Then there is a general valedictory to myself, and a summary of the qualifications of Sir Francis Hincks. In truth, it is really a long argument to show that Sir Francis Hincks was a real reform leader, and an unanswerable proof, in six pages, that Sir John when I said I objected to Sir Francis Hincks because he was not a Reform leader, was making a statement precisely as valuable as when he told Lord Dufferin, on his honor and his fealty as a sworn Minister of the Crown, that he was absolutely innocent of all the things laid to his charge by my honorable friend the Postmaster-General.

The Canada Premier on Protection.

In a speech lately made at Aylmer, the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, Premier of Canada, gave his countrymen much wholesome and interesting advice, be cullarly suggestive to our citizens and in great part referring directly to the financial policy which has so long and disastrously been tried in the United States. With little variation each of his arguments is applicable on this side of the frontier.

In opening his subject Mr. Mackenzie made a good hit at his antagonists, Sir John A. Macdonald—a former Premier—who advocates what he called "a protective policy," and says:—"We don't ask that you should always support the manufacturers, we vastly prefer all classes." Mr. Mackenzie showed that 80-odd thousand dollars, a potential counterbody constituency, had opposed to them to tell what the "somebody" must come from. The manufacturers of Canada with all the laborers they employ are only one-nineteenth of her population, and as the farmers and labours skilled artisans, as joiners and builders not employed in what are called manufacturers, from the great bulk of the other part of the population, it is beyond the possibility of disproof or fair denial that the burden of increased taxation upon manufacturers of the United States or other countries would fall upon them. Sir John A. Macdonald, like protectionists on this side of the, cares for none of these things, and as he is a man who sometimes is imprudent, tells just what he thinks, said boasts self complacently that as in former and what we regard as barbarous times men were ruled by force, so now they are ruled by fraud.

The speaker then referred to the desire of some. Canadian farmers that a duty of twenty per cent should be imposed on wheat produced in the United States. We impose a duty twenty per cent. on wheat grown in Canada and thus it appears to be simply a fair retaliation that the same duty should be imposed on our wheat when it is sent into Canada. But this is a shortsighted view of the matter. In it other facts and consideration necessary to a correct conclusion are entirely left out, Mr. Mackenzie readily demonstrated that as the price of wheat in the old world governs the market in the United States and Canada it would be "a piece of pure insanity to stop the "passage of United States wheat "through Canada as the Canadians find "it a lucrative trade."

In the words we have quoted from the speech of Mr. Mackenzie is shown exactly the folly we practice and our nothern neighbors avoid. He further explained, taking as an illustration the purchases and sales of wheat in Canada in 1875, that Canada then exported over seven millions of bushels and imported over five millions from the United States. As one exported much more than she imported, the purchases obviously were made for purposes of trade. The same reasoning applies in full force to our policy regarding Canadian wheat. By a heavy tariff we almost prohibit the beneficial forwarding and other trade, especially that connected with the manufacture of flour, which we might enjoy by the free admission of Canadian wheat. The Canadian millers and forwarders profit by our exclusiveness.

At Goderich, in Canada, for instance there is an immense flour-mill. The flour ground in it is from United States wheat brought from Chicago and is shipped to England in the shape of flour. Of course it would be absurd for Canada to put such a duty on wheat as would stop the importations and thus ruin a trade. But it is no less unwise for us to prevent the importation into the United States of Canadian wheat, which but for our tariff, would be imported largely into this country and extensively used for making flour in the mills of Buffalo, Black Rock, Rochester, Oswego, New York, Brooklyn and many other places.

The premier briefly but comprehensively discussed the salient points in the financial policy of the United States, holding it up as a warning to his people. He stated that he and every one who had travelled in the western States, and gone among the farmers to ascertain the prices they paid for agricultural implements, boots and shoes, clothing etc., knew that up to two years ago they paid fifty per cent, more than the Canadian farmers for the same class of articles, the reason being that the manufacturers of them were protected to the exclusion of everybody else.

Having previously talked with leading manufacturers in his own county and the one adjoining it, Mr Mackenzie said they all confidently concurred with him in his belief that if a high protective tariff, excluding foreign goods by duty of say forty per cent., such as are levied in the United States were enacted, the result would be that many new manufacturers would start up to make the same goods and a ruinous competition would ensue, such as that in Pennsylvania where the enormous "protection" on iron was so great as to cause the construction of seven hundred and eighty-one furnaces, the number in blast two years ago, but of which only three hundred and forty-eight are now at work and producing anything. Other American manufacturers, were similarly ruinous results have been produced by protection resulting in over production, were instanced and in conclusion the premier of Canada, warning his people against trying the pernicious policy, of which the condition of the United States is a conspicuous example, assured them they might depend upon it that there never was a greater fallacy invented than that any nation can be made rich by legislative acts, especially those which would compel it to pay high taxes for many years.—Buffalo Courier.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 8, 1877.

PETERBOROUGH'S PROUD PLACE.

Of course we are glad. To fight a winning fight is always a source of joy. The Dunkin battle is won in this town, and we are proud to have had a hand in the good work. We fought for the right, the good of our fellow-men; our foe was an evil, unseen but in the dark deeds it does; so we bear no ill-will to any who may have felt, from causes we cannot know, that they had to take the other side. We feel sure that there are many who voted against the By-law last week who are now glad it was carried; and that there are many more who though they may not feel happy at the issue will yet bless the day the Dunkin Act comes into force here. To those against whose trade we have battled we tender our best wishes, trusting that they too will in the end own that they were blest in being beaten. To their paid forces we can only give much pity, mixed with loathing. If we have dealt hard blows at a trade we deem not only useless, but hurtful, we have tried ever to strike fairly; and if in the doing of what we felt to be a bounden duty we have done ill to any man we are sorry, and shall be willing to ask his forgiveness. One side had to be beaten, and though we are glad it has not been ours, we have known all along that however the polling ended each voter had to go on living with his neighbours in the town just the same as ever, and hence that good-humour was bent on all hands. We have no fears that the heat of the fray will abide for any length of time.

Proud we are that this town is the first, apart from the country round about it, to pass the Dunkin By-law. This takes it from among those places which were forced to own themselves ruled by a force which all men agree upon as being evil, whiskey has not the upper hand here; and all the world may now know it. We are also glad that Peterborough has proven that, in spite of all those strong and deep causes that work against it, the Dunkin Act can be made the law of the free vote of the people in a large town, if only the right kind of work be done. We were here blessed beyond the towns in which the By-law has been lost in having the right workers, rightly acting together, so that all parts of the plan formed one grand and powerful whole. The first place is plainly due to those who carried out the canvass, and honour is chiefly due those who wear the blue ribbon, as a badge not merely of worth, but also of work, that proves their worth. To those who ably used tongue and pen in behalf of truth many thanks are due, and we do not in the least doubt are given by much the greater part of our townsfolk. And here we must acknowledge the aid of our brother of the Times in fighting upon no mean part of the field. Of the Review perhaps the less said the better, in this case at any rate. To the three men and the noble woman who came from other places to help along a cause in which their hearts are bound up too many good wishes cannot be given; while of the good women whose prayers went up to God for his aid and blessing in the work, it may well be said that they are abundantly blessed in the answer vouchsafed them, and in the knowledge that another step has been taken in the putting down of what is perhaps the chief enemy of their sex. Peterborough has indeed and in truth far greater cause than most towns to faithfully keep Thanksgiving Day.

A VICTORY WITHOUT HONOUR.

Undoubtedly the chief political event of the last few days has been the defeat of Hon. Mr. Laurier, the New Minister of Inland Revenue. It has been a surprise to all except those immediately concerned in manipulating the base means whereby it was accomplished. That his election was generally conceded is best shown by the remarks of the Opposition press prior to the polling, the only party hope then expressed being that his former majority would be reduced. Even the Conservative papers of the more immediate district expressed an unqualified certainty of Mr. Laurier's return, and some of them did not hesitate to condemn the opposition offered to it So unexpected a party success seems to have driven certain Opposition journals, particularly those of Ontario, beyond all reason. In their partisan joy they forget what is due to their country. They act with the party, by the party and for the party, unmindful of the evidences shown of an element of danger to the common weal. Yet these same journals prate about loyalty, loudly allude to their devotion to the cause of constitutional liberty, and point proudly to their records of British precedents in all their purity. They are usually very loyal, in word; but in practice they depart from the letter and spirit of their preaching. For instance, they actively seek to strike a strong blow at Canada's connection with Great Britain, by proposing to destroy our trade with the mother country by a protective tariff, adverse to both the interests and feelings of her people. Not long since these same "loyal and devoted" subjects pointed with eloquent appeal to the British practice of permitting the return of a newly appointed Minister without opposition; but now they drive all such unexpedient thoughts from them, and seem to act as freely in their new role as if no such country as Britain ever existed. It would be amusing, were it not painful in its grotesqueness, to see these super-loyal Tory papers which cry out for the maintainance of civil liberty, as though it depended solely on the vehemence of their professions, and which fume and froth over purely imaginary instances of Roman Catholic agression, now actually rejoice over what is, on the evidence of the better informed and more considerate papers of their own party, said to be a case of undue clerical influence in civil matters. It is positively sickening to see the Belleville Intelligencer the paper of that Orange Orontio, Mackenzie Bowell, who usually "works the oracle" by denunciations of Romish agression, actually place a cut of the British flag over the announcement of Mr. Laurier's defeat by the interference of French clergy, who by undue use of the power of their sacred office interfered to destroy free and independent citizenship of their flocks. The documents circulated to influence the minds of the French electors by arousing religious prejudices were in direct defiance of the instructions of the Papal Ablegate and the pastoral lately issued by the Bishop, as well as being an interference with civil rights. They are to be denounced by 'Canadians of all classes, creeds and parties; and the party in the interest of which, and at the instance of whose leaders they were used has greater cause for shame than pride in the connection. The fact of opposition to a man acknowledged to be personally acceptable is sufficient proof that his opponents care more for a temporary party triumph than for a good Minister. The opposition to the new Minister's re-election would have been inconsistent and unusual enough in any case; but it displayed particularly bad taste in being so near a general election, at which the Conservatives boast they will do wonderful things. The whole influence of the Quebec government seems also to be used against Mr. Laurier, or rather, as the Tories say, against the Mackenzie government, though that same Mackenzie was but lately the means of saving the credit of the Province of Quebec, when it was assailed from a source by no means uninfluential in matters financial. With such forces arrayed against him there is doubtless a temptation to a Minister to use any influences at his command; but we are glad to observe that Mr. Laurier upheld the sterling character even his opponents give him, by refusing to allow on his behalf a single departure from a fair and honest canvass. His defeat under the circumstances reflects all the more honour on him, while it reflects anything but credit on his opponents. Of course we regret that he should not have been returned at once, while we hope that the promised legal inquiry into the conduct of the election will be the means of doing good in teaching much needed lessons to several classes of people who are greatly in need of some instruction. Our chief regret is not so much in the defeat itself (for Mr. Laurier will soon find a seat,) as because of the evidences of error displayed by the opposition to him. Nor is our sorrow lessened by the knowledge that one of those actively engaged in that opposition was a former resident of Peterborough; but who seems to forget the principles of his earlier years, at least when fighting for that party to which he seems to have given himself up utterly and unconditionally.

CRIMES OF CONCUPISCENCE.

A prominent and very unpleasant feature in the reports of the various Courts of Assizes held this Fall has been the large number of cases in which violence and animal lust were combined elements. Our attention is called through the law courts to most revolting outrages on women, and even upon children; and we are made painfully aware that there are in our Province not a few humanized devils, who are willing to make money by attempting to cover up one crime by the perpetration of another and still darker one, whereby not only an innocent life is taken, but there is endangered the stained one of some wretched victim of a scoundrel's perfidy. The frequent recurrence of seduction, rape and abortion cases of late has become alarming: and people may well cast about them for a remedy whereby society may be purged of an evil which seems to increase, and constantly display itself in more disgusting deformity. The moral cancer seems to be an ever extending exhibition of the hideous and horrible, and a cure is urgently needed. We naturally look to the law for a remedy, and whatever may be said of the injustice and bad effect of compelling men to do right, there can be no doubt that the primary idea of all law is that men shall at least be compelled to abstain from what is known and universally acknowleged to be wrong. It would seem from the increase of the vile cases we have referred to that our laws in relation to them are either inadequate, or are not properly enforced. Though no law can utterly abolish a crime it can act as a deterrant to the commission of that crime. Now in the cases we are considering there is evidently too little severity in the penalties laid down by statute, (a fault of our legislators,) or too much mercy shown in their punishment; (a fault of our judges,) and it would be well did the framers and administrators of the law consult each other as to where the fault, or rather the failure, lies.

The crime of the abortionist is looked on with just horror, inasmuch as it involves murder, and frequently ends in the sacrifice of more than one life. Rape, too, and the attempt to commit it, are properly relegated to the list of crimes, or offences against the safety of society, to be dealt with by the Crown. These are classed as criminal offences, and hence are readily considered by even the unthinking as crimes, and as such to be abhorred. The more covert evil doers, the seducer of weak and confiding woman from the path of virtue, the provider of victims to the murderous abortionist, the wrecker of hearts and destroyer of homes, is not classed by our laws as the perpetrator of a technical "crime," and probably on this account popular feeling hesitates to regard him as a criminal. There can be no doubt that he too commits a crime against society; and he assaults the social fabric too, in a most vulnerable quarter, over which the defences should be made as strong as possible against insidious attacks. Making seduction a criminal offence is strongly urged by many as a reform that should speedily be carried out. We can readily understand the feeling that calls for condign punishment on scoundrels who, by the worst possible wrong, betray a love and confidence reposed in them; but there are considerations that require attention before such a demand is acceded to. The very fact of a misplaced love and confidence establishes the inference that the fault is not all on one side; though an error of judgement, influenced by tender feelings, is very different from the passionate perpetration of that which can only be an injury. Even a love that cannot be returned should be too sacred to meet with the ill requital of a lifelong curse, to say nothing of the probabilities of eternal dispair. It has been said that to make seduction a legal "crime," would leave any man in the power of whatever bad, bold woman might choose to swear away his character and his liberty, and that it would place in the hands of the blackmailers a dangerous weapon. The evidence of the bad, however bold they may be, does not generally convict the innocent in our courts; and while we cannot see that the facilities for blackmailing would be one whit greater than already exist through charges of rape or any other crime, we can readily perceive how the possibilities would deter the coward from the coward's crime of seduction. As the law now stands an inducement is offered to the making of money by proving damages against the seducer, who on the payment of such civil damages is suffered to go, as one who has honestly discharged a debt; and, we are sorry to observe that he is looked upon by people generally as little or no worse than the man who has been sued for his tailors bill. Did the law, however, make his offence criminal, not only would the mercenary feature be dismissed from the prosecution; the prisoner, convicted of the "crime," would be rejected by all decent people; his punishment, by imprisonment, the lash, or both, would not only satisfy outraged society, but also lessen the temptation to relatives of the seduced must now feel to kill the seducer; and, most important of all, the bodily punishment, with its attendant shame and disgrace, could best be understood by such offenders, and would act as a deterrant to them and others for the future. Thus the greatest cause, next to defective education, of the alarming increase of cases such as we have been considering would be met, not alone by the mere terror of the law, but by a lessoning of the unfortunates who go to recruit the ranks of the demimonde, by a thinning of houses of ill-fame, keepers and frequenters of which should also receive more severe punishment—by a consequent weakening of that awful element in the problem, and by the moral lesson the public, young and old, would learn through their instructive abhorrence of crimes the law rigorously punishes.

CANADA'S NEXT NEIGHBOUR.

The growing dissatisfaction of the people of the United States with the high tariff, which has injured their commerce and driven their ships from the sea, has been before remarked upon by the EXAMINER. The general feeling on this question has been noted and acted upon by the Administration, the movement of which may fairly be regarded as barometrical signs, showing how sits the weather in the popular mind, particularly as the divisions in the Republican party teach the members of the Cabinet and the President to avoid vexing questions, and take up only such as are likely to be popular with the masses. There can be little doubt that the present Administration at Washington has been taught to look with increased favor on a more liberal commercial relation with other countries. To this end the American Consuls were instructed to report upon the state of trade with the ports at which they are severally stationed; and those in Canada reported in a way to encourage the people of the United States to acquiesce in the framing of a Reciprocity Treaty between the two countries. It is true that both countries have managed to exist, and Canada to get on very well without Reciprocity; but it is equally evident to all that they can both do better under reciprocal trade relations. Where both people are not averse it should not be the part of either governments to refuse, on merely sentimental and silly grounds, a mutual consideration of a basis whereby a Reciprocity Treaty can be formed.

As we have said, the report of the American Consuls in Canada were decidedly favorable to Reciprocity. They knew pretty well what was wanted of them, and took care that nothing appeared in their report that would tell against it. Thus Colonel Shaw, American Consul at Toronto, strives to allay the fears of the manufacturers of his country by stating in his answers to the questions of his government, that it is impossible for Canadian manufactures to compete with those of the United States. This means simply that the American manufacturers need not fear the renewal of Reciprocity in trade between the two countries. Some of the Conservative papers in Canada while they deny Col. Shaw's statement satisfy the house unless a reply was given, as he had agreed, offered time to reply to either Mr. Knowlton or Mr. Carswell: but this would not be accepted. As then alleged he had been so abused in Peterborough that it would require all the night to vindicate his own character. Being referred to his agreement, he insinuated that Mr. Gibson had laid some false accusation against him, and would not retract it, and hence he would not allow him to speak at his meeting. The audience held that this was none of their business, and that King Dodds, an importation from Weston, had no right to dictate who should reply,—that as the champion of "British Liberty" he should permit his opponents to put forward their own speaker. By this time the delay had led to confusion, and very soon nearly every tavern-keeper in town was on the platform, threatening their opponents, shaking their fists at them, and declaring their intention of using force to several persons. At this particular juncture Chas. Stapleton mounted the rostrum, with a large staff in hand, which he brandished vigorously, and using expressions which we did not catch.

Mr. Stratton then applied to E. King Dodds to announce the time for the reply and commence the meeting, but this he refused, and declared he would break up the meeting if not allowed to do as he planned, as he had determined that Mr. Gibson should not speak that night. This final effort to secure peace was ineffectual, and as several of the tavern-keepers were likely to cause a row, King Dodds advised the chairman to declare the meeting at an end.

From information now in our possession, there is no doubt but that they had determined before entering the Hall to

THE DUNKIN CAMPAIGN.

We had concluded to allow the campaign just ended to pass without a single reflection on any one, but the report in the Review is so calculated to mislead the public that to let it pass uncontradicted would be wrong on our part. There are scarcely three words of truth in the two columns devoted to the Dunkin campaign. The writer must have received his inspiration from a source far from heavenly, or he must be closely related to a class who are ready to pander to the most vitiated appetites if he but receive the reward of his labour in dollars and cents. He must think also that the readers of the Review have become so besotted and demoralized that truth would be nauseous and hateful to them. But the people of this town and county are not so far demoralized as to relish over two columns of such trash in one week.

The great reason for giving so much unmitigated falsehood to the public must lie somewhere near the artery that moved King Dodds—in the breeches pocket. It must be a cause of sorrow to many to find a journal devoting its spaces to oppose morality, and to upholding a traffic that is immoral in all its tendencies, and adverse to all that is good.

The report of the Friday evening meeting referred to is a tissue of misrepresentation and untruthfulness. This meeting was called by the Licensed Victuallers, to be addressed by "E. King Dodds and others." But when E. K. D. reached town and learned that the state of public feeling had intensified in favor of the By-law, he determined not to address the meeting unless it consisted of Anti-Dunkinites alone. On his way from Toronto he and Mr. Joseph Gibson were in the same train, and made special arrangements that Mr. Gibson should have one hour to speak. The meeting was called for the Drill Shed, and as the Anti-Dunkinites had secured every Hall in town, and also the Drill Shed, the friends of Temperance had to avail themselves of King Dodds' meeting. To prevent their being present in large numbers the Anti-Dunkinites changed the meeting from the Drill Shed to the Hall, and then set about packing it with their friends to prevent the supporters of the By-law gaining an entrance. But the news having spread like wild fire, the hall was soon filled with supporters of the By-law, simply because there were more of them than of the Antis in town, and to some extent because they had no place to hold a meeting of their own, as Col. Poole refused giving them the Drill Shed even after the others had determined not to use it. The attempt to pack the Hall with Anti-Dunkinites was evident from their not issuing any public notice of the change till about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. These tactics were found necessary by E. K Dodds, because he was determined not to allow Mr. Gibson to speak at any meeting previous to the polling; as he, Mr. Gibson, had so demolished Anti-Dunkin logic at Guelph the previous night, that King Dodds feared a repetition of a similar kind in Peterborough.

The Anti-Dunkin champion did not make his appearance in the Hall until 30 minutes after the time, although the people were impatient to have the proceedings commenced. In the meantime the boys became noisy, whistled, shouted, and played on reeds, and made the place hideous. About 8.30 the Rev. Mr. Beck entered and ascended the platform, followed by one Brooks, T. G. Hazlitt, T. O. Bridgewater, John Boyd, and others. They had solicited Mayor Toole to preside, but he refused unless both sides should be heard, and as this was not in their programme they had to fall back on Mr. H. H. Smith. On his taking the chair he attempted to announce that he had no programme, and called on Rev. Mr. Beck to address the meeting. This announcement was not well received, and caused some confusion. When a little order was restored the President of the Blue Ribbon Club asked "what time the reply would be given?" But King Dodds dictating to the house, said "they would announce this as they proceeded." The audience refused to hear him until he would announce the time for the reply; but he stoutly refused, and shaking his fist at the audience told them he would control that meeting if he should stand there till 6 o'clock in the morning. He then attempted to have the meeting commenced, but failed to get a hearing. The chairman then invited Mr. Stratton on the platform to make arrangements, but it was found that King Dodds would come to no terms. When the audience became more noisy than ever, Rev. Mr. Willoughby, Mr. Cox, Mr. Dumble and Mr. Stratton used every effort to allay the feeling, and would have succeeded, but Dodds again interfered, and then yells arose from his sympathisers. He seeing that nothing would with E. King Dodds! Not a creature accompanied him as he left the scenes of his sad memories.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is the organ of the fashionable world, and the expounder of that world's laws: and it is the authority in all matters of manners, etiquette, costumes, and social habits.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by the fashion-plates in endless variety, to the provident mothers by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by the tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is undeniably of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords, and has become an established authority with the ladies of America.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Personal.—Our esteemed townsman the Rev. C. W. Watson has returned, bringing with him as his bride Miss McMullen, daughter of the Rev. Mr. McMullen, of Picton. The Rev. gentleman is looking exceedingly well. We have pleasure in tendering the happy couple our warmest congratulations.

The Streets.—The sidewalks in certain parts of the town are badly in need of repairs, and something should be done to them before the cold weather sets in. A number of crossings are in a defective state and pedestrians are greatly annoyed by the inconvenience caused while the streets are muddy.

St. Andrew's Society.—The annual meeting of the St. Andrew's Society will be held on Wednesday evening, November 14th, at 8 o'clock, in the room adjoining the Council Chamber, Bradburn's Hall. A full attendance is requested as the election of Officers for the ensuing year and other business will be transacted.

Catholic Social.—The social given in aid of the Catholic Bazaar in the Opera House on Wednesday evening of last week, was one of the most successful as regards amusement ever held by our Catholic friends. The attendance was large, and dancing was kept up to the music of Prof. Freeman's orchestra until an early hour.

Stock Sale.—The attention of those desiring to purchase a superior quality of milch cows is directed to the sale of Joseph H. Walton, Esq., Balsam Grove, Township of Smith, on Tuesday, the 13th of November, at 10 a. m. Further particulars may be had by referring to his advertisement in another column, and to posters and catalogues.

Grass encroachment has been caused in the village of Lakefield by an article in the last number of the Bobsleigh Independent, in connection with the failure of a prominent lumber firm. Opinion is divided; but as there is "a lady in the case," we will leave them to settle the pro's and con's among themselves, and wait for time to solve the questions.

Fire.—On Monday, the 29th ult., the dwelling house and adjoining buildings of Mr. Andrew Grant, of the Township of Smith, were consumed by fire. The fire originated from sparks blown out of the stove during a heavy gale of wind. Part of the furniture was saved. Insured in the London Agricultural for a very small sum: his loss is therefore considerable.

Not so.—We are instructed that the Times' assertion in last weeks issue that Messrs. H. H. Smith and D. W. Dunkin in acting as scrutineers at the late polling, were doing so under professional auspices, is incorrect so far as Mr. Dunkin is concerned. Throughout the campaign Mr. Dunkin gave his assistance freely and willingly, his heart being with the cause.

As it is sometime—over two months—before the municipal election takes place we would caution the voters not to make any promises of support to any person. Remember that is just a certain gentleman—who is ever anxious for the Mayoralty. There is plenty of time between now and the 1st of January to decide on a candidate.

Boots and Shoes.—I am now offering a large assortment of these goods for men, boys, women and children; purchased from the leading wholesale manufacturers of Montreal, which will be disposed of at very reasonable prices. I would also call attention of farmers to my stock of superior grain bags which I will offer at the lowest possible prices. W. J. Wallace, Lakefield. 2-in.

Dunkin in Ashburnham.—They say that some persons in and some out of Ashburnham are desirous of separating the Village from the County, believing that if separated the Dunkin By-law would not pass in the Village, and that it might be made a common bar-room for the town and county. How foolish! Do the inhabitants of our sister village wish to turn it into a Sodom? But the ratepayers have a word to say in the matter.

Election of Officers.—At the last meeting of the Peterborough Fire Brigade, the following members were elected officers for the ensuing year: Captain, &c. 1 Company, Thos. Rutherford; Lieutenant, No. 1 Company, John Marshall; Captain, No 2 Company, W. Roberts; Lieutenant, No. 2 Company, Wm. Hetherington. Brigade Officers: Aaron Comstock, Treasurer; Leonard Dobbin, Secretary.

Installation of Officers.—The following officers were installed in Friendship Temple I. O. G. T., No. 146, on Tuesday evening last, for the ensuing quarter:—

W. C. T.—Bro. F. E. Burnham.
W. V. T.—Sister F. W. Heather.
W. Sec.—Bro. Geo. B. Sproule.
W. Treas.—Bro. Hope.
W. F. S.—Bro. Geo. Rogers.
W. M.—Bro. Irwin.
W. I. G.—Sister Rea.
W. O. G.—Bro. Carter.

Tea Meeting.—The Good Templars of Unity Temple, I. O. G. T., intend holding a tea meeting in their Hall, 4th line of Smith, on Wednesday evening, November 14th, when addresses will be delivered by the Revs. Mr. Roberts, R. N. Willoughby, F. J. Radcliffe, Mr. Geary and others. The temple choir of Peterborough, under the leadership of Mr Joseph McClelland, will be present and render some choice selections. Tea to be served at 5 p.m. Tickets 25 cents; children under 12 years, 15 cents.

A party of Sportsmen from Rochester, N. Y., consisting of H. Smith, S. Westfall and Dr. Briggs, arrived here some ten days ago, and were joined at Lakefield by W. Reynolds, J. Dinwoodie, R. Irvin and G. German. They camped up at Beaver lake, in Harvey. After a weeks sport they have returned with 6 fine deer, some 40 partridge and a fine lot of salmon, and are so delighted with our back lakes and the jolly time there, that they are already looking forward to next October to "visit the Canucks again."

The Canadian Presbyterian.—We have received the first number in the new form of what used to be called the British American Presbyterian. The name has been wisely simplified to Canada Presbyterian. The paper appears in new type, and is made up in 16-page form. The reading matter is divided into various carefully-prepared departments and altogether the Canada Presbyterian is a creditable representative of the great denomination for which it speaks. It is now one of the handsomest papers published in Canada.

Our Young Men.—The noble stand taken by our young men in passing the Dunkin By-law in this town deserves to be mentioned to their honor. Nearly every young man in town, (except those interested,) was on the side of the By-law. They have also taken a deep interest in the temperance movement during the past six weeks. More than three-fourths of them are pledged teetotalers. With so many noble young fellows on the side of moral right, the by-law can be inforced when necessary. We feel proud to be one of them. Is it not right to be proud sometimes of our associates.

Query.—What has happened our contemporary, the Lakefield News. A few months ago we were informed that it had "jumped off the fence, and had hoisted the straight forward ticket," but when the "Dunkin Act" comes to the fore, he is looking for "knot holes" to get either to the other side or to his old position on "ton." As we are not aware whom to address as editor at present, we would like to see the proprietor come out like a "little man," and nail their colors to the mast, (perhaps the Review will lend the blocks,) and let the ambitious village people and ourselves know if their paper is "Dunkin" or "Anti-Dunkin" in its sentiments.

Orange Young Britons.—The members of the Lodge of Orange Young Britons in this town have generously contributed $30 towards the expenses connected with the addresses during the Dunkin By-law campaign. This is another indication of the earnest desire of the young men of Peterborough to rid the town of the great evil of intoxicating liquors. During the whole campaign the young men engaged earnestly in the work, and performed a noble work in the canvass and during the days of polling. Peterborough has therefore great reason to be proud of her young men, and to hope that many of them will perform an active part in the public affairs of this rising Dominion.

The Irishman in Canada.—This work by Nicholas Flood Davin has just been issued from the press of Malcolm & Company, Toronto. It consists of a neatly printed work of about 700 pages. It is written in an easy readable style, and gives an amount of information alive to the Irish Race in this Dominion that can be obtained from no other single work. The author has gleaned from varied sources a great deal of information relating to the early settlement of nearly every locality in the Dominion where Irishmen took a prominent part in the work of breaking up the virgin soil of Canada, or in establishing trade, commerce and educational institutions. Every Irishman in Canada who can afford it should secure a copy of the work, and those who may claim lands other than Erin their birth-place may read it to profit. Mr. Langford, of this town, is agent for the Town and County, and will be glad to supply all who may favor him with their orders.

Shameful.—An attempt has been made to ridicule the efforts of certain ministers of the gospel in town because they labored to remove the bar-rooms, which are so well known to be a source of evil to the community, and a hindrance to the progress of true and undefiled religion. Those faithful men who sought so earnestly to remove the temptation out of the way of those who are in danger, deserve to be remembered with the deepest gratitude. Ou doing so they were only laboring to promote the cause of their master, and to elevate those creatures who are unable to raise themselves out of the mire of intemperance. A curious feature of this ridicule is that it emanates from a leader in Israel, we will not say a master, for that would be untrue. How an elder in a Christian church can permit the use of his columns to contemn the Christian work of an earnest, able Christian minister causes no little surprise to thoughtful people. Our south end Tangle-leg Advocate should learn a lesson from the growth of public opinion on the temperance question, and, although his heart may not be right on this matter, for the sake of the profession he has made, he should not ally himself with a traffic that is evil in all its ramifications. But the ridicule of an elder or of a newspaper that could prostitute his talents or his columns to continue the worship of Bacchus, can only recoil on his own head.

Sensible Advice.—You are asked every day through the columns of newspapers and by your Druggist to use something for your Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint that you know nothing about you get discouraged spending money with but little success. Now to give you satisfactory proof that GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER will cure you of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint with all its effects, such as sour stomach, Sick Headache, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heart-burn, Waterbrash, Fullness at the pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated tongue, Indigestion, swimming of the head, low spirits &c., we ask you to go to J. D. Tully Druggist and get a Sample Bottle of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

PERSONAL.

In the great hurry and excitement of the Dunkin campaign we neglected several matters to which our readers will now permit us to refer, and the first of these which demands a few remarks is the galaxy of speakers who came to our aid during the contest. Mrs. Kent Mason was the first who aroused the sleeping energy of the people of Peterborough. She was earnest, eloquent, and untiring in her efforts to secure the continuance of her work after her departure.

MARVIN KNOWLTON, ESQ.,

of London, Ont., came immediately after Mrs. Mason, and was well qualified to follow her. In one week he addressed the people several times, and secured over 2,000 names to the Blue Ribbon pledge. He succeeded also in creating an enthusiasm such as had never been known in Peterborough before. It is peculiarly his work to create a temperance enthusiasm and enlist the active co-operation of all classes in the work of rescuing men and women from the curse of strong drink. Not less than 160 hard drinkers were induced to sign the pledge at his meetings, and very few, if any—or at most not more than two—of these have fallen away since. He advised coming for

MRS. YOUMANS.

She came, and her labors were successful far beyond all anticipations. She has a convincing and earnest manner, imbued with a warm heart and a religious spirit, which enlist the feelings of her audience and secure their sympathies. The people crowded to hear her, night after night. Hundreds were awakened by her earnest appeals to a sense of duty to save their husbands, fathers, sons and neighbors from the bar-room. She also held meetings in Keene and Norwood. In the latter latter place over 1,000 persons signed the pledge during two of her meetings. At Keene very many signed the pledge at meetings held by Mr. Knowlton, and afterwards at one of Mrs. Youmans' meetings.

Mrs. Youmans and Mr. Knowlton having to leave for a week to assist at Cobourg and Port Hope, and on business, was solicited, and came to the aid of the temperance cause. Mr. Carswell possesses rare talents. He is eloquent beyond almost equaling Gough, and is both humorous and witty. He drew immense houses; 1,000, 1,200 and 1,400 people went night after night to hear him, and he succeeded to an extent never before known here, in keeping up the interest in the temperance work. He has left hosts of friends in Peterborough who admire his spirit, his agreeable, genial conduct, and his devotion to temperance work. Very few men possess the rare talents of brilliancy, humor and eloquence possessed by him.

E. CARSWELL, ESQ., OF ORILLIA,

MR. JOSEPH GIBSON,

the last of the speakers who came to the aid of the temperance people, deserves more than a passing notice would space permit. He is of small stature, but possesses rare argumentative powers. He has followed E. King Dodds into every battle field, and has become so familiar with his antagonist's tactics that he can so successfully answer him before heard as when following him. He is well versed in every phase of this question, has studied it in all its features, and reasons so convincingly that he carries the people with him, hence the Anti-Dunkin champion dreads to meet him in debate. This accounts for King Dodds' tactics to prevent him speaking here. Mr. Gibson's work is to convince the people by the force of argument to vote for the Dunkin Bill. While in Peterboro' he was well received by all classes of the people. His method of bringing forward the questions of the contest was such as to win over enemies, as well as secure the plaudits of his friends. He carries from Peterborough the warmest sympathies of all temperance people, while the attempt of E. King Dodds to prevent his being heard, received a well merrited rebuke from the people who refused to hear Dodds on any terms, unless Mr. Gibson obtained a hearing. The attempt of E. K. Dodds, as hireling of the T. V. A., to control a Peterborough audience, and the readiness of the Licensed Victuallers to place their neck under the heel of a man of his antecedents received a fitting rebuke from the people who voted the strongest condemnation of his course and of their action by passing the By-law by 119 of a majority, and to secure this, Mr. Gibson did a noble work.

Central School	438	405
South Ward	265	211
Auburn School	81	66
Total for all Schools	1093	889

The Report was adopted.

From J. F. Jeffers, Esq., Principal of the School, stating that the work assigned in relation to the "Model School" had been performed to the satisfaction of the Visiting Inspector and of the Board of County Examiners. He also stated that the full number of lectures had been delivered, he being ably assisted by Mr. J. Stratton and Mr. Brown.—Received.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Cox, chairman of the committee on appointments, handed in the following report, and stated that he would not move for its adoption as he did not quite agree with that part of the report which referred to the appointing of a Principal for the Common School.—The following is the report:

The Committee on Appointments beg leave to report:—That they have accepted temporarily the nomination of this town by the Minister of Education for the establishment of a County Model School, and in the opinion of your committee the advantages to be derived therefrom and being sufficient to justify the additional expense which a permanent establishment would involve, would recommend its discontinuance, and that notice be given to the Department to this effect.

Your Committee would also recommend the appointment of a Head Master for the Public Schools who shall assume the management of the same on the first of January, 1878, under the direction of the Principal of the Collegiate Institute, and in order that the expenses of the school may not be increased by such appointments they would recommend that the services of one of the teachers in the Institute be dispensed with, providing that can be done without empowering its efficiency.

They would also suggest that the collection of fees in the Institute be strictly enforced.

Your Committee are also of the opinion that it would be advisable to appoint the teachers for the Park Street School as early as possible.

Signed, GEO. A. COX,
Chairman.

On motion the first clause of the report was adopted.

Dr. Burnham said it would not be prudent to change the management of the school at present. If he thought that by so doing, it would benefit the school, he would only be too happy to do so. He was of the opinion that it has a questionable policy.

Mr. McClelland said that this matter had been before the Board for years, and what was wanted to remedy it was to appoint a responsible man at the head of the Common School Department, so as to raise the standard of the Common School Work. Parents had been complaining that they cannot get their sons the necessary education at our schools to fit them for tradesmen, and they considered it but time to send them to be promoted into the Collegiate Institute before they had received the necessary common school education; they having to take up Latin and Greek whether they wished to do so or not. He said that it was not necessary to separate the schools or the Board to do so, and as the High School Inspector had complained of the work that was being done in the Common School, he thought that this Board were justified in making the change if they should add a little more to the expense.

Mr. Richardson said that he had been paying attention to the working of the School for some time past; when the present Principle took charge of the school there were seven teachers in the Collegiate Institute, and now there were only six. He had inquired and ascertained that children were not compelled to take up latin if they did not desire to do so. He thought that every teacher in the school earned their money, and advised if there were any who were not doing their duty to get rid of them. The school had been run under the present management to a standing second to none, and he was of the opinion that a change would not make the school any better than it is.

Mr. Edmison could not see how they were going to raise the standard by preventing pupils from entering into the Collegiate Institute. By engaging a teacher as recommended, a large expense would be incurred for which he could not see that the Board would receive an adequate return. As such teacher might not be qualified to teach penmanship, and a commercial education any more satisfactorily than the present teachers; if it was a matter of engaging another teacher to assist the Principal he would not oppose it.

Mr. Dennistoun said that the report had been carefully worded by the chairman. The clause did not compell the Board to do anything if they perceived that it would not make the school more effectual. It was generally felt that an offer to ensure a good english and commercial training would be acceptable to the people, and he felt that by adopting the report and engaging a head master for the public school this would to some extent be brought about

Mr. Edwards said he would advocate any measure that would increase the teaching in the primary branches before taking the higher.

Mr. Lech thought that more attention should be given to the common school departments

Mr. Shaw advocated the adoption of said clause; it not binding the committee to engage a common school Principal if they did not think that it was advisable in the interest of the school at large.

Mr. Jeffers Principal thought that the school was doing very well, and that only by patent hard work could the school be advanced.

On a vote being taken the second clause of the report was struck out.—The following being the vote:

YEAS. Messrs. Edwards, Dennistoun, Robertson, Lech, Shaw, McClelland.

NAYS. Messrs. Pentland, White, Burnham, Kincaid, Edmison, Richardson and Cox.

The third clause was then read, and on motion the report was adopted, after striking out the second clause.

Moved by Dr. Kincaid, seconded by Mr. Richardson, that Messrs. Shaw, Dennistoun, Edwards, and Edmison, be a committee to confer with the Principal with reference to a more complete education for the pupils attending the public schools of Peterboro,' especially as to a thorough commercial training.

Messrs. Dennistoun, Edwards, and Shaw, declined to act on the committee, and stated that they had already given the matter considerable attention as will be seen by the report,

On motion the Janitor was allowed to erect a stable on the south end of the school ground.

Mr. Belchers account was on motion ordered to be paid.

The Board then adjourned.

A Significant Triumph.

(From the Montreal Daily Witness.)

The Dunkin Bill has had a triumph which promises much for the future, and is especially encouraging to temperance men in view of their recent defeats in Cobourg and Port Hope. The Dunkin Bill has been carried in the town of Peterborough by a majority of one hundred and ten in a total vote of less than one thousand. It is unnecessary to say that there was a vigorous contest. Contests over the Dunkin Bill are always vigorous now, the liquor-sellers having some time ago found out that the time for cool disregard of the movement had passed. Most respectable men, even prominent clergymen, were not wanting to give them their influence. The great liquor champion, E. King Dodds, of Toronto, was summoned to the rescue. But all was in vain, and by a majority in proportion of five against four, which would be considered quite decisive in a political contest, the town pronounced for the suppression of the liquor traffic. The liquor-sellers tried their Toronto tactics, and took possession of the stairs which were the entrance to the polling place, but there were back stairs also, and by these the Dunkin voters gained admission. This foiled there was a truce, and an agreement to vote in alternate taps, which held good for the first day, but not for the second, when the liquor-selling vote played out, and a majority of one-hundred and twenty-five was run up for the bill, which was reduced to one hundred and ten at the close, when no vote being polled for a half hour the poll was closed. Peterborough is, we believe, the first town which has carried the Dunkin Act singly, other towns where it is in force having voted with country districts. That it has been passed there gives promise for other towns, for there are no exceptional circumstances in favor of Peterborough, so far as we know. Two local papers out of three supported the bill, but in other towns there are local papers supporting it also. A feature of the contest was a daily meeting for prayer of the ladies of the town at eight a.m., the meeting continuing all day and about three hundred ladies being in attendance. Their prayer had no doubt been preceded and was accompanied by active work to influence those within their reach. This was doubtless a great element in the power which obtained the success which was achieved.

The Late Mrs. Marter.

By the death of Mrs. Marter, which occurred at the residence of her son-in-law, the Hon. E. B. Wood, in Windsor, on Sunday evening last, another of the old landmarks of Brantford has been removed. The deceased lady was the second daughter of the Hon. Hoath Hatch, who died about 17 years ago, of heart disease, in his seat in the Executive chambers at Fredericton, N. B.

In 1837 she married the late Dr. Marter, well and favorable known to all the old residents of this city. In the latter part of that year the newly married couple left New Brunswick and took up their abode in the then village of Brantford. In 1838 the Dr. and Mrs. Marter left here for Nova Scotia, where they remained for a few years, and then returned to Brantford. Shortly after there return here, the Doctor died, leaving Mrs. Marter with four young sons—her two daughters, Mrs Rubidge and Mrs. Wood having been married some years prior to this event—all her children, now grown up men and women, have reason to bless her for her faithful training and example. Some four years ago the lamented lady accompanied her daughter, Mrs. Wood, to Winnipeg, with whom she remained up to the time of her death. It was only last week that Mrs. Rubidge received a cheerful letter from her, saying if God spared her life she purposed coming to Brantford during the ensuing summer, to remain some time with her children in Ontario.

Being possessed of a kind noble and generous heart, Mrs. Marter had the esteem of all, was beloved by many and best by those who knew her most intimately. Besides her own sons and daughters she has left 34 grand children and many relatives and old warm friends throughout the Dominion to mourn her loss.

W. Rubidge, Clerk of the Crown, here, married her eldest daughter, and Chief Justice Wood the second. They with her sons and their families, have our deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Mrs Marter was 65 years of age at the time of her death.—Brantford "Expositor."

For Severe Coughs and Lung Complaints.

Canton, Pa., Nov. 29, 1873.

Messrs. Sethe W. Fowle & Sons, Boston:

GENTLEMEN.—About ten years ago, after having had a severe attack of the measles, I was troubled with a severe cough and was threatened with consumption. My father having died at the age of thirty-one with consumption of the lungs, and my aunt having been carried off with the same complaint, it seems to be hereditary in our family. At the time alluded to, I was induced to buy a bottle of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and can say conscientiously, I believe it saved my life. I was blacksmithing at the time and often felt pains in my chest and lung, which the Balsam relieved. I cheerfully give this statement, and hope you may have success with so beneficial a preparation. Yours truly, A. J. MERRITT.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

POLICE COURT

ASSAULT.—On Monday Mr. Charles Stapleton was before Messrs. Edwards and R. Fairbairn, two of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on a charge made by Constable Magee of an assault on Tuesday last, while restraining the accused from driving through the crowds of people, opposite the polling place. Mr. J. F. Dennistoun appeared for the defendant. After several witnesses were examined for the plaintiff the case was enlarged till Friday morning, in the hopes that the case would be withdrawn.

besides a large and carefully selected stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING!

FROM THE FIRST MANUFACTURERS.

Their Goods are attractive and are well bought, and range from the cheapest that are of any value to lines more expensive than are generally found except in the leading houses in large cities.

Their Trimmings are elegant and, excellent in quality, and the workmen we have engaged are the best that can be employed.

Mr. MADISON will endeavor to produce garments superior to any he has ever turned out in Peterboro, and with superior facilities hopes to be able to please those who have hitherto found it difficult to get garments to suit them in town.

Mr. Madison assisted by Mr. Wm. Green, will be glad to show gentlemen their goods and hopes to make prices and to offer other inducements to tempt those who favor them with a call to leave their orders.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.

Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamac and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Excelsior Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old steading cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

SEWERS OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RHEUMAN and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the wrapper, to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plaste are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gum is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is so by done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.

A Triple Crown for Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.

"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS"

The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines were pronounced by E. H. Knight, G. W. Gregory, Fred Paget and L. D. F. Poore, Centennial Judges of Sewing Machines at Philadelphia in 1876, to be the best Sewing Machine in the market. Not only the Centennial Commissioners pronounce the W. & W. the best Sewing Machine but also Mrs. Jas. Stephenson of Ashfield, Mrs. W. W. Johnston, Wm. McCullough, J. G. Hinston, R. Tervais, Mrs. Dr. Kincaid, Mrs. W. Parker, sen., Jr., of Peterboro; Mrs. Wm. Deacon and Mrs. J. Smith of Ashburnham, and hundreds of others too numerous to mention, pronounce it the best Sewing Machine, and recommend all intending purchasers to call and see the new family W. & W. "It is a perfect little Gem."

CAUTION.

I hereby caution all those having the W. & W. Sewing Machine not to allow any other agent or person interested in any other Sewing Machines to have anything to do with the W. & W., as there are a great many agents who pretend to sell and repair all classes of Sewing Machines, they have little or no knowledge of the W. & W.

But I would recommend those having the W. & W. Sewing Machine to call on the proper and only authorized Agent at Peterboro, who is competent to repair, if necessary, the W. & W. Sewing Machines properly. I am also willing to give instructions free of expense to all W. & W. customers of the Agency, on all classes of goods from 1 of an inch thick down to gossamer lenses on variety work free. All persons interested in the W. & W. will be benefited by calling on G. A. Mitchell, who thoroughly and practically understands the Machine.

Please read my late circulars on W. & W. Machines, before purchasing a Sewing Machine elsewhere.

I also take Insurance Risks on first-class buildings at a very low rate, and I am working for first-class companies.

FARM for SALE.

The undersigned offers for sale that Valuable Farm being composed of the North half of Lot No. 8 in the 10th concession of the Township of Asphodel. The Farm is nicely situated and contains 110 acres, more or less. There are on the premises a New Log House, Barns, Stables, and other necessary outbuildings, a young orchard, and is well watered. It is situated 2½miles from Hastings, 3½ miles from Norwood and is a Good Wheat Farm. Further particulars made known on application to ENOCH TYE, on the premises, or address, NORWOOD P.O. 43-6ins

FARM FOR SALE.

That excellent farm in the Township of Otonabee, known as the "Christie Farm," adjoining the Village of Keene.

This farm is beautifully situated: Within five minutes walk of the post office, of the school, and of three churches. The soil is of best quality and well cultivated. The fences good, and there are two never-failing wells on the lot. There are two dwelling houses on it, but one of both can be purchased with the farm. The barn is frame, the stables and sheds commodious. There is a fruit bearing orchard, young, consisting of two acres, on the farm.

This is a very desirable property as it is in one of the best Townships in the province, and cannot be surpassed for grain growing.

Possession can be given on the First of Oct.

Terms moderate, and can be obtained by applying at the EXAMINER Office, Peterborough.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 15, 1877.

MR. BLAKE'S LATE SPEECH.

The Tory papers were but lately troubled because the Globe had not published an extended report of Hon. Mr. Blake's speech at Teeswater; and not a few of them professed an absurd belief that Hon. George Brown had suppressed such a report out of ill-feeling toward Mr. Blake. Among the full reports of late speeches of the Reform leaders, Mr. Blake's has in its own good time appeared in the Globe; and now the Tory journals affect as great disdain of it as they before did anxiety at its non-appearance. They pretend to think it a poor speech, and in so doing show that they feel otherwise, for were it a poor speech in reality they would greatly rejoice. They complain that it is not as brilliant as former addresses by the same man, but they cannot say that it does not admirably suit the occasion on which it was delivered. Mr. Blake before his constituents was in a very different position from that occupied by him at the time he delivered his notable Aurora speech. There he was breathing forth the aspirations and hopes, however distant, of Reformers; at Teeswater he was giving an account of his work as a Minister, disposing of Tory slanders affecting his old Department, and taking the opportunity to vindicate the memory of his noble father from aspersions cast upon it by that moral bodysnatcher, William Macdougall. In all liklihood his political opponents would have been better satisfied had he confined himself to "glittering generalities," rather than shown the recklessness and carelessness that pervaded the Department of Justice when it was under Sir John Macdonald. For instance, they do not relish his showing that though the work in the Department has trebled, and through there was two years work in arrears, not only has it all been done, and well done, but the rate of expenditure has been lessened to the tune of $9,500. This would be incredible did Mr. Blake not show conclusively that he saved $2,800 in salaries alone, and that to without increasing the contingent account, which on the other hand was cut down to one-fourth of its former dimensions, how was it done? Let Mr. Blake speaks for but a few moments:—

> "In 1873 the telegraph account was $4,371.88; in 1876, $1,164.69; and in 1877 $330. (Loud Cheers.) In 1873 cab hire was $1,935.50; in 1876, $98.89; and in 1877, $14.80. (Hear hear, and cheers.) In 1873 the travelling expenses were $1,118.12; in 1876, $322.08; and in 1877, $51.53. In 1873 the postage account was $363.37; in 1876, $228.53; and in 1877, $125.77, although, as I have pointed out the correspondence has greatly increased.

No wonder certain people don't like Mr. Blake's speech; for the question will naturally arise in the popular mind, "what was done with all the money so uselessly expended in Sir John's time?" No wonder the late government was so popular with the cabmen of Ottawa that the jarvies of the capital got up a small Tory demonstration the other evening. No wonder the people of Canada prefer the present administration to the late one.

EXEMPTIONS FROM TAXATION

The question of abolishing the absurd exemptions from taxation granted to some properties and their owners, to the heavier burdening of other properties and proprietors, last year received considerable attention by the public, and was discussed to some extent in THE EXAMINER among other journals. This important subject is again before the people in a shape that shows the opponents of exemptions to be possessed of an assurance that the reform they propose will be ultimately accomplished with the approval and by the will of the country as that will is generally expressed. That the imposition of taxes is necessary to the raising of a revenue, and that the best basis whereon to levy is that of property, are propositions that will scarce be questioned by the most interested or determined exemptionist. Theoretically all property is supposed to contribute to the state in proportion to its value, as payment by the owner for the security in which such value is held by him; but practically this is far from being the case. We know that under existing laws certain positions are considered of such state respect as to exempt the property of those who hold them from taxation, though their property is secured to them and defended in the same manner as that of others. By the term "property" we mean not only lands and tenements, but incomes as well, however derived. An estimated amount has to be raised for the carrying on of the government, the enforcement of the laws relating to life and property, and other expenditures for the public good; but when some are exempted from the payment of their proportion of that amount it is plain that the decreased number who do pay must contribute a larger percentage of the whole. Thus the exemption of the few is a palpable injustice to the many. This is the broad basis on which opposition to tax exemptions is based, and is conceded even by those who attempt to defend the exemption of this or that class of property, in which they are generally in some way interested, either by proprietory right, or some less direct, connection, yet sufficiently powerful to bias their verdict. While these persons argue with a certain degree of plausibility for the continuation of exemptions on some particular properties, church or otherwise, as the case may be, they cannot get over the position of the non-exemptionists, that all properties should in simple justice pay taxes in proportion to their value. The great reason of disagreement at all arises from the difficulty in fixing values on properties such as are generally exempted entirely from the payment of taxes. There are certain uses to which lands and buildings may be put which render them almost valuless in comparison with others adjoining them which may be devoted to more productive uses. It would be as manifestly absurd to assess such properties, equally as to place the same taxable value on the occupied grounds and mansion and the vacant lot near them. Yet the vacant lot has a value, and that value, though it may be increased by its proximity to improved prosperity is determined by the assessor on a consideration of the probable sum for which it can, if offered, be transferred. The same test would bring in most, if not all, those properties against the exemption of which complaint is at present made. True the assessment value of some of them might be low; but they would, as they should, be rated at something, and thus a glaring anomaly would be removed from our system of taxation.

FIGHTING AGAINST THEIR FATE.

It is somewhat amusing to notice the attempts made by Anti-Dunkin papers outside to explain away the effect of the disastrous defeat their cause met with in this town. The Toronto Observer calls itself "a journal opposed to prohibition," though edited by E. King Dodds, who professed to favor prohibition as opposed to the Dunkin Act. It tries to raise a sympathy for the sporting and spouting champion of the Licensed Victuallers by blaming the ministers of the gospel for using their moral influence to defeat the immoral designs of Dodds. We are quite willing to admit that to the noble efforts of the cloth much, though not all the success of the Dunkin cause here is due. We have already stated our views as to what causes conspired bring about the recording of a majority of 110 on the right side, and we see no necessity for now repeating them. We will say, however, that it ill becomes those who employed the only minister of the town they could get, to take the platform in defence of the drunkards drink, to now complain that clergymen should not step down from the platform to publicly discuss other than purely religious questions.

We notice that a common remark of our Anti-Dunkin exchanges is that many of the opponents of the by law abstained from voting because the poll was carried on in an illegal manner, and these persons so careful of their convenience knew that the vote could be set aside. It is indeed gratifying to know that there are some Anti-Dunkinites in Peterborough who can be set down as total abstainers—from voting; but we scarcely think there are one hundred and ten of them. As for the irregularity in the manner of taking the vote, we can assure our contemporaries one and all that so far from being an advantage to the Dunkinites, the plan of admitting alternate tens was not of their seeking, but was agreed to on a mutual understanding as a means whereby crowding at the poll might be prevented and quiet preserved. Under these circumstances we cannot see why the Mayor should be subjected to this species of indirect condemnation; nor how any court could decide that his acquiescence in the arrangement should void the vote. But even should the polling be declared illegal on such a technicality it is certain that those taking advantage of an irregularity to which they were consenting parties would earn only the contempt and opposition of the whole population, and the votes that would be recorded in their favor on a resubmission of the by-law would be decidedly few and far between. All then the Licensed Victuallers could hope for by invalidating the vote would be the postponement of the time the Dunkin Act will come into force in the town. If they, in full possession of their senses, choose to be tempted into court by such a bait, no one will presume to stop them; and certainly no one will envy them in the pursuit of such a course.

THE MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE.

The Tory journals draw such comfort from the defeat of Mr. Laurier in Drummond and Arthabaska as to lead to the inference that they must have forgotten certain defeats of Tory Ministers that have taken place in Canada. For instance. Hon. Joseph Morrison after being given a portfolio in Sir John Macdonald's Ministry was defeated in seeking re-election, yet he was shamelessly retained in the Cabinet for two years, without a seat in Parliament. Mr. Coyley too was defeated under similar circumstances, also Mr. Archibald. Mr. Chapais, Sir John's Receiver-General in 1867 could not secure election, and was appointed to the Senate. Even Sir George E. Cartier was defeated in Montreal and had to go to Manitoba for a seat, getting it too by the grace of Louis Riel, whom Sir John paid to leave the country, Sir Francis Hincks too when a Minister in Sir John's Cabinet was fain to go to Vancouver Island for a seat in the House, and became the representative of some three hundred constituents all told. Mr. Laurier has not yet been driven to such straits, nor will he. He has been offered, and has accepted the nomination for Quebec East, and we look for his election there ere the month is out. Nor will this leave Mr. Bourbeau in undisturbed possession of the seat for Drummond and Arthabaska, which may yet be declared vacant by the Courts.

We are coolly told by one of the Opposition sheets that the feat of the defeat of Mr. Laurier by illegal means appears the uselessness of the election law passed by the Redmonds. As well might the law in relation to murder, or any other crime, be declared useless because it is occasionally broken. That election laws seem to trouble the Tories temporarily, and well it may, for it aims at the punishment of some of their chief men in the past, that they may be deterred from their lapses and flagrant commission in the future. Indeed this very election in Drummond and Arthabaska is a proof of the benefits of the new election law in its provision for the prompt recovery of justice for the defrauded electorate.

The signs of "reaction" which Opositionists decry in Mr. Laurier's case amount to almost nothing under the circumstances. It is true that he was formerly elected by a majority of 226. That was in 1874, at a general election which is well known to have been exceptionally favourable to the Liberals. Mr. Darion in 1872 only had 51 majority, and Mr. Senecal in 1867 but 27. At present the constituency is represented by a Conservative in the Local Legislature. So it will be seen that Drummond and Arthabaska is not the Liberal stronghold some of our Tory contemporaries have been trying to make out. The best reputation of the assumption that a Protection sentiment affected the election lies in the fact that in the County of Drummond, where are the manufacturing interests, his majority was increased over that given him in 1874, the alienation from him of many of the French of Arthabaska being the sole cause of his defeat. How that alienation was brought about our readers can guess. At any rate it will be explained before very long in an Election Court.

MR. W. B. O'DONOGHUE.

Toronto Tribune.

THE Irish Canadian has had "information, some time ago, from two distinct "sources," that Mr. W. B. O'Donoghue was to receive a "full amnesty." This information could not possibly have come from the K. U. E. C. (Knight of the United Empire Club), because that gentleman declared in Parliament that, if O'Donoghue (as he confesses) was concerned in the raid, "he should be held "accountable for it." We do not know 'the sources'—they are generally devious and usuall dirty—from which the Canadian derives its information. But we do know that, last Spring, when the Costigan want of confidence motion was under discussion in the House of Commons, the Hon. Mr. Blake made use of such words as indicated that the present Government had no intention of continuing the system of unfair treatment towards O'Donoghue which their predecessors in office had inaugurated. They could not have accepted a vote of want of confidence in themselves as a fair occasion for doing justice to O'Donoghue, and thereby surrendering the reins of government into the hands of their opponents. But they may now, with propriety, consider whether that Fenian raid—so-called—fomented and brought as O'Donoghue himself says, "by the perfidy of "Sir John's Government"—could not with advantage to the public interest be entirely condoned. This is what we advocated in May last; this is what we advocate now, if circumstances will justify the proceeding. But "where will the brethren be?" O'Donowill then become a lost card, Mr. John White's outflow of lugubrious sympathy will be dried up for want of a subject; and in case Sir John should again come into power, we would be unable to hold O'Donoghue accountable for his part in the raid. Is not the Canadian recklessly rippin open the goose which has, for months past, been laying so many golden eggs?

SEDUCTION AS A CRIMINAL OFFENCE.

In the course of an article on "The Criminal Record," the London Free Press thus favors increased punishment for seduction:—

> Some are in favor of making these base acts partake of the nature of crime, and to be punished as such, instead of being, as now, atoned for by a money compensation. Every man who puts himself into the place of a father, so wronged and outraged, must feel that money is no compensation for the ruin brought upon a respectable family through the act of a selfish, heartless scoundrel. In cases where the family may contain several daughters, one of whom falls a victim to a villain in this way, it is not one sister alone who suffers, but the whole family of girls, as the reputation of all suffer in common, and become socially degraded through the faults or misfortunes of one. It would be worthy the attention of the religious teacher, the moralist, the philanthropist and the legislator to unite in devising such reforms in our laws and customs, as would help to put a stop to such an evil and one become so common.
> If making the offence punishable with fine and imprisonment would, in the opinion of our public men, abate the evil or tend to abate it, then there ought to be no hesitation in introducing the change. A man may, under the present provisions of the criminal code, be sent to the penitentiary for stealing the value of a few dollars, even when the thief may have proved beyond question, that the crime was committed to relieve his wife and children from the pangs of hunger or pinching cold, while a man may destroy the prospects in life of an innocent girl, and reduce her to the condition of a social outcast, while the father and family of such a daughter are mocked by the laws only empowering the parent to sue for the loss of his daughter's time and services. Surely we are right in calling such a compensation a mockery of justice, as no money compensation can atone for such a wrong.
> But it may be said that punishing the heartless seducer as a criminal, would not right the wrong done. Granted; but though it can never restore the unfortunate girl to her former position in society, gain her again the respect of friends and acquaintances, and dissipate the dark cloud that has settled down over her prospects for life, yet it may save others, and thus serve society. The murderer is not hanged, and the lesser criminal imprisoned for life, to avenge the victim or make atonement to his family, but as a salutary lesson to society and to deter others from the perpetration of similar crimes in future.

North Monaghan Council.

The Council met at the call of the Reeve. Present the Reeve, and Councillors Robson, Birney and Leary. Minutes of previous meeting read and signed. A petition signed by D. G. Hatton and six others, asking to have a sidewalk built across a portion of the 13 concession of the Township, connecting with that on Weller street was received and read. The Clerk was directed to inform Mr. Hatton that the tax levied for Township purposes for 1875, as well as for 76 and 77 was not 2½ mills on the dollar, but ½ mill for each year; thus making the sum paid by those signed in the petition not $69.60 as stated, but $17.92 which if given ea tire, would go a very short way in building the road. On the motion of Councillor Birney, Mr. Campbell was heard before the Council respecting the opening of surveyed line of road across park lots North from the Western portion of R. C. Cemetery, to gravel road. The Clerk was directed to notify John Parnell to have any obstructions on the new line of road removed; and the sum of $36 was granted to assist in the work, on conditions that as much of the statute labor of next year would be advanced as would leave the road fit for public traffic. On the motion of Councillor Leary, Mr. Kyres was heard before the Council relative to culverts on drain road, when it was moved by Councillor Birney, seconded by Councillor Leary, that Mr. Kyres be authorized to make the necessary repairs on the line of road named, so as to secure the culverts against the spring floods; and also that he would supply 700 feet of cedar timber at 3 cts., per foot running measure, said timber to be all good and sound material for culverts. Council adjourned.—Ont.

To the Friends of Prohibition.

The Conference of Prohibitionists, held in Toronto September 26th and 18th, after fully considering the present position of the various prohibitory organizations in Canada, agree to recommend a union of the previously existing Alliance with the several Provincial leagues, and the formation of a new Dominion Alliance. It was felt that more sympathy and support than have hitherto been given to the societies named could be secured for a general Prohibitory organization, and, consequently, more practical work performed.

The recommendations of the Conference having been accepted, the Alliance is now constituted in a thoroughly national society, with which Prohibitionists in all parts of the Dominion are invited to cooperate.

The Constitution of the new Alliance is framed to meet the circumstances arising out of the dissimilarity of laws in the several Provinces, and the vast extent of territory embraced in the sphere of its operations.

To the end that the work of the Alliance might be under the immediate direction and supervision of an Executive, whose members could readily consult with each other, it was deemed necessary that some city should be made the centre of operations and Toronto was accordingly selected for the present year.

The Executive Committee intend, as soon as practicable, to enter upon a vigorous and systematic work in all parts of the Dominion, and whilst never losing sight of the great aim, "Total Prohibition," they will endeavor to promote Provincial or Dominion legislation in harmony with the objects and principles of the Alliance.

The first great duty devolving upon the Executive is to put the Alliance upon a sound financial basis, and to insure a regular income for a term of years, with that end in view, they have concluded to appeal to the friends of prohibition for subscriptions to a fund of $100,000 payable in five equal annual instalments. This sum may appear large, but it is by no means out of proportion to the importance of the cause, the magnitude of the work, the number of persons that are expected to aid, or the strength and boasted liberality of our opponents. Those whom Providence has blessed with health, influence and a disposition to promote the best interest of society will, doubtless, contribute liberally to this scheme; but its success cannot be secured without the cordial assistance of all classes according to their means. We also trust that all temperance associations throughout the Dominion will lend their hearty co-operation to ensure the success of this undertaking.

To indicate the practicability of raising the sum named, let it be supposed that,

10 persons give each	$100 for	5 years	$	5,000
20 "	" "	50	"	5,000
40 "	" "	25	"	5,000
50 "	" "	20	"	5,000
400 "	" "	10	"	20,000
800 "	" "	5	"	20,000
1,000 "	" "	4	"	20,000
2,000 "	" "	2	"	20,000
				$100,000

Should this appeal meet with the response anticipated, there will be no difficulty in educating and directing public opinion as to secure, at no distant date, the enactment of a Prohibitory Law, and the consequent deliverance of our fair Dominion from the terrible evils resulting from the Liquor traffic.

Signed by order of the Executive,

ALEXANDER VIDAL, President,
THOMAS GALES, Secretary,

Persons willing to aid the Alliance in its imortant work are requested to forward their names to the Secretary, Rev Thomas Gales, Toronto, stating under which sum in the foregoing schedule they wish their names placed.

Toronto, Oct. 4th, 1877.

DEADHEADING ON THE NEWSPAPERS.—The Rome Sentinel, N. Y., tells the whole truth in the following article in connection with the dead beating system so persistently attempted and frequenty practiced by people who ought to know better: "There is no other business on which the public levies such heavy contributions as on the newspaper publishing business. An organization is getting up some kind of festivities, for example. It pays for the use of grounds, pays for music, pays for refreshments, $2 worth of tickets and $4 worth of bills printed either at a newspaper office or somewhere else, and then expects free advertising from the paper to an extent actually worth from $2 or $3 to $10. The mere announcement of a pic-nic, social, or festival, is an advertisement, and ought to be paid for. The result is that a generous proportion of the profits of nearly all entertainments of this kind is money which rightfully belongs to newspaper publishers. Then after the thing is over, the managers will come with a long string of resolutions with which to rob the publisher of more valuable space. The truth is that space in a newspaper represents money. It is no more reason why he should give it away than why a merchant should give away his goods. Part of the space of the paper is sold to business men for advertising purposes, the rest is devoted to interesting reading matter. On the last the publisher depends for the attractions which shall sell his paper. Either space represent cash to him. Yet the business man who buys space to the amount of $2 often buys a gratuity of local space to the amount of $1 or $2, or even more. The managers of festivals, pic-nics or other home entertainments may not buy one cent's worth of space, but all the same expect a free gift of several dollars worth of space. The minister who never advertises wants space to the amount of a dollar or two weekly for advertisements of sowing sermons. The politician, even though he forgets to keep his subscription paid up, demands column after column of valuable space free, and rarely so much as says thank you for it. For all this the newspaper man, taxen beyond any other business man, enjoys the distinction of being regarded as a dead-head by two-thirds of his neighbors.

THE Toronto Telegram hints that the recent article in the Mail on the Federation of the Empire has set a number of persons crazy in trying to find out what the writer was at. The Telegram adds: "The question now arises whether it is in the interest of society that any person should be allowed to fill our asylums in this manner, and whether Josiah Barr-Plumb is not, morally, at say rate, a red-handed assassin." We quite agree with our thoughtful contemporary that an Act should be passed prohibiting Mr. Barr-Plumb from attempting to write prose. Poetry is Mr. Plump's line, and of that our Laureate need not be afraid of over stocking the market.

A TRUE CASE.—One day last week a test case was tried in Hamilton, which will be of interest to many. The point at issue was whether or not the License Commissioners have power to regulate the hours that a by-law for closing saloons, etc., on other than Saturday nights. The Liquor Inspector argued in favor of the affirmative and Mr. Godley took the opposite view. After a lengthy argument His Worship the Police Magistrate decided that the Commissioners had the requisite power, and gave judgment accordingly.

THE Banner says:—"Chatham is not the only town in the Province favorable to the Dunkin Act, although we can still boast of having rolled up the heaviest majority for the Bill yet polled in any town or city. The town of Peterborough—which is separated from the County for Municipal purposes—voted on the Bill last week, and after three days polling the Act was adopted by a majority of 110. The majority here in July was 183, so that Chatham can still boast of being the heaviest temperance town of the Province."

THE WAR IN THE EAST

A Russian official despatch says: "A cavalry detachment of the Imperial Volunteers, half-way between Plevna and Sofia, on Friday, 5th instant, [illegible] and a large squadron of cavalry. The attack was made upon them by 1,200 men, though they only numbered 400 Turks and 200 Circassians.

Basbazouk telegraph says Gen. Obrontcheff, late chief of the staff in Asia, who planned the campaign, resulting in the defeat of Mukhtar Pasha, has arrived to command the staff of the Russian army in Bulgaria.

A Dolny Dubnik despatch, Nov. 6th, says:—"In consequence of the evacuation of this place by the Turks, the Russians have contracted the circle of investment to thirty miles. The Russians have 120,000 men, sufficient to fill two continuous lines of trenches around the whole position. 6,000 cattle are visible in Osman Pasha's position, and there are other indications that he can hold out thirty or forty days.

ASIATIC CHAMPION.

Constantinople despatches deny that Mukhtar was wounded on Monday. They also mention an engagement at Baibort, which may account for Mukhtar's determination to defend Erzeroum, as Baibort is on his shortest line of retreat to Trebisond, or it may be that the Russians unsuccessfully attempted to prevent reinforcements going to Erzeroum. The latter is most probable, as further Turkish despatches reiterate the accounts of a Russian defeat in the last attack, which would be hardly possible had not reinforcements arrived.

An Alexandropol despatch says the Ardahan column joined General Heymann after the battle of Deve-Boyun. The Turks lost 2,500 killed; wounded, and prisoners, and a great part of their artillery.

The report of the Russian repulse before Erzeroum is confirmed.

It is reported at Constantinople that the Russians have abandoned Opaka and Epolomaska, with much booty.

The Russians have re-commenced the bombardment of Batoum. The commandant of Kars was assassined by Melikoff to surrender, but a council of officers resolved to defend the place to the last extremity.

TURKEY.

A Constantinople despatch says:—Fortyeight persons in the service of ex-Sultan Murad's servants have been strangled. It is rumoured that the Prophet appeared to the Soltan, ordering him to conclude peace.

MONTENEGRO & HERZEGOVINA.

Ragusa advices state that Montenegrins have commenced the bombardment of Podgoritza. The place is expected to hold out, as the principal defences have lately been reconstructed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 12.—Reouf Pasha telegraphs:—"The Russian support from Gabrova, en route to the Shipka pass, passing within our range recently, lost 500 killed. Our loss is trifling. Lesman Pasha, commandant of artillery, was killed."

Mukhtar Pasha telegraphs Sunday:—"The Russians are entrenching themselves in the neighborhood of Deve Boyun. According to intelligence up to the 4th, the force investing Karas is not very numerous. The principal efforts of the enemy are apparently directed against Erzeroum."

Mahmond Damad Pasha has, under the excitement occasioned by the conspiracy against the Sultan, been penetrated by a stroke of apoplexy. His recovery is doubtful.

Chefket Pasha has gone to Shipka. Mehemet Ali will command the divisions at Orokaine.

Rye and flour are exempted from duty until March 1st, 1878.

LONDON, Nov, 12.—A despatch from Constantinople reports heavy fighting going on before Plevna the past two days The Battle thus far is favourable for the Turks.

BERLIN, Nov. 12—The prospectus has appeared of a new Russian five per cent. loan of seventy-five millions to be issued for subscription in Berlin, Amsterdam, and Paris at 76½.

BOOGY, Nov. 12.—The Turks on Saturday night attempted to surprise Skobeloff's position. The Russians allowed the Turks to approach within a hundred paces, when they received them with a heavy fire. The Turks retreated to an entrenched position, and maintained a violent fire until two o'clock on Sunday morning.

BUCHAREST, Nov, 12.—The Turks renewed their attempt to capture Skobeloff's position on Sunday. The position is an entrenched hill near Brestovic, which Skobeloff surprised on Friday and captured with the loss of 256.

CETTINJE, Nov. 12.—The Montenegrins, after the demonstration against Podgoritza, bombarded the Turkish fort commanding Scutari and Antivori road.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 12.—Private telegrams state the attack on Erzeroum was renewed on Sunday.

BOOGY, Nov. 13.—Osman Pasha, losses are estimated at 200 to 300 daily from the Russian artillery. Osman Pasha is busily constructing fresh fortifications which point to an intention to hold out as long as possible, rather than attempt a sortie. Prisoners and deserters state the Turks have six weeks provisions.

BELGRADE, Nov. 12.—Prince Milod presided at an extraordinary Cabinet Council on Saturday. It is stated the participation of Servia in the war is decided on and a proclamation to army has been prepared.

CETTINJE, Nov. 13.—The Montenegrins yesterday captured a fort commanding the town of Antivaria, with its garrison, two guns, a quantity of ammunition, and provisions. The Montenegrins are advancing on Antivari.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov, 13.—An agent of the Russian Government is here trying to make a contract for an iron bridge across the Danube 2,100 feet long, and costing $3,000,000.

BELGRADE, Nov. 12.—Fresh troops are daily marching to the frontier. An ambulance corps is forming, and in the arsenal at Kragujevatz work is going on night and day.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 13.—Skobeloff is definitely established in his newly captured position. The final Turkish attack was repulsed by the fire of seventy cannon. The Turks lost heavily.

VIENNA, Nov. 13.—The capture of the position which Skobeloff has been attacking would turn all the intervening works towards Radizevo, Tschenitza, and Grivitza. It is rumored from the Russian camp that preparation is being made for a general assault on Plevna.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A Russian official despatch states that Gen. Heymann advanced against Erzeroum on Thursday night, but lost the way. Three Russian battalions captured the position of Aziziz, and although obliged to withdraw, carried off 250 prisoners. The Russians lost fifty-two killed and 200 wounded.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 13.—A body of Russians have marched to Berkovatz, west of Vrahza. It is supposed they intend to attempt to cross the Balkans.

Suleiman Pasha has been appointed commander-in-chief of the armies in Roumelia. Aali (probably Turki) Pasha will command the army in Rasgrady.

General Debility.

This convenient term includes numerous ill-defined and supposed incurable forms of disease, superinduced by general debility and exhaustion, without any ascertainable external or internal cause. The PERUVIAN SYRUP sends it renovating influence to the inmost recesses of the system, and has relieved in our community many cases of supposed incurable debility.

NOTES FROM MONTREAL.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

The friends of Reform in Peterborough will be glad to learn that the able and dignified addresses of the leaders of the Government have made a deep impression on the minds of the electors of Montreal. Sir John A. Macdonald made a great noise in the Eastern Townships during his recent tour, but his speeches were pointless and abusive.

The St. Andrews Society engaged him to make a speech at their concert on Hallowe'en, and a large number went to hear how he would deport himself outside of politics. The majority were disgusted, many who had resolved to change sides at the next election on account of the so-called sugar grievance have since that night changed their minds. Many had heard the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie's admirable address on the previous Hallowe'en, and the comparison made Sir John odious in their eyes.

And now we have his speech at the late banquet, given in his honor in this City a few days ago. It is an able and gentlemanly address, no threats, no profanity, but a clear and logical outline of the situation. His utterances have been read by thousands, and have earned conviction with them. Reformers should exert themselves to the utmost to keep a man of such marked ability, and honest integrity, in office. Let every man be astir. McKenzie and Blake are men that every honest man can defend.

A LOVER OF THE PURE.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR:—A little incident occurred at the Union School here, during the late Dunkin Campaign, which I think will bear publishing. As I was returning from dinner one day I heard a great screaming and shouting among the scholars, indeed so great was the noise, that I feared something serious had occurred? On reaching the spot, I found a host of youngsters with blue ribbons on their coats, and in the centre of the crowd was a poor little fellow trembling, and nearly frightened to death, I asked the meaning of this, when a little fellow replied: Please Sir, "We are all Dunkinites, but this Chap wears a red ribbon under his coat, and he ought to have it torn off." Well, thought I, if the By-law is not passed this time, it certainly will be when these little men grow up, and the law will be enforced too.

Yours Truly,
W. S.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 15, 1877

Get in your coal.

It smells like winter.

The stove business is brushing up.

It's handy thing to catch cold this weather.

The wood business is brisk. Why wouldn't it be?

It won't be long before Christmas comes up smiling.

Five measles cases at Cornwall Asylum. This is a terrible record.

The Thanksgiving turkey and geese have begun to count the days.

If you want something new in room paper, go to Wilson & Davis'.

The new school house in the west of the town is hardening on completion.

Any person leaving goods on the sidewalk is only piling up Police Court costs on himself.

There is not much grain coming into market, the farmers are holding back for prospective prices.

A good driving horse for sale. Thoroughly broken for family use. Apply at EXAMINER Office.

Fall Ploughing is over for the season. Frost having set in too strong to permit of any more ploughing this year.

The Ladies' Christian Temperance Union meet every Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Good Templars' Hall.

Stone Crossings are being laid down at the crossings of Simcoe and George streets. This is a move in the right direction.

Y. M. C. A.—The prayer meeting this evening will be in St. Paul's church; to-morrow evening in the Charlotte street Methodist church.

Poultry Sale.—Mr. A. H. R. Sproule's thorough-bred stock of prize poultry will be sold by auction in Haggart Bros. auction rooms, on Saturday, the 17th inst., at 10 a.m.

Blue Ribbon.—The weekly meeting of the Blue Ribbon Club will be held every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, of which all members should take note, and try and be present.

The Tax Collector.—Is now making friendly calls on the ratepayers. The Council did the playing, but now the people do the paying. No matter who dances the people pay the piper.

Partially Abated.—The Dunkin Bill excitement is now pretty well abated. Nothing very serious has happened. A few may have been wounded, but we hear of no lives having been lost.

Personal.—The Rev. Mr. Watson delivered an address on temperance in Bradburn's Hall on Monday evening. The audience was a very fair one, but not equal to those during the campaign.

Water in the Otonabee River was not so low for many years. According to E. King Dodds it was taken to water the whiskey ? times—it must have been, where else could it have gone to?

Bank managers, railroad Superintendents, Town Clerks, and all that class of people are hereby cautioned against accepting their salaries without close scrutiny. Counterfeit five cent pieces are in circulation.

Appointments.—The committee on appointments, it is understood, will make their report at the next meeting of the Board in reference to the appointment of teachers for the new west end school, now in course of erection.

A large assortment of pocket books and family bibles at Wilson & Davis'.

Thanksgiving Service.—Thanksgiving services will be held in the George Street Methodist Church, on Thursday the 22nd instant—Thanksgiving Day—commencing at 11 a. m. A collection will be taken up in aid of the poor.

Bank Dividends.—The bank of Toronto has declared a dividend of 4 per cent., the Consolidated Bank, 3½ per cent., the Stadacona Bank of Quebec, 3 per cent., and the Bank of Montreal 5 per cent. each for the current half year.

Haggart Bros. will sell by public auction on Thursday, the 22nd inst, on lot No. 14, in the 3rd concession of Douro, the entire farm stock implements, &c., belonging to Mr. W. Sheblen. Sale at 12 o'clock noon, and without reserve.

Free Lessons.—Mr. James Coyle Brown, Public School Inspector for the County of Peterborough, was offering lessons in the manly art of self defence on Monday evening, on George street—merely for the love of the fun. What next?

Entry.—Parties having animals on their premises which do not belong to them run great risk in not advertising them immediately; it is a habit to wait a month or so, but then you are liable to pay damages for detention without public notice.

The Changed Times.—A close observer remarks that although the times have been very much improved in the business world there is still not so much bustle upon the streets as there was last year. The fashions are blamed for this apparent paradox.

Cruel.—The Times accuses the editor of the Tangle-leg Advocate of being the possessor of a dishonest charity. This is cruel, and doubly cruel, since the Times follows the example of a certain character in the gospel who rarely quotes scripture correctly.

Henry Rose has now in stock five car loads of Silver Star export oil, the finest brand of refined petroleum made in Canada. Messrs. Keighart & Co., Hamilton are the refiners. (My prices are as low for any quality as the more inferior brands are sold.) 40

Beautiful Weather.—For the past few days the weather has been beautiful, affording a favorable opportunity for farmers to secure their root crops. We should not, however, forget the old adage, that "with October the leaves fall; with November the fall leaves."

The party who borrowed our statutes of 1864 during the Dunkin Campaign, and also the Ontario statutes of 1875-6, will please send us his name, not necessary for publication but as a guarantee of good faith that we will get them again. The Dunkin campaign for the county is not over yet.

Water Works.—The Toronto people have voted the Water Works Commission out of existence; only 33 votes were cast to continue them. What is being done to get the Peterboro Water Works Act side by side with the Toronto Commissioners? They should occupy one common grave as they had one common origin.

The Tandy Brothers.—These gentlemen will give a Concert in Bradburn's Hall on Wednesday evening, Dec. 5th. They will be assisted by other musicians, instrumental and vocal. We will be able to give fuller particulars next week. We prophesy a crowded hall, as the Tandy's have never failed to arouse intense enthusiasm.

The School Question is now changing colors. The fall frosts have turned the beautiful green foliage into a dusky Brown again. See the shade in the Review before the Dunkin campaign cast the incense of alcohol over the unclean pages of our friend. Perhaps alcohol serves to set the color in the same way that nitrate of silver does for the artist.

"Ancient Scotia" are the latest vagary. The ladies all smile, and put on long sporran, contemplate the form. They are then mentioned off to the highest bidder successively, and for that evening must accept the attention and escort of the fortunate bidder. Most amusing situations and absurd complications arise, and that is where the fun is supposed to come in.

Mechanics' Institute.—The Managing Committee of the Mechanics' Institute are making arrangements for evening classes. Young men should take advantage of these classes for improvement in penmanship, arithmetic and bookkeeping, and as many as have a taste for other subjects, can have that taste gratified by applying to the committee as early as possible.

This week has been mutually agreed upon throughout the Christian world, for special and united prayer for God's blessing upon young men. Services are being held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. every evening this week, being conducted by prominent members and the ministers of the town. Special services were commenced in the different churches on Sunday last.

A large variety of Catholic prayer books at Wilson & Davis'.

Poultry Association.—The annual meeting of the Poultry Association was held in the Council Chamber on Thursday evening last, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John Mathieson, Esq.; Vice-President, J. Taylor, Esq.; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. R. Stratton; Directors, Messrs. R. Hall, C. Henderson, I. Dormer, J. McWilliams and M. Halpin.

Peterborough Rifle Association.—A large meeting of this association was held a few evenings ago at the Huffman House. The general business of the association was discussed, and a conclusion arrived at to improve as much as possible the welfare of the association by procuring new targets, and making arrangements for practice at least one day a week during the winter.

An Ill Should Be.—The merchants and manufacturers of Listowell have entered into an agreement to collect their accounts at least every six months, and to charge ten per cent. on those that are over due. They have also decided to discontinue the habit of giving presents to customers when accounts are settled. This example might be followed with profit everywhere.

Recent Rains.—The late rains have been of much benefit to the country. We in the town are prone to complain of the unpleasantries of wet weather, but while we do so we are not often at even to ponder on the additional relations which a prosperous country bears to a busy town, and that while a sunshine is delightful for pleasure purposes, it cannot alone give the growth upon which the happiness of life so much depends.

The Anti-Dunkinites of Ashburnham have placed the necessary papers in the hands of the Clerk of the village for the submission of the Dunkin Act. This is strangely inconsistent, but there are some people who go in for anything to win. The strongest part still is that all who have signed the requisition are afraid that the by-law will pass. It will be submitted, we understand, as soon as the Clerk can arrange the necessary notices.

To High School Candidates.—The examination at the close of the autumn term are fast approaching. The examination for admission will be held on the 11th and 12th December beginning at 9 a.m.; and the intermediate examinations will commence on the 17th of December, and continue for the four following days. Blank forms to be filled up by intending candidates for admission to the High School may be had by applying to the Head Master or Inspector of the Public Schools.

The Dunkin Bill.—As will be seen in another column, a convention will be held to-morrow to make arrangements for submitting the Dunkin Bill in the county at the earliest possible opportunity. All who take an interest in the movement should endeavor to be present as the business to be transacted will be important. A large attendance from all parts of the county will materially lessen the labors attendant on procuring the necessary petitions and requisitions, and might expedite the work very much.

Woman's Paradise.—There is a new sect in Russia called the "Purifiers," belonging to the Greek Church. Their leading doctrines are that all are to marry on coming of age, that the husband must be subordinate to the wife and recognize her as the head of the family, and that once a week he must confess his sins to his wife. It is time the Dominion Government was taking steps to prevent young ladies from emigrating to that earthly paradise, as we are sure they will not consent to bow in submission to the "lords of creation," in Canada, while their sisters in Russia enjoy such privileges.

We have before us a specimen copy of the Golden Hours for the Young. It is a non-denominational Sabbath School paper, and much more suitable for Canadian use than the American or English publications of a similar character. The reading matter is varied and well chosen. It is printed on fine paper, in clear type, with beautiful and appropriate illustrations. The terms are: 4 copies for one year, $1.00; 10 copies, $2.00; 20 copies, $3.00; 30 copies, $4.50; 100 copies for 1 year, $15.00. For further particulars, or specimen copies, address C. Blackett Robinson, Publisher, 5 Jordan street, Toronto.

Auction Sales.—Haggart Bros. will sell by public auction, on Tuesday the 27th of November, on the premises, the entire farm stock and implements belonging to Mr. P. Leahy. Sale at 12 o'clock, and to be positively without reserve, as Mr. Leahy is giving up farming.

Haggart Bros. will sell by auction, at their rooms, north of the arcade, Opera House Block, on Thursday, the 22nd of November, that valuable farm belonging to Mrs. Bell, and being composed of the west half of lot No. 7, in the 1st concession of Douro, containing 100 acres Sale at 2 o'clock. Terms easy.

A New Coat.—A new coat is always a desirable thing, but no time more desirable than as winter sets in. Our neighbor has been getting a new one. It took several men to fit it on, and when on, we are told, it will not be taken off for two or three years; therefore this neighbor must ever be in his new coat—although two coats are spoken of we can see only one. A new feature in this clothing line is that the designer used the extract rather than the fibre of the material. Notwithstanding it is a perfect fit, looks reasonably well, and if it but wears as well as the last one, the Iron Bridge will be nothing the worse for its new coat of paint.

There is not a week more to lose if all necessary steps are to be taken to have the Dunkin Bill adopted and in operation in time to prevent reissue of liquor licenses for another year in the county. It is obviously requisite that all sections of the county act in concert. A convention to organize and proceed to immediate action is proposed to be held in the Good Templars' Hall, town of Peterborough, on Friday, the 16th inst., at 1 p.m. All ministers of the gospel, two members of every religious congregation or society, and two members of every temperance division, lodge or club, are especially requested to attend and engage in the proceedings.

Several Anti-Dunkin papers have evinced considerable concern on account of a streamer being out in this town during the voting on the Dunkin By-law. It bore the words: "For whom shall you vote, Christ or Satan? Vote yea for Christ." At this they cry out "Blasphemy!" Now while we do not pretend to defend this, or any other cause of offence by over-zealous Dunkinites, we cannot help but remark upon the great consideration these Anti-Dunkinites have for the name of Satan. It was rather too hard to make the Patron Saint of the Licensed Victuallers the subject of so disadvantageous a comparison. Yet such contrast are made mentally every day, and for man's good, too.

POLICE COURT.

The case against Charles Stapleton, Bailiff, an Auctioneer, for assaulting the assistant constable, was again brought up on Thursday last and judgment was deferred until the 12th, when the case was dismissed, each party to pay their own costs.

VAGRANCY.—The notorious old "vag." Ann Brennan made her appearance again on Wednesday last, and was sent up for one month at hard labor.

INJURY TO PROPERTY.—Bridget Sheehan charged Edward Phipps with breaking a pane of glass in defendants house. Judgment—$2.25 damages. Fined $1.00 and costs $2.50; which was paid.

SURETIES TO KEEP THE PEACE.—Hannah Phipps charged Edward Phipps, her husband, with threatening to do her bodily harm. He was required to find sureties to keep the peace, and in default was committed to jail.

POINTING A PISTOL.—On Friday the 16th George Forsyth was fined $20.00 and costs, for pointing a pistol and making a threat towards Mary Ann Bell.

Sensible Advice.—You are asked every day through the columns of newspapers and by your Druggist to use something for your Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint that you know nothing about you get discouraged spending money with but little success. Now to give you satisfactory proof that GREEN'S AUGUSTA FLOWER will cure you of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint with all its effects, such as sour stomach, Sick Headache, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heart-burn, Waterbrash, Fullness at the pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated tongue, Indigestion, swimming of the head, low spirits &c., we ask you to go to J. D. Tully Druggist and get a Sample Bottle of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

THE vote in the Southern group of townships in Lanark county in favour of granting $75,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, is not to be wondered at. It is to be expected that the south would vote for the Perth route as rapidly as the northern townships, decided in favour of aiding the line by way of Carleton Place. Yet there is a point gained in favour of the southern route, by the vote South Sherbrooke, the southern part of which is included in both groups, and which portion declared for the Perth route by a vote of 69 to 1. It is a straw merely, but it shows how the wind sets in that locality.

PORT HOPE.

LOW WATER.—The water of Lake Ontario is lower at present than it has been for several years. From Aug. 1 to Nov. 1 of last year the water in our harbor fell 20 inches, and during the present summer to the 1st of this month it has fallen 12 inches, making the Lake 40 inches lower than it was on the 1st of August last year. Consequently, most of the harbors on Lake Ontario are dangerous for vessels entering in bad weather and at a heavy sea.

MANVERS PLOUGHING MATCH.—The following are the names of the winners of prizes at the ploughing match held on the farm of J. Holmes, Esq., in the Township of Manvers on Wednesday, 31st ult.:—First class, James Simcox, 1st, $7; Matthew Dewell, 2nd, $5; Robert Gillis, 3rd, $3. Second class, John Brown, plough, value $15; James McIndoo, cash $8; John Rowe, set whipple trees, value $3. Third Class, Samuel Dysell, $7; Thomas Rowe, $5.—Times.

PETERBOROUGH.

(From Herald of Progress, Hamilton.)

The contest in behalf of the Dunkin Act which has been carried on in the town of Peterborough for some weeks past, culminated on Wednesday last. The voting commenced on Monday morning, continued three days. At the final close of the poll on Wednesday evening it was found that a majority of one hundred and ten had been secured in favor of the law, notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of the liquor men. It is so seldom a town of the size of Peterborough is found giving a majority in favor of the law, that this victory must be taken as a most gratifying evidence of an advancing sentiment in favor of that prohibition for which our Premier has been good enough to tell us repeatedly the country is not ready. It is but a couple of weeks since the neighboring towns of Cobourg and Port Hope gave large majorities against the Act, and the influence of these adverse victories was expected to demoliah whatever chance the Dunkinites had of success. The Idea was, however a fallacy and Peterborough asserts her independence of extraneous influence in a matter concerning the prosperity of her people. The next step now will be to have the Act submitted to vote in the county, for which arrangements are being made. The contest will be a hard one, but the temperance people feel confident of ultimate success.

THE Pope is ill. The Pope is not ill. The Pope has died. The Pope has not died. Such is the contradictory nature of the intelligence from Rome.

THE Cookstown Advocate truly says: "The success of the Dunkin Act in Peterborough was the effect of well organized canvassing committees, who made it their duty to ascertain the views of the electors on this question.

THE Montreal Gazette, edited by our friend Tom White, is in high jubilee over Mr. Laurier's defeat. Tom seems to have sold himself, body and soul, to the influence which chiefly caused Mr. Laurier's defeat. But with all his subserviency, he does not manage to get elected for anywhere himself.—London Advertiser

THE Globe, speaking of Mr. Laurier's defeat, neatly alludes to a gentleman who is rapidly acquiring a right to the soubriquet of "the most defeated man in Canada." Says that journal: "There, too, was Mr. Thomas White, junior, who, we are told, 'did his share in Drummond.' We believe it, for the result is one to which we have become accustomed when Mr. Thomas White junior, puts forth a greater effort than ordinary, Drummond having given Mr. Laurier an increased majority."

OF the late Drummond and Arthabaska election the Barrie Gazette says:—"The best proof that the contest was one of race is given in the increase of the vote in Mr. Laurier's favor in English-speaking Drummond, though Conservative, the majority against him being dependent entirely on the turning from him of the French of Arthabaska. Yet the very patriotic and boldly-British journals of Conservatism in Ontario, go into insane rejoicings over this success of French ignorance and superstition over English intelligence. Some of the ultra-British papers, to whom a Frenchman, and particularly a French Roman Catholic, is especially obnoxious, actually go so far as to hoist the British flag over the column wherein is heralded this triumph of French fanaticism and Roman Catholic bigotry among those benighted French."

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—Dr. May informs the Globe that he has supplied Mr. Craig, Secretary of the Provincial Agricultural Association, with a large number of paper bags, to be filled with samples of grain to be exhibited at the Paris Exposition. Several bags will be sent to the President or Secretary of every Agricultural Association in Ontario. These bags, as they are to be returned filled to the Hon. the Minister of Agricultural at Ottawa, will pass free by post. It is to hoped that the officers of the various societies will make an effort to send good samples of cereals without delay. This exhibit is one of great importance to Canadian farmers, and it is most desirable that they should assist in making it a success.

NO ENGLISH NEED APPLY.—Under this head the Quebec Chronicle says:—"We know very well before that we were barely tolerated in the province, but it certainly demands a considerable amount of effrontery to tell us that an English company or Englishmen are to be regarded as foreigners or strangers in a British colony. Le Courrier de Canada nevertheless does not hesitate to do so last evening in the following language:—'If we are to credit a rumor circulated by the English papers, an English company is anxious to lease the railway from Montreal to Ottawa. We trust that the Local Government will never consent to hand over to strangers a pre-eminently Canadian road. The Province of Quebec built this road; let Canada a profit by it, as it is the only railway upon which French Canadians can obtain good situations. We are confident that the Local Government will do justice to the majority of our population in this matter.' An open confession is good for the soul. In this instance, it not only boldly expresses in words the existence of a previously well known feeling of contemptuousness towards the British element; but frankly informs us that the special object of the North Shore Railway is to provide good situations for one particular and favored race in the community. This is hard, but honest, and it is therefore well to know it."

AN EDITORIAL BRUTUS.—An editor out west indulges in the following talk to his subscribers and patrons. The famous speech of Brutus, on the death of Cæsar, as rendered by Shakespeare, is made to do service in this unmeaning travesty:—"Hear us for our debts, and get ready that you may pay; trust us, we have need, as you have long been trusted; acknowledge your indebtedness and dive into your pockets, that you may promptly fork over. If there be any among you—any single patron—that don't owe us anything, then to him we say: Step aside, consider yourself a gentleman. If the rest wish to know why we dun them this is our answer: Not that we care about ourselves, but our creditors do. Would you rather that we went to jail and you go free, than that you pay your debts and keep us moving? As we agreed, we have worked for you; as we contracted, we have furnished the paper to you; but as you don't pay, we dun you. Here are agreements for job work, contracts for subscription, promises for long credit, and dams for deferred payment. Who is there so green that he don't take a paper? If any, he need not speak, for we don't mean him. Who is there so green that he don't advertise? If any, let him slide, he ain't the chap either. Who is there so mean that he don' pay the printers? If any; let him speak, for he is the man we're after.

The Quebec Mercury regards the defeat of M. Laurier as something very much more serious than the mere defeat of a prominent man of one of the political parties. It says:—

"The defeat of Mr. Laurier is a matter of serious reflection to all who take an interest in Provincial politics. Allowing for the personal popularity of his opponent, the defeat is still a sign of the times. It is a proof that this Province is getting not only more sectional but more sectarian, and that the implacibility which flung back the olive-branch extended by Mr. Laurier in his now famous lecture is not confined to political chiefs, but extended itself through the electoral body. Such a state of things is likely, at the very least to end in a total incompatibility between this and the sister Province to the west. If old Lower Canada and her national established and endowed Church is to form a unity, and with the assent of the Saxon minority of this Province, or at least a very large portion of them, make terms and conditions with the divided majority of the Confederation, it is very obvious that such another deadlock as produced Federation is about to be the presult of the present system of our new Dominion.

* * * * * * *

"The austere and unforgiving temper displayed in the case of Mr. Laurier is the augury of evil for the Bleu even more than for the Rouge party. The conduct of the former is likely to result in again reducing politics to a conflict of nationality, even more strongly marked and extending over a wider area than ever did in days of yore, and rendered more rancorous by the additional ingredient of religious discord. Can it be expected that this Province will be suffered to rule over her six sisters and the North West Territory of Canada? An attempt was made to make Manitoba a second Lower Canada. It failed, and merely stained the record of the colony by one barbarous and shocking murder, under colour of public authority, and several equally shameful acts committed by way of revenge. Are the men who are detarmed to make the politics of this Province a mere appeal to the prejudices of the peasantry, prepared for the inevitable result? What is now an internal will shortly become a more extended struggle, and race against race, and creed against creed, will become the last and worst state of Her Majesty's Canadian Dominion."

AUTUMN LEAVES.

BY C. A. H.

'Tis autumn, once again to Earth the scarred and brown leaves fall,
The golden summer days are past, and passed beyond recall:
And time again is giving, through the leaves last lingering sigh,
The oft rejected warning that its fragile things must die.

Hail Heaven's kindest messengers of wisdom, love and truth!
In ages sad, dear autumn or in spring's unclouded youth,
We turn from Earth's harsh precepts to thy still persuasive voice;
We listen to thy counsel, and obeying we rejoice.

Autumnal leaves, thy lessons are with deeper meaning fraught
Than Earth's vain glories realists have ever known or taught;
The truthful earnest spirit 'tis the hidden boon receives,
And bestows a grateful blessing upon autumn's dying leaves.

Among life's hidden pitfalls we force our frantic way,
Our proud hearts blindly bowing to the world's ambitious sway;
But when the fluttering emblems of this Earth's vain glory fall,
We feel their gentle influence, and attend the silent call.

The lowliest shrub that flourish, and the tall majestic tree
Alike lay down their glories, and obey death's stern decree;
As humble partners of the Fall, with resignation sweet,
They own God's even justice, and His will in Death they meet.

Farewell sweet leaves the biting frosts full soon will thee consign,
To graves awaiting, of snow-wreaths, but why do I repine?
There are weary souls would covit a resting place so deep
After all the ills of living, they are blessed who fall asleep.

Why weep I? for as morning drives away the weary night,
And the genial, joyful spring-time follows winter's chilling blight;
Even so the spring-time cometh when God shall thee recreate,
And thy usefulness bring vigor, and new beauty to thy state.

READY-MADE CLOTHING!

FROM THE FIRST MANUFACTURERS.

Their Goods are attractive and are well bought, and range from the cheapest that are of any value to lines more expensive than are generally found except in the leading houses in large cities.

Their Trimmings are elegant and excellent in quality, and the workmen we have engaged are the best that can be employed.

Mr. MADISON will endeavor to produce garments superior to any he has ever turned out in Peterboro, and with superior facilities hopes to be able to please those who have hitherto found it difficult to get garments to suit them in town.

Mr. Madison assisted by Mr. Wm. Green, will be glad to show gentlemen their goods and hopes to make prices and to offer other inducements to tempt those who favor them with a call to leave their orders

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.

Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RHEUMUM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TICODLOREEX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive, and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.

A Triple Crown for Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.

"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS"

The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine were pronounced by E. H. Knight, C. W. Greyvoy, Fred Paget and L. D. F. Poore, Centennial Judges of Sewing Machines at Philadelphia in 1876, to be the best Sewing Machine in the market. Not only the Centennial Commissioners pronounce the W & W. the best Sewing Machine but also Mrs. Jas. Stephenson, of Asphodel, Mrs. S. W. Johnson, Wm. McVillagh, J. G. Heaton H. Terrace, Mrs. Dr. Kincaid, Mrs. W. Potter sen. Jr., of Peterboro'; Mrs. Wm. Dunsen and Mrs. J. Smith of Ashburnham, and hundreds of others too numerous to mention, pronounce it the best Sewing Machine, and recommend all intending purchasers to call and try it, especially W & W. It is a perfect little beauty.

CAUTION.

I hereby caution all those having the W & W Sewing Machine not to allow any other agent or person interested in any other Sewing Machine to have anything to do with the W & W, as though only a great many agents who pretend to be well repair all classes of Sewing Machines, they have little or no knowledge of the W & W.

But I would recommend those having the W & W Sewing Machine to call on the proper and only authorized Agent at Peterboro, who is competent to repair, if necessary, the W & W Sewing Machines promptly. I am also willing to give instructions free of expense to all W & W customers of the Agency, on all classes of goods from 1 set on back titled. Agents to guard also hereon on reasonable terms. All persons interested in the W & W will be benefited and promptly understand the matter.

Please send my late agent on the W & W Sewing Machines promptly. I am also willing to give instructions free of expense to all W & W customers of the Agency, on all classes of goods from 1 set on back titled. Agents to guard also hereon on reasonable terms. All persons interested in the W & W will be benefited and promptly understand the matter.

"WHAT OF THAT"

"Tired?" Well, what of that? Didst fancy life was spent on beds of ease, Pluttering like rose leaves scattered by the breeze? Come, rouse thee! work while it is called to-day! Coward, arise! go forth upon thy way!

"Lonely?" And what of that? Some must be lonely; 'tis not given to all To feel a heart responsive else and dull, To blend another life into its own, Work may be done in loneliness. Work on!

"Dark?" Well, and what of that? Didst fondly dream the sun would never set? Dost fear to lose thy way? Then courage yet! Learn thou to walk by faith and not by sight; Thy steps will guided be, and all be right.

"Hard?" Well, what of that? Didst fancy life one summer holiday, With lessons none to learn, and naught but play? Go, get thee to thy task! Conquer or die! It must be learned! Learn it, then, patiently.

"No help?" Nay, 'tis not so! Though human help be far, thy God is nigh. Who feeds the ravens, hears His children's cry; He's near thee, whereso'er thy footsteps roam, And He will guide thee, light thee, help thee home.

St. Andrew's Benevolent Society.

Annual Meeting—Treasurer's Financial Statement—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the St. Andrew's Society was held on Wednesday evening last, November 14, in Bradburn's Hall.

The President, William Hamilton, Esq., occupied the chair. The meeting was unusually well attended by Scotchmen. The minutes of the last committee meeting having been read and approved, the President called upon the Treasurer, J. R. Ormond, to read his for the year. The report showed the Society to be in a prosperous condition, and that a balance of $128.92 remained in the bank to the credit of the Society to be carried forward for the work of another year. This announcement was a pleasant surprise to the members, as most of those present, except the officers had come to the meeting under the impression that the funds had become very low, owing to the liberality of the Charitable Committee during the year.

The following is an abstract of the receipts and expenditures for the year:

RECEIPTS

Cash on hand at beginning of year	$ 28 39
Receipts during the year	101 13
Total cash	$129 52

EXPENDITURES

Expended on charities, current expenses &c.	$ 70 60
Balance in bank	138 92
Total	$199 52

The President appointed an audit Committee to examine the Treasurer's books and vouchers.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:—

President—James Millar, Esq., Reeve of Otonabee.

First Vice-President—C. Cameron.

Second Vice-President—D. Haggart.

Third Vice-President—Robert Robertson.

Treasurer—J. R. Ormond, (re-elected.)

Secretary—Wm. Menzies, (re-elected.)

Charitable Committee—Messrs. John Elder, W. Cummings, John Patterson, James Hope and John Swanson.

A change was made in the number of members on this Committee from thirteen to five.

On motion Mr. John Armour was appointed to collect the annual subscription from such of the members as were unable to attend the meeting or call upon the Secretary.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

Messrs. John Elder, D. Haggart, Chas. Cameron and John Swanson were appointed a Committee to make arrangements for the proper celebration of St. Andrew's Day. A committee was appointed to wait on the Rev. Alexander Bell for the purpose of requesting him to preach the customary annual sermon on behalf of the Society.

After a vote of thanks to the retiring President, the meeting adjourned.

A special meeting of the Society will take place on Wednesday next, 21st instant, at the same place, for the transaction of business connected with the celebration of St. Andrew's Day.—Review.

LAKEFIELD.

From the News.

MR. THOMAS SAURET is getting his new skating rink ready.

REEVE AND COUNCILLORS.—Dame Rumor mentions Messrs. John Hall, R. C. Strickland, John Dinwoodie, T. J. Nelson and J. G. Galvin, as probable candidates for the Village Reeveship for the year 1878, but as we have nothing definite as yet, in regard to any of them, we leave the matter for future discussion.

J. E. BELCHER, the corporation Engineer, examined the Lakefield swamp drainage on Tuesday last, and expressed his approval of the workmanship, and also his admiration of the manner in which the water is being carried off. So ends this swamp drama.

A POACHER CAUGHT AT LAST.—In May last, Mr. Geo. Cochrane, Fishery Inspector of this place, fined one Joseph Perrin of Fenelon Falls $10.00 and gave him 30 days in which to pay the amount. Perrin neglected or refused to pay the fine and he evaded the constable until the 20th of last month when he was caught by Mr. Kelley of Fenelon Falls and lodged in Lindsay jail for the above mentioned term or until he paid the fined of $10 and $5.50. costs.

ON Sunday 4th inst., a very interesting service took place in St. George's Church Apsley. An organ was lent for the occasion, one of I. A. Livingstone's of Toronto. The songs of the Church were well rendered by the choir, the Misses. Burleigh, Harding, and Anderson, and Messrs. Giles and Cam. Mrs. Fitzgerald very kindly and efficiently acted as organist. At the celebration of Holy Communion at the close of morning prayer, a handsome and valuable service of plate was used for the first time,—the gift of a gentleman who does not wish his name to appear, "Lest such they left hand know what thy right hand doeth." yes we are always glad to acknowledge such acts of Christian worthiness. A fine new communion table was also used, the gift of Mr. George Keeling of Apsley and Stanhope. The morning prayer there was a full congregation, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Bleasdell, of Lakefield, from those words of the Psalmist, "Oh that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways." The reverend gentleman spoke of those to arrange for building a church in that part of the mission, which all seemed to think is much wanted.

MILLBROOK.

FIRE AT THE STATION.—On Monday morning last, about five o'clock, a fire broke out in a small frame building, occupied by Mr. Martin, who lately ran the "Martin" Hotel, at the Station. We understand Martin was living alone and, it is generally believed that he perished in the flames, as he has not been seen since. It having been stated that he had purchased a ticket for Port Hope, on that evening, Mr. George Edwards, Ticket Agent, has been interviewed, and he states that he did not sell a ticket to Mr. Martin. Again, other parties say that they saw him near home about seven o'clock.—After the last train passed through. This would lead to confirm the supposition that the unfortunate man has perished. —Messenger.

POLITICAL.—The Conservatives are to decide this week who is to be the future standard-bearer. It is understood that the choice lies between Col. Williams and Mr. W. H. Sowden, Warden of the united counties.

HOUSE-BREAKING AND CLEVER CAPTURE.—Mr. Thos. Ellis, who lives near the Summit in this township, had an outhouse broken into and a tub of butter taken away last week. Word was immediately sent to Mr. Ellis's son, who is a Port Hope constable, detailing the circumstances and giving a description of some peculiar marks upon the tub. He at once started around the butter dealers and was fortunate enough to find in one establishment two persons disposing of the tub in question, one of whom was apprehended on the spot, but the other managed to get away.

"LANGUISHING TRADE."—Your correspondent recently paid a visit to the Cobourg Woolen Factory through which he was shown by the courteous manager, and from whom he learned that their trade was "languishing" somewhat after the following fashion—substituting a 60 H. P., low pressure engine for a smaller one in addition to a water power of equal capacity—working extra time—order on hand from one Montreal house for 1,400 pieces of 25 yds., each. —Cor. Lindsay Post.

CAMPBELLFORD.

From the Herald.

RETROGRESSIVE.—The village of Blairton is receding and beginning to have the appearance of a deserted locality. When the mines were in operation, a few years ago, there was quite an influx of people, it was prosperous and the thriving little place presented a busy spectacle. With the suspension of work in the mines, the miners were obliged to seek other places for employment. Family after family left, and gradually it became depopulated. Once it had a post office and issued money orders: now both have been cancelled.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Mr. W. Clark was very seriously injured by a fall from a buggy on Friday night last. When coming down Armour's Hill, on the Hastings road, on his way to this village, the horse he was driving started to run, and coming to a "jog" in the road, turned suddenly and threw Mr. Clark out, the fall being so great as to paralyze one side of his body. Little hopes for his recovery were held until two days since, when indications of improvement were noticed; and we are glad to say that the paralysis is vanishing and feeling is again being restored. Mr. Clark has been very unfortunate, lately, having had a son taken away by death, three or four weeks ago, and his dwelling and contents consumed by fire only a few days since.

BOSCAWEGON.

(From the Independent.)

MISSING.—We last week recorded the absence of Mr. Coutts, the tailor, of this village, and stated that fears were entertained for his safety. On Sunday week he started in a canoe to visit Mr. Gordon, and has not since been seen or heard of. Search was made but with no result until Tuesday, when the canoe in which he had started was found bottom upwards in Tait's bay, on the north side of Pigeon Lake, in Harvey. Some of the articles he took with him such as a sheepskin and a small tin pail containing potatoes, were still in the bow of the canoe. Search has been made for the body, but as yet without success, though no doubt is now entertained of his sad fate. He was quite unskilled in the management of canoes, and the weather equally. Mr. Coutts was an industrious and sober citizen, and he was respected by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and five very young children, who are totally unprovided for, and who have no relatives in this country. The friends of both Mr. and Mrs. Coutts reside in Scotland, from whence the family arrived only a few years since.

THE boot makers wish to place a duty of $1 on every pair of boots and shoes brought into this village from either Lindsay or Peterborough, or elsewhere, as they say the consider they cannot at present earn a fair profit, but if the price was raised a dollar a pair they could live very comfortably.

THE trappers and hunters are pretty well all in and have made a good haul so far as quantity is concerned, but the quality is not first-rate, which is said to be owing to the mild fall. Our well known and much respected friend Mr. Walsh, was the only buyer. Mr. A. Pillar was here, it is true, but he buys nothing but dear skins, of which there are more than usual. I noticed you last week that Hamilton Boyce made the largest hunt of the season. He reports that three weeks since there was six inches of snow spotted his hunting-grounds, which were on about the head waters of the Petquaw.

LINDSAY.

From the Post.

A MISER AND IMPOSTOR.—On Friday night last an old man upwards of 70 years of age, badly clad, and weakened by cold and want of proper nourishment, applied at the residence of Mayor Poole for a night's lodging, telling at the same time a sorrowful tale of destitution. His Worship being absent the man left the house and spent the night in a stable. The Mayor the following morning had him brought before the Police Magistrate and the man, who gave his name as Kendrick was committed to gaol as a vagrant, on his own testimony that he had no ostensible means of support. While undergoing the usual examination at the gaol the man resisted as vigorously as his strength would allow, the efforts of the officers to take from his person two small bags found around his waist attached to a cord from around his neck. After assuring him that whatever they contained would be perfectly safe, he assented to their removal and they were found to contain in the one twenty sovereigns and in the other thirty-seven dollars and ten cents in silver. He had also in his possession a quit claim deed of a farm in Snowden, a memorandum of a loan he had out at interest, amounting to $135.56, other papers, and a large bowie knife. He stated to Chief Constable Smart, that he had been eight years in this country, having been driven from a comfortable home in Ireland by the extravance of an elder brother. An order was given for his release from custody yesterday with a warning to leave town at once.

AN EXCITING RAILWAY WAR.—FIGHTING ON THE SCUGOG—THOS. FEE VS. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY—THE RIOT ACT READ.—"BLOODY" ENCOUNTER.—The announcement that a fierce and probably protracted campaign had been opened on the Scugog and the intense excitement caused by the commencement of hostilities last Tuesday night led the War Correspondent of the Post to take up an advantageous position near the Locks from which he could easily perceive and discribe the conflict between Mr. Thos. Fee and the Midland Railway authorities, and the manœuvres of the contending armies.

THE ORIGIOS OF THE "WAR"

is veiled in obscurity, like all other great questions It appears, however, that the Midland Railway have for several years used a piece of ground of about half an acre between the river, Lindsay-st., and Queen-st., as a freight-yard, and have a track through it, on which their freight cars are switched off for unloading. This lot is claimed by Mr. Lang, who formerly owned all the mill property at this place, and who is said to have recently conveyed his right or title to Mr. Thos. Fee. The latter proposed to erect thereon a large steam grist mill, but had first to get possession, and he resolved to do this forcibly and compel the railway authorities to proceed to law to eject him and get damages.

A NIGHT ATTACK.

Gathering a strong detachment of men Fee Effendi proceeded Tuesday evening and hastily constructed a strong fence on the property, parallel to the track, and thereby stopping the unloading of the freight cars. The gateway was also strongly nailed up and barricaded. An attempt was made by the Midland Railway forces, under command of Mr. Burton, the Station Agent to drive off the enemy, and a locomotive and a couple of cars were brought into requisition to demolish the fence. Mr. Fee drew his revolver, however, and threatened to shoot; Mr. Lang flourished another weapon of the same kind in

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 22, 1877.

THOSE PESKY PREACHERS.

Revenge is not a noble feeling, nor is resentment an attribute of the brave. We had hoped that any excitement which might have been raised by the Dunkin Act contest had by this time cooled down, and hoped that the social atmosphere would only have been cleared by the breeze. It would seem, however, that evil passions lurk in the bosoms of certain Anti-Dunkin advocates, and that they were stirred to such an extent that the undulations of the dark pool have not yet subsided. It is plain that the Review cannot take a defeat with any degree of philosophical equanimity. This was witnessed in the case of the water-works by-law, after the voting down of which it displayed the anger of its management at being on the losing side. Even up to last week it has continued to publish extracts referring to water supply, drainage, and typhoid fever, calculated to be apologetic of its course, thus showing how the wound rankles, and at the same time keeping the sore spot irritated. The same spirit is now shown in connection with the late Dunkin vote. Not content with gross misrepresentation of the acts of those opposed to it during the campaign this implacable journal pursues the subject with somewhat of the energy that holds the bloodthirsty savage on the trail of a victim of his hate or vengeance. The clergy of the town seem to have earned the severest condemnation of the Review, because they in obedience to their god-given conscience, helped to defeat the cause it upheld. Mr. Willoughby, one of the Methodist ministers, appears to be its particular bete-noir, and last week it attends to what it calls "the religious fervor and hysteria which is an outgrowth of the teachings of some of the clergy of this denomination." These words are used in an introduction to a very poor report of a sermon preached by Mr. Bray, who is ready to find all the fault he can with that body. And faultfinding in in that direction is sweet to the Review management in its present temper. We have no particular fault to find with Mr Bray's remarks on "religious hysteria" as he explained the term; but we do think the Review has gone out of its way in making its very strained connection between these remarks and the Dunkin agitation in this town, in order to attack a much respected Methodist minister.

Even in introducing a letter of explanation by Mr. Bray to the Kingston Whig, the Review is offensive in its reference to "the itinerant temperance apostles of the Dunkin Act and Blue Ribbon movement of Peterborough." These are pretty words to come from one who takes on him to rebuke the language of others for its alleged coarseness. But when they refer to a clause in Mr. Bray's letter in which he adopts, not condemns, temperance workers the spirit that prompts them is evident. Mr. Bray distinctly says, "My words simply conveyed a warning as to the conduct of the movement." The Rine, or ribbon movement is meant. Mr. Bray gives also the following as his word-for-word utterance in speaking to young men on "the culture of the people:—

"You can help to reform the drunkard and the thief. Set your hands to the work. Try and give the people social culture. Only, gentlemen, don't fall into what seems to be a most grievous folly. If you reclaim a thief to honesty, don't set him up in a few days as a popular expositor of the work of integrity. Wait till he has given proof of the change, till he has lived and worked the old evil out of him; then put him up to speak for the work of self culture. But even then, tell him not to glory in his past folly. The thing is not seemly. If you recover a drunkard give God thanks you have done a great work. But teach the man to be ashamed of his past sin and don't put him up in a few days as an apostle of temperance to boast of what he has been, and probably, as it has happened to go back in a few days, or less, to the old state. I rejoice in any and every movement that has for its object it's social culture of the people, but I like to see good work done with good taste."

For such admonition the members of the Blue Ribbon Club should be thankful, but the Review's assumption that they have already been guilty of what they are here warned against is, to say the least of it, impudent.

The most cowardly display, however, of the Review's hatred of the clergy (Methodist) is contained in what purports to be a letter in reference to the meeting in Bradburn's Hall on Monday evening of last week. The article is signed "Temperance Mechanic"; but it bears pretty plain marks of having been the production of a newspaper man. The "Temperance Mechanic" at least is able to give a pretty full quoted report of a part of the address of Rev. Mr. Willoughby, who is accused of "pharisaical prescription," "religious [illegible]," "Methodistical formula." The Methodist Church comes in for more disapproval in this bogus Mechanic's bogus letter, which is very appropriately headed "Contemptible Presumption," for this paper aptly describes the character of its contents. All this tirade has been occasioned by Mr. Willoughby's remarks in support of the declaration that the respectable hotels are the most dangerous. He held that our young men acquire the drinking habit, not at the low groggeries, but at what are called the respectable houses where liquor is sold. No genuine "Temperance Mechanic" will question the truth of this, and even the counterfeit one will scarce presume to deny it. But the height of Mr. Willoughby's offending was that in pointing his application he made mention of the Huffman House, as classed the most respectable in town. It may be that all would have been well had the speaker delivered himself in general terms; but though particular instancing did not weaken, but rather strengthened his point in the minds of his hearers, he is made the object of a savage onslaught because he so finished his argument. He did not, be it remembered, allude to the Huffman House as being particularly bad, nor as being any more dangerous than other first-class hotels with bar-rooms attached. It is not complained that what he said in this regard is true; but the absurd accusation is made that he threw a slight on the proprietor of the house. So far from specially alluded to with all due respect, and his house spoken of as the most respectable in town. If this be casting a slight on the man, then it must be because of his public position, and not of his private character, against which nothing was said. If this be so, and Mr. Huffman feel so keenly about it as his champion in the Review pretends to feel for him, then the best advice we can offer him is to follow the example of the landlord of the Calsse House, and get out of the stigmatised trade in the beverages that curse society by devastating the domestic hearth and cheating our churches. No wonder our matrons and our ministers cry out against the accursed drink, and try their best to stay its general consumption.

FOOLISH.

The Anti-Dunkinites in Ashburnham, and Lakefield or at least some of them, are determined to force a vote on the Dunkin By-law, although another vote will be taken on the By-law in the County in a few days after. The reason assigned for this course is childish in the extreme. Subsection 2 of Section 8 of the Temperance Act of 1864 (or Dunkin Act) reads as follows:—

(2.) If at the time of the coming into force of any County By-law, passed under authority and for enforcement of this Act, there is in force within any municipality forming part of such county, any other by-law passed under authority and for enforcement of this Act, the operation of such mentioned by-law shall be and remain suspended for so long as the county by-law continues in force,—but shall revive, in default of express repeal thereof, should the county by-law be repealed.

It is therefore plain that the County By-Law will completely over-ride any Township or Village by law, so long as the County by law is unrepealed.

They claim that the defeat of the by-law would prevent the submission of another by-law for a year or more. This might be true of a Village By-law, but that it does not affect a County By-law, is evident from the section quoted. Besides, in other counties where by-laws have existed in small municipalities the vote was taken in those municipalities in connection with the County by-law. From this it will be seen that the action of Ashburnham and Lakefield at present does not affect the villages on the vote on the County By-law.

The Anti-Dunkinities are basing their hopes of making Ashburnham and Lakefield the grog shops for the town and county on the idea that if the present by-law shall be defeated no other by-law can be submitted for two years.

They evidently don't read the statute carefully. Section 9 says;—

9. No such by-law shall be repealed, within the full term of one year from the day of the communication thereof to the Collector of Inland Revenue.

By Section 9 it will be seen that if a by law should be adopted or approved by the people, such adopted or approved by-law "cannot be repealed" for one year, as above; but there is not one word about the time for submitting a by-law again in case of an adverse vote by the electors in a minor municipality. In fact the County Council could submit one at its next Session in January, if the members saw fit so to do. If a County Council pass such a by-law the Council can appeal it. If after passing a by-law it be submitted to, and approved of by the people, it cannot be repealed unless the repealing bylaw be submitted to the electors in the same way as the original by-law was; and if a "repealing" by law be submitted and not approved, no other repealing by-law can be submitted within the term of two full years. See section 13:—

(13.) A by-law so approved, or adopted, as the case may be, may be repealed by a by-law of the Municipal Council of the Municipality affected thereby; but such repealing by-laws shall be submitted for approval to the electors, in the manner and with the formalities prescribed by the foregoing subsections, and shall not take effect unless approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon; nor, if any such repealing by law (upon being submitted to the electors) is not approved shall any other repealing by law be submitted, for the like approval, within the full term of two years thereafter.

But if a by law be submitted, as is now the case in Ashburnham, and Lakefield and lost, there is no law against submitting another for approval, immediately, in the county.

It will therefore be seen that while no two "repealing" by laws can be submitted to the electors within two years—yet, if one by law, to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors and the issuing of licenses therefor, should be lost in a minor municipality, another by law for the same purpose can be submitted immediately in the county—if the County Council should so determine as a reading of the Act of 1864 will testify. Section 4 does not apply in this case of a County by law when a Township or Village by has been adopted or non-adopted.

DRUNK vs. SOBER.

From the Lindsay Post.

The Warder says it has often heard the remark that "Sir John drunk was a better man than Mr. Mackenzie sober." Probably it has; and Sir John at any rate has given our ears, numerous opportunities to institute the comparison—in other advantages the country can decide without difficulty.

EFFECT OF RESTRICTIONS ON TRADE.

The letter of "Freedom" in another column puts plainly and forcibly the [illegible] of that theoretical state-ment known as protection. A certain class of persons in the community taking as their text the selfish thought that legislation should be framed with special reference to their present benefit, try to find all things to an agreement with their greedy wish of theirs. The rights of others to a share in the considerations of legislators is apparently lost sight of, or determinedly thrust aside, in contemplation of the now and its enlargement. Selfishness is at all times a considerable power, and at no time perhaps is its influence wholly extinguished in the human mind; but when it is suffered to gain the mastery over the other functions of the soul then indeed is the creature in danger of being lost. It is probably a knowledge of the power of selfishness that has led the political party now in opposition in this Dominion to take up Protection as one of its tenets, with the hope that selfishness may be the power that will drag its disgraced leaders back to the ministerial seats. So we see these longing mortals, though formerly strong Free Traders, now acting as advocates of Protection, and in so doing appealing only to the most grossly selfish side of human nature. Every one of their specious arguments is addressed as to sordid minds, from which reason may be driven by sheer cupidity. Thus, instead of being, as statesmen should be, educators of the higher faculties of the people, we find Sir John Macdonald and his party assistants encouraging, as they have ever done, the baser feelings to those with whom they come in contact.

The carrying of the principle of Protection to its full results, the prevention of importations, would not only cut off the revenue from the tariff; it would also paralyze the export trade, which depends on an exchange of commodities with foreign countries. In so far as the principle of Protection is applied, just so far is the commercial exchange of the country injured, and the less encouragement given to the production in any line of more than is required for consumption in our own limited market. Indeed it is the Protection of the home market that our manufacturers want; not the extension of a foreign market. We see steps towards the supplying of such a demand in shipments lately made to Australia, and in the evidences of a good trade being opened in the near future with the West Indies, South America, &c., to say nothing of the constantly increasing exportations from Canada to the British Isles. The expanding, not the narrowing of the market will enable Canadian manufacturers to sell in such quantities as will enable them to exercise their facilities to the utmost, to secure much larger returns on their entire trade, to make a muckle of many mickles, and consequently to sell at such prices as will cause an ever-increasing demand for their work. We as Canadians want to trade with everyone, rather than to shut our doors against customers. The protective tariff of the United States does us no particular harm beyond a temporary interference with our market in that direction; but that in convenience will be more than counterbalanced by its leading us to turn to other peoples who are willing to deal with us in a more liberal spirit, who are as ready to take our commodities from us as to sell theirs to us, and with whom we can carry on a mutually advantageous trade to the increase of both our and there shipping and internal productiveness. The imposition of restrictive duties on imports would shut up all such avenues of commerce, while it would also be a tacit acknowledgment to the Americans that we are vitally affected by their trade policy, an idea that every patriotic Canadian should spurn with indignation.

REVIEW vs. METHODIST CHURCH.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR:—I have read with much pain a coarse and false letter—and equally coarse and better editorials in last weeks "Review" anent the action of the Rev. Mr Willoughby, in connection with the recent Dunkin Campaign. I was present at the Sunday meeting referred to in the letter of "Temperance Mechanic" (and by the way, let me say there is wonderful similarity between the editorial matter and that letter) Mr. Willoughby made no disparaging remark about Mr. Huffman. It is well known that the Huffman House is not only the best hotel in Town, but it is one of the best in the entire Province, and Mr. Willoughby admitted this and speaking of the evil resulting from the bar room said, that these whom in the best hotels such as the Huffman House, brought under their influence young men who would never had been lured by the enticements of the groggery—and that, commencing at the respectable, they ended their career at the lowest bar-room of the groggery. He simply denounced all bar-rooms, but claimed that the more respectable reached the most respectable and most cultured young men, and therein did the most evil. But why say more? Even the report of Mr. Willoughby's remarks as given by the "Review" show that he cast no reflection on the proprietor, but simply designated a class of Hotels, such as the Huffman House—as he might have said—"The Queens" or the "Rossin". The distortion of meaning given to Mr. Willoughby's words, shews a Malice and want of Charity, with insolent insults to a Pastor and his congregation, wholly gratuitious, and out of keeping with pretience to fair and honorable conduct. We submit to the 'Review' that its many Methodist readers must be gratified at the manner in which they and their pastor are dealt with. But, sir, the paper has of late been so used to effect the private purposes and express the private feelings and passions of its proprietor that it is fast losing the share of influence it had. Let me remind the proprietor of the old saying:—

"Whom the Gods wish to destroy they first make mad."

Yours truly,
DECENCY.

The Spirit of Protectionism.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—A careful perusal of any of the speeches made and the articles written in favor of Protection must, I think, rouse in most thoughtful readers a keen sense of amusement at the wonderful perversions of sound reasoning displayed in them. Amusement, however, is apt to give place to sadness as one begins to discern the spirit of rampant selfishness which breaks through all their utterances. So rabid has this become that it has utterly broken through the thin disguise of party spirit, and emerged into the full light of day. Yet I have sufficient faith in human nature, even though very much deafned and defaced with the stains of self interest, to believe that many a man who now, from selfish reasons, swells the cry for Protection, would cease at once, could it be pointed out to him so clearly that he could not fail to spell that out—as on Trade are actually mutually various. The utterly selfish theory, that because a neighbouring nation tries to shut out our goods we should shut out its goods, is not only selfish, but thoroughly absurd. It is much of revenge and retaliation as to make it an eloquent political commentary on the "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" doctrine, which those who call themselves christians, unless unduly selfish reason be suspected to abuse and ridicule. We have only to carry out this Protection theory to its legitimate results to see "what garrit it in of." If it means anything at all, it means that Government ought to provide Protection by law to native industry; or in other words to compell all dwelling within its territory to purchase their supplies only from those of its subjects who are manufacturers. If the law is a good one, make it effective and punish with imprisonment, or death even, that treasonous individual who plots against the welfare of the state by transgressing it. The death penalty might be inexpedient, but it might be commuted into imprisonment for life with hard labor, and much convict labor utilized for the benefit of the community by employing the convicts as factory hands. Few protectionists will be prepared perhaps to go so far yet. They must surely see that if the principle is right it ought to be fully carried out. If men have a right to liberty in trade, then let them have it; if not, then take it absolutely from them for the good of all.

Yours, &c.,
FREEDOM.

"CONTEMPTIBLE PRESUMPTION."

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir:—I have been for a very long time a subscriber to the Peterborough Review and to a large extent, I have been satisfied with its morality. But, sir, it has not satisfied me by its course in reference to the recent Dunkin Campaign in this town. I take it that a newspaper to a large degree is the property of its supporters. It generally is in harmony with them in its leanings; and on the other hand, they are jealous for its reputation and merits. The "Review" in its earlier issues put the Anti-Dunkin arguments in the most plausible shape—in just the form which men who were not free from the use of liquor, wished their defence to be put—that is, so as to make it look as well as it was possible to put it. And though the case as put, had not the ring of truth, and, consequently led no intelligent man astray, it yet satisfied those who were not seeking for truth, but merely for a plausible defence of what they evidently were not satisfied was absolutely right. So long as the "Review" maintained this course I could say nothing more than that it was on the wrong side of a great moral question. But, sir, when the Dunkin By-law was carried, the exhibition of passion and anger—with the unfair, rude and cowardly assertions, made by it, confirmed me in my judgement, that a cause which it had been supporting was not one which tended to develop Christian Virtues.

I am not prepared to countenance a paper which will distort a man's statements—so as to charge him with assertions he never made. Nor do I think that in the present day, a man may in Canada, designate a well known, and beloved pastor of the largest congregation in Peterborough, as a Methodist fan-a-tic. Nor do I think it becomes the "Review" to sneer at a doctrine of the Methodist Church—as he does in his reference to "sudden and sensible conversions." Nor can the "Review" with impunity intimate that the religion of the congregation over which Mr. Willoughby presides, is such as to require peculiar attention—unless, indeed the "Review" does this with the evident intent of insulting the entire Methodist body. A grosser insult, and more wanton has never been offered, and as a Methodist I resent it; and I beg to tell the "Review" that if hereafter I waste no sympathy or patronage on it 'tis because it invited the result.

As a Methodist, I say to the "Review" and to its readers that no more popular or beloved pastor was ever in Peterboro' than the Rev. N. R. Willoughby, and if his religion, and his zeal have not led him to associate, and sympathize with the Anti-Dunkin party in this town, so much the worse for the party.

Mr. Willoughby and his congregation, (who to a man, almost, worked with him in the recent struggle, and thereby shewed their confidence in their pastor,) are not wont to unite in any effort on which they cannot ask God's guidance and blessing. I have not yet learned that any Anti-Dunkin Association, party or advocate, ever brought their cause into the presence of God; and besought Heavens blessing upon it, had they done so, I certainly would not have found in the columns of their organ in Peterborough such evidences of the heart unregenerate as appear in your issue of Nov., 16th. I charge the "Review" with the letter of Temperance Mechanic "because t'is well known that the Mechanic who has charge of the office, is the author of the letter; and because the Editorials in the paper are of a piece—and indentical in tone, with the letter. Hoping the day is not far distant when proprietors of Newspapers will think it is cowardly, and dishonorable to vent their spleen and ill-will in the columns of their papers, against men, and institutions, with which they are not in sympathy, and who are situated so as to be powerless and unarmed against unprincipled assailants.

I am, dear sir,
Yours, &c.,
METHODIST.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR:—Commenting on Lord O'Hagan's admirable address at the opening of the Letterkenny Literary Institute in the north of Ireland the Londonderry Sentinel remarks that Ireland can claim orators little inferior to the masters of antiquity for chaste language, fervent delivery and polished elocution. The demosthenic grandeur of Curran; the almost superhuman power of Grattan; the beautiful periods of Burke, Sheridan and Bushe; the thunder of Plunkett and O'Connell; the poetic fire of Philips proclaim the glorious oratory of the Irish race. In the senate, at the bar, in the pulpit and on the platform our countrymen have attained a noble distinction of which any nation might feel proud. The present generation has had opportunities of listening to the silver-tongued speeches of Whiteside—an orator whose triumphs can bear comparison with the best ages of Irish—aye, English eloquence. Next to him—for at least a quarter of a century—we consider the eminent Belfast man, whose address as hinted at above and given in extenso deserves to rank as an able representative of the genius which still exists among our sons, and proves that we never shall lack men to wear the mantle which Cicero bequeathed to posterity. Over thirty years ago plain Thomas O'Hagan, smiling like the poet Laurati's gardner, at the "claim for long descent," and relying on the forge of natural talent, instead of hereditary prestige, began the struggle in life, which culminated in elevating him to the head of his profession, and we derive a lesson from his trials, perseverance and success that affords an encouraging example and stimulus to young Irishmen—and might we not add Canadians—similarly circumstanced. While fighting a difficult battle he made many friends, had few enemies and now on the verge of three score and ten, his matured experience, vividly and forcibly expressed, is that he believes that intemperance has done much evil in Ireland, that intoxication is the unspeakable curse of the people, and obste principiis has always been the council of the wise. He strives to wean young men from the dangerous allurements, and so indues them to shun the drink demon, innocent amusements should be combined with literary organizations, and they might thus hope through these inducements to render the Institutes profitable to their members in a two-fold aspect, viz:—the promotion of religion, virtue and intelligence, and avoidance of those propensities which ruin soul, mind and body, and sink mankind to the level of the brute creation. Lord O'Hagan's view of our greatest social vice but re-echoes the experiences of Judge Talbord and many others.

"Need I speak," he says, "of the miseries and scandals with which that plague has blighted our country, but for it the purely moral and almost free from the taint of serious crime? You all know how fearful are its consequences. It blasts the fairest prospects and withers the highest hopes. It dulls the intellect and robs the best affections of their charm. It destroys the truest charities of life; makes God's greatest gift of free-will vain, and degrades natures that were generous, to the ever-mastering misery of the base self-indulgence. It makes earthly paradises of homes which should be happy, and deforms their Edenless inmates by his-long torture. It gives criminals our gaols, and beggars to our workhouses, and perverts the prosperity, which increases wages and should increase comfort and thankful virtue, into a dewilish engine for the proportionate increase of vice and wretchedness. Exaggeration of its evils is impossible. Their enormity transcends the force of language. The squalid dwelling; the outraged wife; the starving child; the shattered frame; the quick decay; the delirious agony; the despairing death-bed, and the paupers grave. These are familiar horrors which proclaim with eloquence more scathing than words can utter, the fate of the drunkard and the misery of all who are cursed in having relations with him."

Yours &c.,
A. B.

COBOURG.

COBOURG CAR WORKS.—We notice that two more snow plows were turned out of the Cobourg Car Works for the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa & Occidental Railway on Monday last. This completes the contract for six of these articles for that road, and for beauty of finish and substantial workmanship we unhesitatingly assert they are not to be beaten. We believe they cost about $2,000 each. Eight hand cars are now in course of construction at the Works for the same road. The snow plows and hand cars lately turned out of the Works do credit to Mr. Crossen, and we trust that before long he will have contracts sufficient to keep his Car Works running to their full capacity.—Sentinel

FENELON FALLS.

ACCIDENT AT COBOCONK.—On Saturday last as a lad about 14 years of age son of Mr. James Ferguson, of Coboconk, was leaving the mill yard in that village with a load of slabs, one of them fell off which so alarmed the horses that they suddenly jumped sideways, and the youthful driver was thrown to the ground. A wheel was in the very act of going over one of his arms, when the nigh horse fell, the other tumbled over him, and the progress of the waggon was instantly arrested. The spectators who ran to the spot found the boy's arm held to the ground by the wheel, which was exactly on top of it, and when the limb was released the bone was found to be broken. We have not since heard how the lad is progressing.

THE IRON MINES.—A friend from Kinmount tells us that up the river, about five miles from that village, a number of men under Mr. Savanagh are at work blasting and getting out iron ore, which is to be sent to Pittsburg, Pa. It is rumoured that a quantity of not less than 200 tons is to be forwarded for testing, and if, upon being smelted, it proves satisfactory, the Victoria Railway Co. will run a branch to the mines from the nearest point on their line as soon as possible next year. Speaking of the Victoria Railway, we may remark that work upon the line between Kinmount and Haliburton is being pushed on with unabated vigour, and that a party of surveyors will be at work north of Haliburton during the coming winter.

KINMOUNT.—A large number of men were discharged last Saturday from the Victoria Railway, the earth being so frozen that work can only be carried on to advantage in the deep cuttings. Several miles of the grading north of Kinmount is ready for track laying. Mr. Petty has taken up his residence here, and has hung out his sign at his new place of business. Bring on your watches and clocks for repairs. Business is very good in the village, and provisions are cheap. Nearly every day we notice loads of furniture and new settlers going north to settle in the new townships. Dear are plentiful this season, and there appears to be no lack of hunters.—Gazette.

STANNOPE.—The hunters back here complain that "hunting doesn't pay these times," owing to the low price offered for furs. Prime mink sold at Minden on the 5th for from 50 cents to $1 25. and a few went for 25 cents each. The result will be less hunting and more farming. This township and the adjoining one (Guilford) are being settled up very rapidly; the prospect of the Victoria Railway reaching Haliburton soon is doubtlessly enticing the people in. Mr. G. Haddon lost a valuable ox last week; a turnip stuck in its throat, so to get the poor beast out of misery he had to kill it.

The opinions of the Irish Canadian on political parties in Canada are always of interest. Take the following two extracts from its columns as a specimen of the vigor with which it expresses its views:—

"The party of Union, &c., has lost power and also temper, and is therefore entitled to a little indulgence. We would advise the readers of the organ to take its statement of men and things cum grano salis. We don't like to abuse the Right Honorable John Alexander Macdonald, for the reason that it is cruel to throw water on a drowned rat; but we can't help telling him that he is the father of lies, for is the Mail not his dearly beloved and truly begotten, and is not the Mail made up with glaring lies? Ergo, is he not the father of lies?"

Then again:

"It is worth while to remember that Torysm, whether at home or in Canada, is the undisguised and uncompromising foe of Ireland and the Irish. It is favorably only to those of that country and race whom it can purchase to do its 'dirty work.' Against all others of Ireland and the Catholic Faith, it declares and wages war to the bitter end."

It is perhaps, only fair to say that those deliverances were not made this year, but in 1872 and 1873. It is also put just to add that Sir John has improved since they were written, having since then added to his record the Pacific Scandal, the Northern railway, the Secret Service Money, and the Ordnance Land Fees transactions. He appears to be now more to the Grits taste than he was in 1872-3.—Hamilton Times.

Millinery and Mantles can be bought cheaper at W. Fairweather & Co. than any place in town.

A SHORT time ago Mr. D. McMillan, M. P., of Middlesex at a political gathering declared that Mr. Cooper, of the firm of Cooper and Fairman—of which Mr. Chas. Mackenzie was once a member—had told him in private conversation that Chas. Mackenzie had not gone out of the firm until three months after the Premier said he did. This is the firm which it is said was given a steel rail contract that the Premier's brother might be benefitted. Mr. McMillan told this with great gusto, but a few days latter Mr. Cooper emphatically denied the statement in a letter addressed to the public press. He says: "What I did state to Mr. McMillan, and what I expressed my willingness to establish before a committee of the House, was the very opposite of what was stated in the above report." He further adds: "The facts are as mentioned in the letter of our firm to the Montreal Gazette in October, 1875, that Mr. Charles Mackenzie had no interest in our business after December, 1874, although the registration of the dissolution of the firm was not made, owing to the oversight of the professional gentleman to whom it had been entrusted. This was not material, however, as the formation of the new firm without a name of Mr. Charles Mackenzie was duly registered."

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 22, 1877

The nights are clear and cool.

Christmas comes on Tuesday.

Misery men are brushing up their sleighs.

So done and yet so fur—a seal skin sacque.

The grand struggle for "Turkey" (5 takes place to-day.

Merchants are stocking up for the approaching holidays.

The Town Council will meet on Monday evening next.

The County Council will meet on Thursday the 29th inst.

"Give my chewing gum to Gertie," is the name of the latest song.

A storm in perspect—all the pretty girls were out walking yesterday.

About time for the tinsmere to announce the receipt of dairies for 1878.

The condition of Turkey will be seriously considered by Canadians to-day.

The old, old song. "What are you going to buy me at Christmas?" has come.

Thanksgiving service will be held in the Baptist church this evening at 7 p. m.

The County Court will meet on the 2nd of December instead of the 11th as formerly.

All the old guns round the town and county are being cleaned up for Thanksgiving day.

When you meet a man eating sarbon-beans it is not a sign that he belongs to the movement.

The young man who is going to cast his first vote this year is in an awful hurry for election day.

The annual meeting of the Tuque Bleue Shoe Shoe Club will be held in the Mullman House, to-morrow.

The Russians have lots of holidays like ourselves, but no Thanksgiving day. Perhaps they don't take Turkey.

Christmas is Coming, and wide-awake dealers should proclaim the glad tidings in our advertising columns.

The Woodstock Sentinel is sound on the dead-head local system. It is not going to have any more dead-heads.

An exchange says:—"Ladies should be successful bankers, as there are so many good tellers amongst them."

The St. Andrews Society intend celebrating the anniversary of their Patron Saint by a dinner in the Cairns House.

Suspected.—There is some talk of the Rev. D. J. Macdonell being invited to deliver a lecture here for the benefit of St. Andrew's Society.

The dread of cold weather seems to prove too much for hard times if one is to judge from the number of weddings which are taking place of late.

P. P. Home.—The Committee of the P. P. Home acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a pair of shoes, a prize won at a rifle match by Sergeant Miller.

Hymeneal.—Dr. Bell of this town returned to town on Friday last, bringing with him his beautiful bride. The happy pair have our most sincere congratulations.

Mr. Stapleton, formerly of the Bank of Montreal, Lindsay, has been promoted to the London branch. He is succeeded at Lindsay by Mr. C. Widder, from Goderich.

By this time of the year the farmer has all his fall work done, and has nothing to do but sit on the front fence and shoot wandering tree agents and Insurance peddlers.

Venison.—A number of carcases of venison were brought to town during the past week, and found ready purchasers. It is said that deer are plentiful in the northern districts.

Ashburnham.—The Dunkin Bill has been submitted to the Ashburnhamites this week. It will be voted on the 26th day of December. There will be one days polling. There are not 200 votes on the list.

Auction Sale.—Haggart Bros. will sell by Auction, on Tuesday the 4th December, at the residence of Mr. John Maloney, Lot No. 11, 1st Con. Douro, at 12 o'clock noon, the entire farm stock, implements, etc.

Three Lakefield boys Messrs. J. Westlake, A. Richardson and R. Knox returned from the back lakes last week with 21 fine deer, seven of which were killed in one day. What hunters have beaten that this fall?

Dressed Hogs.—A large number of dressed hogs are being brought into the market. The price at present ranges from $5.50 to $6.75 per hundred, but these will likely be a rise as soon as the weather becomes more solid.

St. Andrew's Society Annual Sermon.—The Rev. Mr. Bell will preach the annual sermon this year, in St. Andrew's church, on Sabbath evening, the 25th inst. There will be no service that evening in St. Paul's church.

T. Secret, the well known Captain of the "Chippawa," is fitting up a large skating rink in the south of the village of Lakefield, which will prove quite a source of attraction to the young people there, and to sleighing parties from town.

Personal.—Dr. Esmond, late of Belleville, has opened an office in this town, opposite the Charlotte street Methodist church, where he will be found ready at all times to attend to those who require his services. Read his card in another column.

Now the "Dunkin Act" is before the people of Lakefield we hope to see our northern commencement jump off the fence on the right side, and go for the "Heathen Chinese" or is it possible the editor enjoys "A wee drap o' the Barley Bree."

The Dunkin Bill in the County.—The Warden by request of ten members of the County Council, has called a special meeting of the Council for Thursday the 29th inst., to consider and submit a by-law in terms of the Temperance Act of 1864—the Dunkin Act.

The Anti-Dunkinites of Lakefield, considering their best chance was to have a direct vote in the village, got up a requisition last Friday and presented it to the village Clerk who has issued the necessary notices, and the poll will be opened on the 21st December.

"Paris Exposition."—We clip the following from the Montreal Gazette of November 19th:—"Mr. William English, of Peterborough, sends two Indian hunting canoes to the Paris Exposition, of splendid finish, and which are fine specimens of Canadian boat building."

The following appointment is gazetted:—George A. Cox, of the town of Peterborough, Esq., to be one of the License Commissioners in and for the Electoral District of the West Riding of Peterborough, in the room and stead of Alexander Smith, deceased. This is a good appointment.

Entrance Examinations.—The examinations for entrance to the Peterborough Collegiate Institute will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 11th and 12th of December, in the Union School buildings. All candidates who intend being present should notify the town Inspector through the Principal of their intention to present themselves for examination.

A County By-law.—Already the friends of the Dunkin Bill in the county have the names of ten councillors on the requisition to the Warden to call a special meeting of the County Council to submit a by-law to the electors in favour of the Dunkin Bill. It will therefore be brought before the people as soon as the council can be convened. The Council will meet on the 29th instant.

The Tandy Brothers' Concert.—This concert, to be held in Brethern's Hall, on Wednesday, December 5th, promises to be one of the most successful of the season. The Tandy's have a first class reputation both in Canada and in the United States. They sing nothing offensive or unchaste. The outlay to procure their services is heavy and we feel sure the people of Peterborough will show their appreciation by filling the Hall. The tickets are 25 cents; reserved seats 10 cents each, can be secured at Rubidge's book store. Secure one promptly if you desire a choice.

Wine Stores.—The Russians have taken Kars, the Turkish stores found in Asia, and are likely to take all the other fortified places of note in a short time. In Europe the Turkish commanders are losing ground. Forces may fail at any moment, and the result of the present war would no longer be doubtful. It is only a matter of time, unless the great powers intervene ere long.

Furbishing.—The future of R. A. Bradshaw is also a bright one to contend with, when in some of our local papers. The cause of their failure cannot be fully understood outside of the circle of those interested. If the pressure of the times through the country, the effects of a weather right long, the cupidity of the Government, or business men not attended to, I don't know. But if pleasing undue opposition in the hands of friendly creditors has been the cause, that can be atoned for by using the proceeds to remove the liabilities. It is therefore premature to judge them until they have applied their present difficulties.

Accident on the Midland.—On Saturday as the mail was on its way to Lakefield, a little south of Nassau, the locomotive was thrown off the track, taking with it the tender, freight car and passenger coach, the wheels of which were badly damaged. Fortunately no one was hurt. The accident occurred at a gentle curve, and as nothing was on the track, it is difficult to account for. There was a report that some one had placed a plank on the track in order to draw some passenger across it, but this is not corroborated by any one who was at the scene of the accident. The wreck was removed during Sunday.

Presbyterian Exercise.—In compiling an extract last week on the clergy in general, and those of the Methodist church in particular, the Review quoted from the Mail a reference to the new celebrated streamer comparing Christ and Gladish. There is a fellow-feeling between the Mail and Review in matters pertaining to the Dunkin Act. As the Devil himself has been one of these two papers repeater to both promoters; and when the Mail says; Christianity and bigotry would seem to be special attributes of the clerical character," it is thought natural thing in the world that the Review should copy it approvingly.

"The Banner."—Under the above caption, Mr. Mathieu, so long and favorable known, has opened up again in the store 3 doors north of Hunter street east side of George. On entering the large and well arranged establishment we were most agreeably surprised to find it well filled with the most choice goods, fit to adorn the most mansions in the Dominion. No old: an offer a better selection of goods than Mr. Mathieu now offers to the public of Peterborough. Such enterprise on the part of Mr. Mathieu is worthy of most liberal patronage, as his goods are remarkably cheap, and are always what he represents them to be. 47-1

Cheap Groceries.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Mr. B. Morrow is now selling, and will continue to sell until after the holidays, his large stock of groceries, etc., at cost. This house is now familiarly known by nearly every person in the county, for the courteous manner in which their customers are treated, and for the superior quality and cheapness of their goods. Mr. Morrow, who is always on hand himself, is of a very genial disposition, and it is his entire aim to give those who favor him with a share of their patronage, the best goods in the market at the lowest possible cash prices. Buying in large quantities, and very largely for cash, Mr. Morrow certainly has every opportunity and advantage for meeting the wants of his customers, and we must cordially speak a kind word regarding his business.

Methodist Missionary Society.—Services in connection with the Peterborough Branch of this society will be preached next Sabbath, (26th inst.,)as follows: In George street church by Rev. John Bredon at 11 a. m., and Rev. George Young at 7 p. m. In Charlotte street church by Rev. George Young at 11 a. m., and Rev. John Bredon at 7 p. m. Anniversary meetings will be held in George Street church on Monday evening, and in Charlotte street church on Tuesday evening. Deputation:—Revs. Geo. Young, John Bredon and W. H. Laird. Special interest will be felt in the visit of Rev. George Young, as he stood by poor Scott when murdered at Winnipeg. The other members of the deputation are favorites in Peterborough. The chair will be taken by Mr. G. A. Cox for the George street church, and by Mr. J. F. Jeffers in the Charlotte street church at 7.30 p. m.

POLICE COURT.

On Thursday morning last Mr. C. Stapleton, Bailiff and Auctioneer, appeared before the Police Magistrate on a charge of using grossly insulting language to John McGee, Assistant Constable. Mr. Dunkin appeared on behalf of the Constable and Mr. Dennistoun on behalf of Mr. Stapleton. The complaint was withdrawn; Mr. Stapleton admitting that he said darn scoundrel, instead of d——n scoundrel.

Drunk and Disorderly.—On Tuesday morning, the 20th inst., J. McCullough was fined $5.00 and costs for being drunk and disorderly on the street on Monday evening.

Drunk and Disorderly.—W. Mahony was fined on November the 17th, $5.00 for being drunk and disorderly.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

What is Being said and Done in Connection Therewith.

Montreal temperance ladies have opened a coffee house.

2,000 altogether have signed the pledge in Kingston through Rine's efforts.

$1,800 have been subscribed in Halifax to purchase a hall for the Temperance Reform Club.

The Grand Division Sons of Temperance for the Maritime Provinces has just been held at Halifax, N. S.

All Saints Church Toronto, has in connection with it an Anti-Treating Society. The members in a recent debate justified the benefit of secret societies.

Dr. J. N. Cadieux has been lecturing in Mitchell. The storm did not hinder the Town Hall from being crowded. Temperance excitement is growing in Perth.

A meeting of temperance workers in the County of Carleton has been called for Thanksgiving Day, to be held in Ottawa for the purpose of considering the propriety of submitting the Dunkin Bylaw to the people for their approval.

Mr. D. W. Fralick, blacksmith, of Napanee, has got into trouble by trying to carry on business under the conjoined tutelary auspices of Vulcan and Bacchus. In other words, he sold whisky thus: A bottle and a coin were left at his shop; when the leaver returned, behold the coin was gone and the bottle filled with whiskey. Mr. Fralick claimed that he was acting only as agent, but Justice James and Herring couldn't see the point of vicarious vending of poison, and decided to charge Mr. F. $27.50.

All eyes are now turned towards Wellington, which is so soon to go to the polls. Meetings are held every night in some part of the county. Guelph has had a monster gathering. Mr. M. Knowlton, of London, and Mr. Gibson, of Ingersoll, championed the Act, and Mr. Brooks, of Toronto, advocated the anti's views. The meeting seemed to be nine to one in favor of the Act. Don't let the canvassing fall in Wellington. Personal appeal to the voters will bring many to the polls, who would perhaps be too lackwarm to come unsolicited.

The Moncton Times notes that an interesting feature of the temperance movement in Canada is that the greatest stir is made by parties outside the established organizations. Mackenzie, Dutcher and Rose are working in purely individual enterprises. That there are thousands of good temperance men in Canada outside of "the orders," may as well be conceded at once. That temperance men are not agreed as to the best manner of fighting the common enemy is also an open secret. The probability is that the time will never come when they will be so agreed; nevertheless, any movement, having for its object the staying of the tide of intemperance, will always find abundance of friends in every community.

Dunkin Rose.—Thanksgiving day in Ottawa is to see a mass meeting of temperance men, to talk about temperance houses, and the passing of the Act in Carleton county.....Two victories have been won in the Province of Quebec. The county of Compton had a majority for the Act of 206, while the municipality of Sherbrooke had a favorable majority of 212. This shows the direction of the wind.....The Cookstown Advocate suggests the return of a council next year who will not treat their petition with contempt when they ask the subjection of the Act.....Oxford is seeking to have the Act reenacted. It was carried by a sweeping majority, but was overthrown on a.....The Christian Guardian in relation to Peterborough [illegible] Act, says: "The temperance [illegible] Peterborough [illegible] 124 [illegible] temperance [illegible] Peterborough [illegible] Act [illegible] temperance [illegible] Peterborough [illegible] Act [illegible] temperance [illegible] failure has caused [illegible]

SUNSHINE.

(From the Kingston Whig.)

"No workingman need apply" is evidently as much the Tory sentiment of to-day as ever was. True, it is quite in order for the sons of toil to be permitted to humbly approach their convention Tory rulers for the purpose of paying their dutiful homage. The workingman may be permitted to crave the acceptance of sundry cures, chairs, windows and what not—and even to blandly received and dismissed at such times by the patronizing plenipotentiary of the high-toned Orderism. The working man is also admitted to be a necessary evil at the polls. As a voting machine—a mere ballot depositor—a value is actually set upon him in Tory estimation, although, measured by the hard-pad test of cash, that value has measurable depreciated since the 'Reform' innovation of the ballot. In any of these subordinate positions, the workingman is a sort of permissible nuisance so long as he knows his place and keeps it. So long as these "brave mechanics" don't come between the wind and Tory nobility, the nabobs, by a wonderful elasticity of condescension, have been known to become the patrons even of vulgar labor, and have permitted, nay, have invited the rude but honest fellows to actually call them the "workingman's friends." All this however, within the line. Let the workingman but assert his manhood or give rein to the promptings of an ambition to rise above the level of his ordinary status, and worse than all, to compete for the prize of distinction with his kid-gloved rival, and he instantly becomes a horse of another colour. At once he is adjudged guilty of the most monstrous presumption, and must be repressed by all the means known to the traditions of the "good families." Is there either untruth or injustice in these strictures? They are the simple facts of past as well as of current events. When it suits a bluebloodied Tory to say so he will laud the merit of a workingman who has had the ability and the indomitable will to rise superior to circumstances of his earlier career. When however, such a man dares not only to dispense with their patronage, but to rise above their heads to any pinnacle of distinction, they ply all their snobby arts to bring him down again. It is not to be doubted that precisely in this light, and largely because he rose from the ranks of labour, the Hon. Alexr. Mackenzie is so regarded by many of the puny Tory pigmies who fret and fume and rage at what they choose to consider his unmannerly usurpation. The worst feature of Tory snobbery in Canada is that it is "only that and nothing more." Only a shoddy aristocracy at best, and, like all shams, completely lacking in the redeeming qualities which are to be found only in the genuine and the original. If proof is demanded that the thing we have described exists in Canada, here is a specimen of it from the Montreal Gazette:

"He (Mr. Mackenzie) must know that to be a stonemason or an ironmonger is one thing, and to be the Premier of Canada is another and as altogether different thing: and what would be quite suitable to either of the two former of these callings would not be becoming to the latter. It may be all right for a man to work bare-handed, handling stones in a quarry, or laying up a stone wall, but 'a gloved hand generally becomes a Prime Minister better.'

We repeat that the worst type of snobbery is that which issues from upstart pride. Dirty is the bird that fouls its own nest, and infinitely meaner than the noble fool who never soiled his dainty hands with the stain of labour is he who assumes the airs of a lordling with only the history of a hireling. The proprietor of the Gazette, so far as his work a-day antecedents are concerned, is just as vile as "a stonemason or an ironmonger." For having worked with his hands all honour to him. That he should turn his back upon this fact and taunt a better man than himself with the stigma of honest labour the more shame to him. Long may the fact, of which the First Minister of Canada is so distinguished an example, remain true of Canada, that, spite of Tory sneers and slanders, no avenue of honour shall be closed to honest merit no matter how labour-hardened the hand which presents the credentials of ability to enter and to ascend it.

Protection to Native Industry.

From the Bobcaygeon Independent.

Some of the Conservative Protectionists of this village are desirous of carrying Protection to its natural conclusion.

The boot makers wish to place a duty of $1 on every pair of boots and shoes brought into this village from either Lindsay or Peterborough, or elsewhere, as they say they consider they cannot at present earn a fair profit, but if the price was raised a dollar a pair they could live very comfortably.

The blacksmiths wish to have a duty of about $6 a keg placed on nails. They find that they cannot make nails by hand nearly so cheap as they are made in Montreal by machinery. In fact this important branch of industry in this village has been entirely killed out, but a duty of $3 a keg on imported nails would cause all the forges to go to work and we should have the great nail making industry restored to its ancients prosperity. A large number of men would be employed, and Bobcaygeon in time would thrive and grow rich.

The carpenters wish for a heavy duty on manufactured sash and doors. The factories at Lindsay and Peterborough have ruined our local trade in hand made sash and panel doors. The Lindsay and Peterborough men come here, and slaughter their goods to the ruin of this place, by selling their sash and doors very cheap for cash. A duty of about 2c. a light on sash and $2 on every door would effectually place them out of the market, and raise the price to a point at which it would be worth while for native carpenters to work at the hand manufacture of those useful articles. This slaughtering of goods is shameful. It enables the bublic to buy so very cheap.

We ourselves intend joining in the Protection movement. If our Council would levy a duty of only 6c on all newspapers entering our village we could increase the price of our paper to 10c a copy or $5 a year. This would be a capital encouragement to our industry, and really we don't see that we could go on without Protection if other industries were Protected and raised their prices.

This is the idea and as regards the principle involved in Protection to local Trade it is sound;—That is it Protection in justifiable in any form. If it is right to Protect the nail makers of the Dominion against those of the States, it is equally right to Protect the Bobcaygeon nail maker against those of Montreal. If it is wrong for the Yankee carpenter to "slaughter" furniture in Canada, it is equally wrong for Peterborough and Lindsay manufacturers to come to Bobcaygeon and slaughter the local trade in hand made sash by selling machine made sash at half the hand made prices. In fact, if Protection is good from a national point of view, and our Counsel should clap a Protection duty on all manufactur ed articles entering our village boundaries. In both cases the public have to pay the extra price, and Sir John Macdonald and the constituencies tell us it is good that the public should pay the extra cost in order that manufacturers should be encouraged. Therefore all the people in this district should unflingly pay the duty of 2c on each bag of nails in order that some half dozen nail makers may go into a business for which they are utterly unfitted. This is protection!

SAVE MONEY and buy your Dry Goods and Clothing at W. FAIRWEATHER & Co's

We heard yesterday from good authority that David Smith, the veteran shortinger, stated he had trapped one hundred rabbits and had only shot thirteen. The proportion is not bad, thirteen members for one man, who will then be thanked for only one thirteenth of his committed murders.

The Grand Trunk [illegible]

TORONTO & OTTAWA RAILWAY.

(From the Toronto Tribune.)

Elsewhere we print a statement prepared by W. H. Scott, Esq., M.P.P., the Presidents of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, containing the information required by the Executive Committee of the Corporation, in order to enable her city soions the better to get some few ideas through their heads concerning the merits, or demerits, of this projected enterprise. Mr. Scott has fairly gauged the thickness and hardness of the average Ultramontic cranium, and has accordingly stated his facts with a plainness and directness which ought to make them penetrate that ordinarily almost impenetrable substance, That the "Executive," or the Council at large, should still be coquetting with this question, which should receive prompt attention either one way or the other, is no doubt due to the near approach of the January elections, and each candidate for the popular favour considers how he can influence the votes of his ward, rather than how he can serve the public interests. There are, no doubt, some exceptions among the members of the City Council, but we are speaking only of the "average," which is, perhaps, most equitably represented by the "Executive." Where a political service to a certain party can be rewarded by corporation patronage the Executive is not slow to see the point; and when, as in the case of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway bonus, there is fear of a damaging effect on the chances of re-election of certain Aldermen, then, action is adroitly postponed, and the representatives of the people, elected because of their supposed superiority of judgement, to act in behalf of the general interest are quietly trying to work out their own little personal games. These gentlemen are egregiously mistaken if they think that the electors do not thoroughly understand their conduct, and it would be far better for them to get with outspoken decision on every important question, according to their own best judgment of its effects on the general interests of the community.

The project itself needs no argument in its favour. A glance at the map, and a knowledge of existing means of communication between the two points, will satisfy any one that direct railway communication by the proposed route would not only be of great advantage to Toronto and Ottawa, but also to the intermediate country, along the whole of the projected line, which is studded with thriving towns and villages, and rich in agricultural, or mineral lands. There is no waste on the whole track, and that track crosses at nearly right angles no less than seven lines of railway, running from north to south, this giving it the chance of drawing from both sides from every one of these railways; or, in other words, virtually constituting it A TRUNK LINE WITH FOURTEEN LATERAL FEEDERS.

In the matter of distance between the objective points, there is a consideration of some importance. The projected line will traverse 225 miles. The two existing routes from Toronto to the Capital—both via Grand Trunk—are by Brockville and Canada Central 284 miles; by the St. Lawrence and Ottawa (at Prescott) 275½. This would make a saving of more than fifty miles on the shortest route. This of itself on a distance, but comparatively short, is a great item—being considerably over twenty per cent, of the whole, and that should be counted both with respect to time and money. But the mere saving of distance gives no fair indication of the saving as to time. By the Brockville and Ottawa, and by the St. Lawrence and Ottawa, there are the changes of cars and consequent stoppages—how pleasant these are at the "Mugby Junction" which we call Prescott, let all travellers bear testimony—which involve, much loss of time and general discomfort all of which would be avoided by the construction of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway.

So far we have shewn the great convenience and advantags to the people at the two ends of the line in the matter of traffic and travel. But our readers should remember that the line will diverge from the water route, beginning from Toronto, and proceed in a direct route to Ottawa, a distance of about 55 miles from the border line, which is also that of navigation. In this way the back country will be opened up, from east to west, as it has already been from north to south, by the railways which the Toronto and Ottawa will cross, and the traffic and travel which they will consequently tap at both sides. To the trade of Toronto the road in question would be of the greatest possible advantage. Montreal has already all but secured the most direct railway communication with the Dominion capital, and Toronto will stand very much in its own light if it loses the opportunity of securing at least equal facilities. It is not nearly the trade of Ottawa, but the trade of this vast, and as yet but partially settled Upper Ottawa Country that is open to our merchants if the Toronto and Ottawa Railway should become a reality. And by the whole people of Western Ontario, who have business with the Capital, the road would be hailed as a great boon. The very fact of Toronto's encouraging the enterprise would convince the people of the Western part of the Province that the Provincial capital was fulfilling its duty, in seeing to the general convenience, while at the same time it was taking enlightened action to forward its own prosperity.

The Montreal Banquet.

Speaking of the banquet given to Mr. Mackenzie at Montreal a few evenings ago, the Star, (Independent) has the following:—

The Premier, notwithstanding the ominous shadow projected across his path from Arthabaska, spoke with old-time enthusiasm of the career of the Liberal party; and nothing could exceed the boldness of the sketch he drew of its future. It is always pleasing to listen to a speaker who has the undoubted courage of his opinions and a vis viva to announce them with effect. In this particular Mr. Mackenzie is remarkable over all other men in the Canadian Commons, and the secret of his great personal influence must be attributed in a large measure to this salient characteristic. The denunciations of his opponents were as keen and as emphatic as ever; he traced the history of the party opposed to him from the reign of the oligarchy known in Canadian annals as the "family compact," and claimed for his own, the paternity of every measure of reform that has been carried out in Canada during the last quarter of a century. After listening to the robust speech of this gifted man—so terse and logical and withal so artless—it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that he is sincere. That he still possesses the confidence of the country at large is, with him, an article of faith; and he very confidently predicts, as the next general election, a triumph for the cause of which he is the embodiment. Those who have accused him of harboring a design to crowd six regular sessions in one parliamentary term of five years, may rejoice to know that the Premier spoke of the next general elections as coming off next year, an event which, as we indicated, it would be impossible to put off till 1879 without violating the spirit if not the letter of the law. The patriotic words addressed to the young men of Canada by Mr. Mackenzie will find a response in all hearts. The premier has taken a leaf from the rich note-book of Mr. Blake, and he will find it a talisman to popularity whenever he speaks to an audience capable of appreciating a generous appreciation or of cherishing a sentiment of nationality.

"THINKING OF HOME."

BY GEORGE COOPER.

"Gone are the faces so loving and kind,
Gone are the hills and the valleys I know;
Far from my dear ones, I never can find
Friends like to theirs, ever gentle and true.
O my my wants, many skies seem cloudy,
O for the land where my love lays to rest!
Long have I wandered in tears and in pain,
Ever more dreaming and thinking of home.

"Strange are the faces that je-k into place,
Strange unto me seems the hues of the skies;
Nature's fancy blossoms that lovingly shine,
Look not as fair as our own to my eyes!
Oh, how my heart, like a bird, longs to go,
Winging its way o'er the white, weary foam!
Daylight and night-time, each hour that I know
Finds I'm dreaming and thinking of home!

"Home is the sigh of my lone saddened heart,
Home is the wish and the hope of my life;
Home is my balm, and my joy, and my rest,
Home is my refuge from world-weary strife.
Watching the clouds at the dawn's early gray,
Watching the stars in the night's solemn hour,
Far from the land of my people I array,
Dreamer dreaming and thinking of home!"

FAMILY HATTERS.

To Remove Grease from Marble.—Take French chalk, reduce it to powder, dust it over the spot, and then hold a hot flat-iron very near to it. This will soften the grease, while the chalk will absorb it.

Copying Pens.—The most perfect and beautiful copies imaginable of lerse &c., may be made by thoroughly saturating them in common porter, and then laying them flat between white sheets of paper (without more pressure than the leaves of an ordinary book bear to each other), and let them dry out.

Headache.—People who suffer much from headache will do well to ascertain whether it may not arise from short-sightedness, or far-sightedness, or other defects in the eyes which cause continual irritation to the nerves. Relief from frequent and severe headaches is sometimes obtained by wearing spectacles suited to the eye of the sufferer.

Pickled Onions.—Take some small onions, peel and throw them into a stew-pan of boiling water, not them over the fire, and let them remain all quite clear; then take them out quickly, and lay them between two cloths to dry. Boil some vinegar with ginger and whole pepper, and when cold pour it over the onions in glass jars, and tie them closely over.

Cold Cream.—Hal a pint of rosewater, four ounces of oil of almonds, three drachms white wax, three drachms spermaceti. Melt the white wax and spermaceti together with half of almonds. Then beat them all up, adding the rosewater slowly until it is cold. Put it in a pot, and pour some rosewater on the top.

Useful Hints.—Careful housekeepers are willing to learn economy from anybody. Says a woman of experience: I have been a housekeeper to a score of years, and have learned a good many things by experience, a knowledge of which may be of use to those who have recently taken charge of a house of their own. If he fall when I go over my chests and trunks and closets, to take on all and winter clothing and put away such which has been worn during the summer, I am careful to see the all the material in one large box. All rolls and remnants of woolen I have in a bag by themselves, all bits of new callico in another, scraps of muslin in still another. All worn linen is rolled up by itself, in cadnets or use in bandages are required, my worn muslin likewise is in a parcel by itself. All these with what new supplies may have the shape of flannel, muslin, clothes, calicoes, I keep in a chest by themselves. Then I have a trunk or drawer in which I lay such garments as are cut out and ready for the needle or machine. In this drawer I also keep all and my material for sewing, so that I never have to hunt up what I use. My patterns are all in a bag by themselves, the boys' patterns in a separate parcel, and the girls the same. I have a candbox in which are put away flowers, ribbons and velvets which may still be of service. On the inside of each door is fastened a shoe bag, so the shoes are never lying round on the floor. These various contrivances I have found very useful in enabling me to put my hand at once on whatever may be required for family convenience without the trouble of hunting it up.

WASHING FLANNELS.

BY MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Cut up what soap may be needed and dissolve in a skillful of boiling water. Let it stand on the stove and simmer till every particle is dissolved. Never rub soap on the flannels or allow a bit to settle on them. Nothing "fulls" flannel so badly as rubbing soap on or letting bits of it settle on the cloth. A piece or even a piece of soap has lodged or been rubbed will have a different shade from the rest when dried, making the whole garment look spotted.

Take a small tub not quite half full of cooking hot or boiling water. Into this pour enough of the dissolved soap to make a rich suds, pour into this some ammonia, prepared from the "concentrated ammonia" as directed a few weeks since—a tablespoonful and a half to two gallons of suds is a fair proportion. Stir and mix the soap into the hot water till it is all thoroughly incorporated. Then put in the flannels. Two or three articles are quite enough to soak at one time. Press them well under the water, but do not turn over to be suds occasionally while soaking. Let them remain in the water until it is cool enough to put the hands in without discomfort. While washing keep a good quantity of water at boiling nea on the range for rinsing purposes as it to keep the suds as hot as it can be used. Before one piece is washed and ready to be rinsed out fill a small tub half full of clear hot water. Into this stir a little more than bluing as time would be used for cotton or linen. Shake out each piece as soon as washed quickly, and throw at once into the hot rinsing water.

Rub the flannels as little as possible, but draw it repeatedly through the hands, squeezing rather than rubbing. Harsh rubbing thickens and injures the fabric. Never wring with a wringer, as the pressure mats the nap down so closely as to destroy all the soft fleecy look of good flannel. Wring with the hands as dry as possible, then rinse and wring out again as well as dry as it can be made by hand, snap on, stretch and pull out into the right shape; dry in the open air, if possible. Bring in when not quite dry roll up a few minutes, and iron while still a little damp, so that each part can be more easily brought into shape. Press as, when ironing, is better for the flannel than rubbing. It does not make the fabric feel so hard and wiry.

Scarlet flannel is poisonous to some skins if used before washing, and as one is not always sure how one may be affected by it, it is better to give it a good rub with soap and a little soap—not enough to make a strong suds. Let it stand and soak a few minutes, then wring out and treat like other flannels. The smell of new red flannel is not agreeable to many, and for this reason it is desirable to wash it before using. But no washing that we have any knowledge of can keep red flannels coloring nice if used for underwear for any length of time, or even worn by people that do not perspire freely. It becomes badly discolored and spoiled in most cases. Washing red flannel before making up well "shrinks" it as much as desirable. —Christian Union.

The entire amount of money diverted from the treasury of New York City from first to last by the Tweed ring is estimated as between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000.

A Secret Worth Knowing.—Some horse dealers have discovered that by the use of Barley's condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy their horses are much improved in every respect, that they will readily sell for from $25 to $50 each more than they would otherwise, and at a cost of not more than 25 cents. We consider this a secret worth knowing, and one which all who own horses should not fail to profit by; it is unquestionably the best horse medicine ever sold. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hoyt & Co. is on each package. Northop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Is health worth having? If it is, protect it. It is a legal as easily lost as a farm, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In the climate, and more particularly at this season of the year, people are very apt to take cold and suffer from sore throat, cough, spitting of blood, and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked through take lead to serious consequences. The quickest remedy within the quickest and most efficient remedy? Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Sold by druggists for twenty years, and always given perfect satisfaction, and is literally about permanent cures than taken. As sold by all medicine dealers and

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes. Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Broncholic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For broken, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast

Beware of Imitations.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Piles, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, when weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rapowsun and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure required but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Pettit's American Eye-Salve," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn constantly to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TICDOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.

A Triple Crown for Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.

"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS"

The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines were pronounced by E. H. Knight, C. W. Gregory, Fred. Sweet and L. D. F. Perry, Centennial Judges of Sewing Machines at Philadelphia in 1876, to be the best Sewing Machine in the market. Not only the Centennial commissioners but even the W & W. the best Sewing Machine was also Mrs. Jane Stephens, of Smithfield, Mrs. W. W. Johnston, Wm. McCullough, J. G. Hunter, R. Turnbull, Mrs. Dr. Hamil, Mrs. W. Patterson, Mrs. Dr. Powell, Mrs. W. m. Dewart, and Mrs. J. Smith of Adamsburgh, and hundreds of others too numerous to mention pronounce it the best Sewing Machine, and recommend all intending purchasers to call and see the new family W & W. before purchasing elsewhere.

CAUTION.

I hereby caution all those having the W & W Sewing Machine not to allow any other agent or person to take it in any other name or pretend to have anything to do with the W & W, as I am the only agent in the County who pretends to sell the W & W. Machine, and will not be responsible for any Bills or so known as W & W.

All I would recommend those having the W & W Sewing Machine to call on the proper and only authorized Agent at Peterboro, who is W. Hall, Cox's Block, Hunter Street, as the W & W Sewing Machine is the only one that has received a Medal or Diploma from the Centennial Commissioners, and is the only one that has received the highest award at the Centennial Exhibition.

I also would recommend those having the W & W Sewing Machine to call on the proper and only authorized Agent at Peterboro, who is W. Hall, Cox's Block, Hunter Street, as the W & W Sewing Machine is the only one that has received a Medal or Diploma from the Centennial Commissioners, and is the only one that has received the highest award at the Centennial Exhibition.

Ladies call at my new rooms, and I am confident to give satisfaction.

KEEP COOL.
Patent Close Slat Window Shades
SELF ROLLING.
EDWARD GREEN having purchased the right to manufacture the above Window Shades for the Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, is now prepared to manufacture them to order for Stores and Dwelling-houses, in any size from one foot to eight feet in width, and to any length required. Having all the machinery required for the manufacture of these Patent Shades, all orders will be promptly attended to and executed with despatch.
ADVANTAGES:
The advantages of these Shades are that they are close shades and self rolling, strong and durable, cannot be broken or entangled by rollers falling, loosen, come unwinding, or getting out of order, but are as simple and convenient that a child can work them. They are cheap.
These Shades are sold by the square foot, and not contracted upon the windows. No extra charge for fitting up.

HON. MR. CARTWRIGHT ON SIR. JOHN.

The "Injured Innocent" Severely Castigated.

CAREER OF A POLITICAL ROUE AND ADVENTURER LAID BARE.

HIS BOASTINGS AND SLANDERS REFUTED.

Bold Challenge and Plain Truths in Unmistakable Language.

The following extracts from the speech delivered by Hon. Mr. Cartwright at Napanee, on the 2nd inst., will be read with interest:

Hon. Mr. Cartwright on rising to address the meeting was received with loud and prolonged cheers. After briefly expressing his pleasure at again meeting his constituents, and his regret that he had been prevented by absence in England from addressing them last year according to his usual custom, he proceeded as follows: I cannot but be forcibly reminded of the very considerable period which has elapsed since I first had the pleasure of representing the county of Lennox in the Parliament of my native country. Looking round these benches, though, I am glad to perceive so many old familiar faces present to-night. I miss not a few whom all of us would have been glad to see again amongst us, and whose absence may remind us, one and all, of the rapid changes time is working in ourselves. Sooth to say, Mr. Chairman, I am inclined to think that almost the only thing which has not changed materially in these same fifteen years is the attitude, as respects myself, of a certain number of gentlemen who have always shown themselves pretty consistent in opposing me under all circumstances. Formerly, as nearly as I can remember, these worthy people conceived it to be their bounden duty, (at least so they told me) to oppose me because I supported Sir John Macdonald. Now, it appears it is equally their bounden duty to oppose me because I won't support Sir John Macdonald any longer. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) When I first came forward as a candidate for your sufferages they were good enough to inform me that they would be glad to support me for my own sake, but that they dreaded that one so young and inexperienced would become an easy prey to the wiles of that crafty intriguer, in fine that they could swallow me up, but that Sir John Macdonald was "really too bad." (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Well, sir, times have changed. How are we to explain this little anomaly? Have these gentlemen converted Sir John Macdonald? or is it possible that Sir John Macdonald has corrupted them? (Laughter.) I should really like to have an answer to this question at some convenient season. If, as I sincerely hope and trust, they really did succeed in turning Sir John Macdonald's last visit here to such good purposes as to have brought him, even for a time, to the due sense of the error of his ways, few things would afford me greater pleasure. I fear, however, that even if that were the case, his conversion must have taken place after, and not before, the demonstration in the Crystal Palace grounds; and what is still more to be lamented, that, if there be a particle of truth in the reports that have reached us from so many quarters of the right honorable gentleman's language and conduct at Whitby, at Lindsay, at Ailsa Craig, at Hagarsville, at St. Thomas, and at divers other places, I fear that his conversion cannot have been of a very durable character, and that his fall from grace (when once he left the pure atmosphere of Napanee) was both rapid and signal. (Cheers and laughter.)

THE TORY REACTION.

Sir John Macdonald boasts loudly of the so-called reaction in his favor. Certainly we do not expect to repeat. 1874. Such a majority as we then had is utterly unprecedented in our Parliamentary history, and indeed is hardly to be desired under our peculiar form of government; but never was anybody more woefully mistaken than is Sir John Macdonald in imagining, as he evidently does, that the crowds who come to see and hear him (for the most part out of pure curiosity) depart his enthusiastic partisans, or that all the carefully rehearsed stage-play in which he and his followers delight will influence the sturdy and intelligent voters of this great Province on the day of polling. (Hear, hear.)

SIR JOHN'S QUALITIES AS A LEADER.

Sir, no man can have come into close contact with Sir John Macdonald without perceiving that he possesses great knowledge of human nature (especially of its weakest parts), and great skill in trading thereon. I doubt if there ever was a party leader who understood better than he how to coax and cajole his friends or how to sow dissension in the ranks of his opponents. Then, too, he possesses great natural tact and debating power, backed by an enormous political and Parliamentary experience, and a very intimate acquaintance with the wants and passions of almost every section of our diverse and widely extended Dominion while his wit, though of a very Rabelaisian character and too often disfigured by coarseness and vulgarity, is nevertheless undeniable of its kind, and so is his excellent address and personal affability. Moreover, no one can dispute his immense vitality and versatility of character. He is what the Germans would call a "many-sided" man. Few men have better put in practice the apostolic precept of becoming all things to all men, though, I fear, for purposes and with results by no means such as the apostle either contemplated or would have approved of. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Lastly, Sir John Macdonald has always shown himself ready to sacrifice even his warmest friends at the shortest notice on the altar of the public good. But even Artemus Ward could never more patriotism in the disposal of his wife's relations. (Renewed laughter.) Keen laugh, but this is really a very valuable quality. War—civil politics are no schools for weak pities, and neither a great general nor a great statesman must hesitate about a sacrificing here or his troops on fitting occasions. To do him justice, Sir John Macdonald has always possessed this quality of a great leader in eminent abundance. (Cheers, hear, and laughter.)

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS.

Sir John Macdonald has always been a great believer in special attractions, and in this he has been wise in his generation. PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 29, 1877.

"Much Ado About Nothing"

Even after it had a week's reflection on its attempt to bully the Rev. Mr. Willoughby we were not very much astonished last Friday to find the Review glorying in its shame. This it does in "modestly" complimenting the writer of the letter signed "Temperance Mechanic" in its former issue, as well as by publishing a continuation of the attack on Mr. Willoughby, over the same assumed name. While it tries to creep out of its responsibility for the gross and unwarrantable attack on the Methodist body as a whole and its ministers in this locality in particular, by a string of empty platitudes about "a true tone of morals" and "honesty and integrity" it reminds one of Scriptural quotations from Satanic lips. If there is one thing we can specially compliment our Anti-Dunkin and spit-fire contemporary upon it is the happy choice of a heading for its leader, "Envy, Hatred and Malice;" for as the words convey the ideas, so the example of the combined dark passions is to be found below them.

The editor proper of the Review takes the moral role the while he hands the character of "heavy villian" once more to that "Temperance Mechanic" who was so able to furnish a quoted report of Mr. Willoughby's remarks. This stage figure pretends to devote himself specially and solely to Mr. Willoughby whom he accuses of acting "indecently throughout the recent Dunkin Act campaign" That is a matter of opinion merely, and of Anti-Dunkin opinion wholly. Yet this writer who singles out Mr. Willoughby personally for attack, and who declares maguiloquently that "with Mr. Willoughby alone has he broken lances," has not the manliness to fight fairly and openly; but hides himself behind the coward's mask at the same time he strains a point to bring a railing accusation against the reverened gentleman for having made a personal attack. What Mr. Willoughby said he said in his own proper person and like a man. His assailant in the Review aims arrows at him from a covert, like a sheak and a spiteful paltroon. He "break a lance!" Pshaw He evidently doesn't begin to know what chivalry means.

This foe in ambuscade who shoots at a courageous Christian gentleman,—addresses his alter ego as follows:—"I may just add, Mr. Editor, that I have no intention—nor do I think you have—of offending the Wesleyan Methodist body as a church." Here is a negative declaration of purpose which will hardly stand the light of facts. What, for instance must be the intention of the Review's sneer at those whom it called "itinerant temperance apostles," and its allusion to "the religious fervor and hysteria which is the outgrowth of the teachings of some of the clergy of this denomination?" If these phrases were not penned with the intention of "offending the Wesleyan Methodist body as a church" they must surely have been written without any intention whatever. Passing over the contemptuous use of the term "Methodist fanatic" we would ask if offence is not the plain purpose of the following choice clipping from the Review of the 16th. November:—

"But we cannot expect anything better when we look about us and see where the Methodist Church is being drifted by such religious hysteria and madness, which accompany the preaching of the doctrine of "sudden and sensible conversion." This applies to anything they take hold of. They work it to burning heat and then allow it to fall away into apathetic indolence and neglect. This distinctive feature of the Methodists of the present day is becoming more and more serious. They won't confine themselves to principles"

Nor is this all. We have the concealed coward giving advice to Mr. Willoughby in the following words:—

"Attend a little more to the religious workings of his Church—which I consider there is ample room for." Yet we are told there is "no intention of offending the Wesleyan Methodist body as a church!" Those who thus show that they have no intention of offending, flatly accuse Mr. Willoughby of such an intention, though he declared in his speech he had none.

The attack on the Minister in order defence of the liquor seller shows the kind of spiritual leanings the Review writers have, and where they desire to make friends. Rev. N. R. Willoughby is called a libeller," while Mr. Allan F. Huffman is referred to as "one of our most respected citizens!" The preacher is assailed with the epethet "indecent" and the publican perked up the back as a "respectable hotel-keeper!" The minister of the gospel that points the way to Heaven is accused of "two-faced presumption," whereas the dealer in the drink that makes men so they cannot enter Heaven is lauded as "a gentleman whose reputation will compare favorably with any business man in town!" Does the Review mean to point its readers to Mr. Huffman as an example of purity of life and usefulness of purpose before Mr. Willoughby?' If so it had better recommend an exchange of positions between the two.

All the Review has succeeded in doing by its attack on the Methodists and a Methodist parson is the drawing of the above comparison on Mr. Huffman, and the indorsing of that gentleman—whom we now pity—to believe he is a very ill used person indeed. We think he is too; but by his indiscreet friends When he and they talk of going into court with an action against Mr. Willoughby, they simply make themselves still more ridiculous than they did by their first remarks on his speech in Bradburn's Hall. It is a clear case of "much ado about nothing."

VACATION SPEECHES.

After the political pic-nics THE EXAMINER it will be remembered pointed out some of the advantages and disadvantages of such orations by the leaders of parties, and questioned whether after all the losses did not exceed the gains, so far as the country is concerned. Our chief objection to this class of speeches was their tendency to cheapen our chief men, and make their utterances at any time of less effect than they would be were they given only in answer to some greater demand of circumstance or popular sentiment. Our views on this subject were, not criticized, but spoken of by the local Opposition paper as an admission on our part that the speeches of the Reform leaders were weak, while it was not willing to make any admission as to the harangues of its party principles. We believe we did at the time compare the character of the speeches on either side, and certainly not to the disadvantage of the Reform orators; but the point of our chief fault-finding was not with the force or feebleness of any or all of the speeches but with the, to our mind, small pretext for their delivery, one and all, Reform and Conservative. Possibly the poor plodder, who with petty ingenuity tried to misconstrue our honestly expressed reflections into an evidence of party weakness, could not follow the line of thought taken by them; and being unable to understand any reference to political speeches without a party purpose, he naturally perpetrated his poor attempt at speaking of what he did not, and indeed could not comprehend. However we have found a Conservative paper with more brain somewhere around it; and one which is able to treat this subject with some degree of intelligence. The Guardian, published at Richmond, Quebec, says:—

"There is one feature of English political life which we would like to see copied in Canada, and that is the suspension of political discussion, and in its place the substitution of sensible and practical speeches during the parliamentary vacation, on some of the homely topics of social life, such as the prominent statesman of England are in the habit of delivering. Mr. Forster, Mr. Lowe Mr. Gladstone, Lord Derby and others do this as regularly as the season of rest comes round, and, in spite of the homelines of the subjects dilated upon there is nothing in them common place or trashy; all are refining and informing in the highest degree, and do immense good in educating the people to a proper understanding of their duties to each other, as well as their obligations to the State. How is it with us? We have vacation speeches too, quantum suf.; but what a contrast do they present to their English exemplars We are far from saying that the campaign addresses which have filled the papers for the past four months have been altogether trashy or destitute of merit. We do not say they have not been informing—nor do we belittle the importance of these deliverances upon public affairs; but have they not been overdone?"

While we are not ready to entirely agree with the Guardian, we can readily perceive a simularity between its views and those of THE EXAMINER. For instance we would not advocate the absolute "suspension of political discussion," from the platform during the vacation, nor, we believe, would the Guardian on occasions that call for an expression from public men, and which may arise at any time. And while we have admitted and do admit certain advantages derivable from the late pic-nic speeches, we hold that there were no reasonable pretexts for the setting-off of so many "big guns" every day or two during the summer. It was a great waste of ammunition, and a considerable straining of metal to begin with; and even an artillery review palls in interest after a few repititions, especially in rapid succession. These being our convictions on the matter we are ready to agree that the vacation deliverances on public affairs have been overdone. We have no desire to apologise for our own party, or to condemn the opposition, for that is not our purpose in this article; but we have to thank the Richmond Guardian not only for it, free and intelligent reference to the general question, but also for the preference it gives the Premier's late speech at Montreal as the best of all. The Guardian says of it:—

"There is a robustness and sincerity of tone in the speech which proclaim the Premier to be a man in dead earnest, honest and comprehensive in his views of personal duty to the State of which he is the head for the time being."

And again,

"Take him all in all he is a very able and gifted man. To the courage of opinion he joins the provoking dogmatism of a combative partizan; still only to such an extent as compels the belief that there is as little of the demagogue in him as is, perhaps, possible in a Canadian leader of a party."

These are the opinions be it remembered of a strongly Conservative paper, and they serve to prove the correctness of our former remark that one advantage of the overdone recess speeches was the bitter insight they gave into the character of the speakers. In this respect as in others the Reformers have no reason to shrink from a comparison.

THE Belleville Intelligencer says:—At length there seems a fair prospect of a settlement of the difficulties existing between the County and the Grand Junction Railway Company. A settlement may be reached on the terms that the Company pay the costs of the cases so far incurred, upon an agreement to do which effect litigation will be stayed. The Council on this morning's sitting appointed a committee consisting of Wm. Bell, James Reed, Aylesworth, the Warden and Reeve Ross, to confer this evening with the Directors of the road and report to the Council to-morrow.

POLITICAL DONATIONS TO CHURCHES.

There is a Bible Christian minister in Toronto named Webber. His church was in debt, as too many churches are, and he started out with the laudable purpose of collecting money from Christians to pay off that debt. How he went about his task will appear from his own showing. Mr. Webber after having been at the unenviable task of soliciting donations to his church wrote to the Observer the organ of his denomination, published at Bowmanville, giving an account of his trials. In the midst of his letter appeared the following sentence:—

"Another general point is, that Conservatives always treated me with gentlemanly courtesy and kindness—some more so than Mr. Tupper and Lady Macdonald. Reformers with scarcely an exception, and disliked me for the most part, and the "Grits" with positive incivility."

For this remark Mr. Webber was promptly taken to task by some of the many Reformers in the Bible Christian Church, and plainly told that he had gone out of his way in making political comparisons at all in connection with such a matter, and particularly in a religious paper. In last week's Observer Mr. Webber tries to explain himself, and in so doing shows very plainly the reasons for the scant courtesy with which he was met in some quarters. He says:—

"In using the terms, Conservative or Reformer, I had reference solely and only to those who make politics their profession."

Now here is the primary idea on which the whole of Mr. Webber's mistakes are based. It is that he considers there is a class of "professional politicians" with whom he may open a trade. This is a great mistake; for there is no class in Canada that make their living entirely by politics. There may be one or two men who approach such a condition, but there are none who will acknowledge they "make politics their profession." It is a distinction native to the mind of Mr. G. Webber, who, though he tells us he used the terms, Conservatives and Reformers, in this original view of his, does not deign to enlighten the world as to what distinctive place he assigns the term "Grit" as separate from the rest. In mentioning the names of Dr. Tupper and Lady Macdonald he surely includes them in his list of persons "who make politics their profession." There may be some excuse in so classing Dr. Tupper, but certainly, Lady Macdonald is rather an unique specimen of the "professional politician." So much for distinctions Mr. Webber can understand better than anybody else.

The whole explanation of how Mr. Webber "put his foot in it" is contained in the following sentence of his explanation:—

"Now, Sir, knowing that a large majority of our members were Reformers, in their preference and vote; and knowing that some here had received large and much needed and faithful help from our friends, I did think, that in a Denominational undertaking as this is, we had a right to look for sympathy and grateful acknowledgement in our time of need and sore perplexity."

The fact is that Mr. Webber tried to get money from prominent Reformers for a church, on the plea that most of the members of that church were Reformers. In so doing he degraded his own office, insulted the intelligence and honor of those from whom he asked church money on such a worldly wise plea, and presumed on the personal feelings of the members of his church in a way that may be considered offensive to good taste. Let any of our readers fancy a minister appealing to him for a subscription to a church on the ground that most of its members are of the same politics as the solicited, and he will readily understand that Mr. Webber was neither as wise as a serpent nor as harmless as a dove. That he applied to any leading Reformer in any such mean-spirited way, (and we have his own admission that he did,) implies the suspicion of trading for money on the votes political of the members of his church, and that of itself was cause sufficient that he should have been promptly and severely snubbed. His outburst in the Observer, comparing members of political parties may be considered a following out of the implied threat to Reformers when demanding money from them in the name of the strong Reform vote in the Bible Christian church. In short Mr. Webber in departing from the meek and lowly to indulge in the crafty, and in deserting the front of the Christian for the face of the charlatan, missed his mark entirely, and succeeded in making a very good nised donkey of himself.

The amusing part of Mr. Webber's last letter, after confessing his attempt to trade on the politics of his church, is that wherein he explains himself as follows:—

"I am simply astonished if one of our ministers or members has ever given to the Church, as a Reformer or Conservative. I believe, Sir, that they have given from other considerations altogether. They have given as Christians, and as Bible Christians. A little discrimination and reflection would sometimes save men a world of trouble."

If Mr. Webber in his solicitations outside the ministers and members of his church, had confined himself to looking upon those from whom he asked, not as Reformers or Conservatives, but as Christians, he would have been deserving of better treatment, and would, we are sure, have received more smiles and more money. A little discrimination and reflection would have saved him a world of trouble.

SEVERAL of the Conservative prints have been trying to break the force of Mr. Blake's exposure, of the extravagance in the Department of Justice under the late administration. They declare that the expenditure under Sir John included the "Premiership" as well as the Ministry of Justice, and pretend to think that the expenditure in Mr. Mackenzie's department should be added to Mr. Blake's figures. Now the Department of Public Works over which Mr. Mackenzie presides is a distinct branch, which is responsible for its own outlays of public funds. There is no Department of the Premiership; and the attempt of Sir John's apologists to account for the enormous waste of money in his Department on the plea that he was Premier is as weak and childish a plea as could well be advanced Sir John's friend had better try and get some better excuse for his extravagance, lest by trying to explain his expenses as Premier they got him into a worse fit than the conviction they have already passed on him by their "thin" apology. By the way, none of them have yet tried to explain how it was that the work of the Department of Justice was in such a disgracefully neglected state when the change of government took place, or why there should have been so much work left undone that has since been attended to at last costs. Perhaps Sir John's "official duties as Premier prevented him from doing the work of his Department. If so,' why has Mr. Mackenzie though Premier been able to keep up the work of the important Department of Public Works? Isn't it plain that there's a difference in the view.

THE Government has decided not to interfere with the course of the law in the case of Williams, the Weston murderer.

"Pref" O'Donoghue and the Irish Canadian.

Mentioning in sporting terms the success of the Irish Canadian newspaper in obtaining justice to "professors" from the Ontario Government, and that any influence he may have with the Conservatives, and their organs, the Mail and Telegram, ostensibly, in his favor were merely political claptrap, in that they not only asked that he be formally cleared with the convicted murderers of Scott, but that their pretended solicitude was put forward in such a way as to invite and make certain a rejection of the whole resolutions. We then asked why O'Donoghue did not surrender himself and demand a trial, and stated our conviction that were the proofs of the statements made in his favor laid fairly before the Minister of Justice, he would have justice done him. The Irish Canadian was then good enough to tell us that certain documents bearing on the case were with the Department of Justice, and it seems that these were only considered and acted upon; for we are now informed that on the 4th of October last an Order in Council was passed placing O'Donoghue on the same footing as the other North-West offenders. This policy we are further told has been approved by the Imperial Government, and the case may, we suppose, be considered settled: We wonder if the Irish Canadian will be thoroughly satisfied with this termination of its efforts in behalf of Mr. O'Donoghue: or if it will still try to keep up an O'Donoghue grievance in behalf of its new-found friends the Tories: we shall see now where the heart was thro' all its bluster.

THE WAR.

The war news assumes a more serious aspect daily for the Turks. Plevna is not expected to hold ont much longer. The Russians are narrowing their operations round the place rapidly, so that any moment may bring intelligence of its surrender or occupation, and then the chances are that Turkey must sue for peace. It is said that Russia is desirous of excluding England from peace regulations, but this will be impossible as her interests will require her presence and her sanction to whatever may be agreed on. The result of the contest is somewhat humiliating to both parties so far, and will tend to rob the Northern bear of the dread that has been attached to power in Europe, and, hitherto, she will not be in all probability permitted to attach territory to her already extended boundaries; as to do so would only add renewed fears of her aggressive policy The settlement of the Turkish internal government may rob it of the most inhuman features of her home management of affairs, and secure greater freedom of opinion without fear of persecution. But it is almost too soon to speculate on results.

THAT "CARD."

So Mr. Allan F. Huffman spoke out in last week's Review. He issued "a card," whether a trump or not, it was "a card." Possibly he has cards to spare now, since the Huffman House does only a "legitimate" business. Cards are forbidden in those quiet private rooms. Every room in the house is fitted up for "legitimate business," and it is nobody's business what that "legitimate business" may be. But as playing cards in private might not be "legitimate," and cannot be done in a house like the Huffman, Mr. H. prefers to play "cards" in public. Well, probably Mr. Willoughby will repent and apologise, when he knows what kind of "cards" are used in the Huffman House, as it is as plain that two and two make four that such silly, insolent, empty, and childish cards can injure nobody. Oh, no! No respectable young man can ever be injured by the Huffman House, if its bar is as harmless as its "card" table. But what will happen Mr. Willoughby? What does the law direct when a man tells the truth? What would it "direct" if Mr. Willoughby should say that the "groggery" in the Huffman House is full of danger—that it breeds drunkards—that that is the "legitimate" business of Mr. Huffman's bar. Would Mr. H. try to restrain a man from his "legitimate business" of speaking out the plainest truths in the most manly independant way? If so, he has got hold of the wrong man this time! Finally, what is involved in showing "no consideration to Mr. Willoughby's cloth?" Does Mr. Allan F. Huffman mean muscle? Does Allan know what is involved in swallowing a live Pastor? Does Allan value his health and comfort as much as he does his "reputation" professedly? Then let an humble editor advise him not to try and mix a manly, independant Methodist Dunkin Parson with his morning potatoes. If he should he'd experience a colic that a glass of his best brandy could never cure.

The following choice morsel is from the Port Perry Observer:—

"The Peterboro EXAMINER is terribly exercised over the Ashburnhamites because, forsooth, they dare take one step in the direction of the Dunkin Act without first obtaining the sanction of the EXAMINER, the self-styled patron of the measure. A number of the good folks of that village have applied to have the Dunkin by-law submitted to a vote of the villagers, but because they dared to take a step without consulting his magnificence of the EXAMINER he dubs them Anti-Dunkinites.

We did not know before that the EXAMINER was "terribly exercised," but we have noticed signs of violent commotion in the whiskey circle of Ashburnham and Lakefield, and they are not composed of men who usually consider the "sanction of the EXAMINER." True this paper is a patron of the measure known as the Dunkin Act, and that too plainly enough to need no self assertion of the fact. It did not dub the "good folks" referred to by the Observer Anti-Dunkinites for any other reason that they are Anti-Dunkinites at heart though before long they are likely to become Dunkinites in practice by the passing of the by-law for which they petitioned.

The St. John Freeman is the only daily paper, in the Dominion in any sensible degree representative of the Roman Catholic element of the population. The case of John O'Donoghue, of Manitoba rebellion fame, having been imported into the election contest in Quebec East and strong resolutions passed by the Conservative Irishmen of that constituency, the Freeman refers to the whole matter in the following forcible language:—"The Tories are trying to persuade the Irish Catholics of Quebec East that there is something in the action of the Dominion Government with regard to Mr. O'Donoghue, who took a conspicuous part in the North West troubles, which they should regard as an injury and an insult to Irishmen, and something in the humbug resolutions written by Sir John A. Macdonald last session, and moved by Mr. Cuthbert and seconded by Mr. White, for which they should feel grateful to the grossly compounded Tory mixture. It is disgusting to find men who should have common sense and self respect entering these wiles one object is to hoodwink the Irish and entice them into voting for the Tory candidate, while they insult their intelligence."

Father Stafford's Opinions.

It has frequently been said here, as elsewhere, that Father Stafford, the well known and highly respected priest of Lindsay, is opposed to the Dunkin Act, and though the statement has been time and again refuted, the falsehood still crops up wherever it is thought it will serve the purpose of influencing votes. To meet this misstatement the letter to which the following is an answer was written. It will be seen that Rev. Father Stafford distinctly refers to "fellow labourers" in favor of the Dunkin Act and expresses a hope that he may yet "say a word to help them." We commend the Reverend gentleman's letter to the attention of our readers. Here it is:—

LINDSAY, Nov. 10, 1877.

MY DEAR MR. MADDEN,—I cannot go up to Guelph at present, perhaps I may be able to go up next spring or summer—I do not like to refuse altogether. I do not like to let any opportunity pass for saying a word against the use of liquor. I am daily becoming more and more fanatical—not against the abuse—the whole world is against that—but against the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. I think the use that is made of strong drink in our day and everywhere among our people, is a mistake. I think we would be happier more comfortable, richer, better educated, better physically, morally, socially, politically, and religiously—better every way—much better—altogether without liquor than even with a little of it. I do not think there can be found the shadow of the shade of the semblance, even, of one good reason why the use of liquor should be tolerated, as it is at present. Even the medical profession is becoming more and more against it every day, at least the leading men in that noble profession. They are prescribing liquor less frequently and with more caution, such as they observe in the prescription of other powerful drugs. But even if the whole profession recommended its use medically, I, as a clergyman, from my point of view and on account of the dreadful effects it has on the immortal part of man, would say to the sick "don't take it." It is doing too much harm to both body and soul. Don't taste it. I would not risk one immortal soul for all the good to be got out of liquor. This is my view of this matter and there is no fanaticism about it; there is no exaggeration in it; to exaggerate you must go beyond the truth. In this case such a thing is an impossibility, for the very simple reason that you cannot get at the whole truth. No tongue can tell the evils caused by strong drink, because they project into eternity.

Meantime we must all work on with patience, hold what we have and look for more. Please tell your fellow laborers that I thank them for the invitation and hope I may meet them and perhaps say a word to help them before long.

Your obdt. servt.
M. STAFFORD.

W. FAIRWEATHER & Co's Clothing is cheaper than the cheapest, and the Order Work turned out by Pete Simmons cannot be equalled, because he is the Master Cutter in this town, and keeps nothing but first-class workmen.

AN IMPARTIAL OPINION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—If, as has been stated by a Review writer, there are many Methodists who disapprove of the Rev. Mr. Willoughby, all they have to do is to drive him out of their church, and he will find other denominations ready to take in such a valiant supporter of the truth. The world wants more ministers such as he, who are not afraid to apply the Gospel standard to practical everyday life I would think little of the church that is not proud of him.

Yours very truly,
PRESBYTERIAN.

A Youth's definition of Respectability

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The young men of Peterborough have to thank you for your able upholding of the cause most of them fought for,—the Dunkin Act—and which they are going to fight for again in Ashburnham. They thank you too for defending a preacher they think a very great deal of from men who pitched into him because he helped to make their cake dough, But the more he is rubbed at the brighter he will shine. I think he was just right when he said the respectable hotels were most dangerous to the young; and he might have said the old too. No fellow who isn't a gone case already would be seen drinking in a low place; but a chap if he drinks at all doesn't think so much of going into a respectable house to treat or be treated. That's just where the trouble is, and how a fellow gets in the habit of dropping into bar-rooms. But when you come to look at it, what is respectable? I think a respectable place is where you can take your mother or your sister, or a married man can take his wife; and that isn't to a bar-room. So you see none of them are thoroughly respectable. Even the hotel-keepers who are called respectable think it beneath them to hand over the drinks, and so they hire a bar-keeper to do their dirty work, while they swell it on the money got from folks who are fools enough to pay for it for their plaugy drinks. And if it is such a very respectable business what are they so scared of having anything said about it for? That's what I'd like to know. My name to print is

YOUNG MAN.

WHAT ABOUT THE PARK?

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR:—A good deal has been said from time to time, about a Town Park, but it has always ended in talk. If the people really desire such an institution, I don't see any better opportunity to satisfy them than by the acquisition of what is usually called the "Priests' Park Lot." This land is favourable for such a purpose and its situation is all that can be desired, and I have no doubts can be obtained on favourable terms. And the land will be a safe investment, I would suggest to the proper authorities the desirability of ascertaining whether this property can be had, and its price, and terms of payment, and should these be reasonable, I would recommend the Council to purchase it.

Yours, &c.,
CITIZEN.

REVIEW vs METHODIST CHURCH

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR.—Can you tell me what's the matter with the Review man? He's got Methodism on the brain. In the mint not hatching bricks right? Has the defeat of the Water Works by-law turned his milk o' human kindness sour? or is it that the Dunkin by-law business has made him daft? Surly he has some friends to cheer him up a wee. I have sometimes had my doubts as to what kirk he ganged tae, but I am now sure on one point: he is no' a Methodist. He has never been the subject of INSTANTANEOUS AND SUBLIME CONVERSION, that's certain. for he is still in the gall of bitterness." He's no' a believer in BAPTISMAL REGENERATION judging by last week's paper. He is unregenerate still—and I am certain that he has never been properly dipped. You can't make much of that kind without putting them to soak. Perhaps it's the soaking these Antis like—but a good rinsing would do him no harm. But seriously, Mr. Editor, will the law of this land let a man whose stomach is sour abuse people and call ugly names in his newspaper if he happens to own one? It may be according to a formula existing in bogey Anti-Dunkinites offices; but I have failed to find it with those who hold honour above the resentment of petty spleen and petty spite. At all events it is not in the book which is used in all churches. Perhaps the Review man will rise and explain, in what book he finds it? Or is it a bit of human nature?

Yours, &c.,
"A REAL MECHANIC."

Postage Stamps, Postal Cards and Envelopes for sale at Wilson & Davis'.

A WORD.—While half the printers in the town, and the proprietors of the Dunkin Bill, are congratulating themselves that the Dunkin Act was carried by a majority of 1,000 instead of 500 as was expected, the audience present gave their verdict in favor of "the terror of tyrants and the tongue of nations," thus scoring one more victory for the press.

All kinds of Office and Pocket Diaries for 1878 for sale at WILSON & DAVIS'.

Fine assortment of Pocket and Family Bibles, for sale at WILSON & DAVIS'.

THE sentence of death passed on Smith, the Castleton abortionist, has been commuted to imprisonment for life, following the precedents set in the cases of Davis and Dr. Sparham. In the case of Williams, the Weston murderer, it is understood that the law will be allowed to to take its course.

COUNTY OF WELLINGTON.—At the close of the first day's polling in Wellington on the Dunkin Bill, there was a large majority against it.

GEO. CALVERT, the well-known Ops market gardener, visited Port Hope market on a recent Saturday, and writes the Lindsay Post of what he saw there. He concludes with these reflections:—"It would do our housekeepers good to see how they feed fowl and get them up for the market. You will see more farmers' wives in Port Hope on a Saturday market than you will see in Lindsay in a year. I am afraid we shall never have a market in Lindsay to equal Port Hope. Peterborough is just as good as Port Hope. If our farmers would make an attempt to come to the market every Saturday with something we would soon have a market. Let the seller and the buyer meet and the best article will fetch the best price.

Consumption Cured.

AN old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 126 Powers Block, Rochester, N. Y. 48-4t

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 29, 1877

Five Saturdays next month.

Christmas Day falls on Tuesday this year.

The County Council meet to-day on the Dunkin Bill, at 2 p. m.

The weather for the past week was changeable enough to produce every variety of colds.

Improving.—Our genial station master, Mr. Gladman, is looking considerably improved in health since his vacation.

The Ontario Registrature has been called together for the despatch of business. The House will meet on January 9th next.

Board of Trade.—A meeting of the Board of Trade will be held in the Council Chamber this (Thursday) evening, at 7.30 p. m. A full attendance is requested.

No Quorum.—There was no meeting of the Snow Shoe Club on Friday evening last, there being no quorum. The annual meeting will be held on Wednesday evening next.

Personal.—Mr. John Dixon, B. A., of this town, has been appointed Mathematical Master of the Collingwood High School. An assistant English Master has yet to be appointed.

On Bail.—That Charles Stapleton is calling a meeting in the Council Chamber to-night, to bring out an Anti-Dunkin Mayor, Councillors, Constable and Town Clerk. Go it Charley.

The Dunkin campaign is not at its hight in Ashburnham and Lakefield yet. And now the Anti-Dunkinites of Apsley want us to carry the by-law for them there. Well, just wait awhile, it will be all right.

Is still pay day in want of first class boots and shoes to go to Wm. McCullagh's, next door to the EXAMINER Office, where they will get a reduction of from one to two dollars on each pair. All work warranted. 47-1t.

Temperance.—The Rev. Mr. Laird, of Oshawa, will deliver an address in the Good Templars' Hall this evening at 8.00. There will be an admission charge of 5 cents, to meet expenses connected with the Blue Ribbon Club.

The Elections.—The Nominations for Mayor and Aldermen in cities, and for Reeves, Deputy Reeves and Councillors in rural municipalities, will be held on Monday, December 31st. The elections will be held on the Monday following.

The Cobourg Sentinel says: "Mr. Calcutt, of Peterborough, has had, we hope, a successful season with his boats. They have been a great accommodation to Cobourg people, and as this route to Peterborough becomes better known, will, we trust, be universally patronized."

We notice that a number of our exchanges refer to one of the Anti-Dunkin mercenaries as "Mr. Brooks, of Peterborough." Now we wish it to be distinctly understood that the Mr. Brooks alluded to does not belong to Peterboro', for which Peterborough is duly thankful. That's all about that thing.

Words of Wisdom from the Dundas Banner:—"Now is about the time of the year when people do well to keep their front doors bolted. The tramps are round looking for overcoats and other comforts, and are making raids into peoples' halls for the purpose of observation and profit. Look out for them."

Thieving in Asphodel Township.—The thieves have visited Mr. W. H. Elliott, Collector of Taxes for the township, and in consequence he mourns the loss of $262.62 that he had collected for the township. Sneak thieves are on the look out around Norwood, several clothes lines have been stripped lately.

Personal.—Mr. T. M. Millar, son of James Miller, Esq., of Otonabee, has passed a very successful examination in medicine at Edinburgh, and is now a Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh. He is also an L. M., and L. R. C. P., Edinburgh. Our young Canadians make their mark wherever they go.

The Weather.—Heavy and frequent rains have been the great characteristic of the present year. So much rain has not fallen in a number of years, and farmers reports its effect as excellent, whilst the swamps are well filled, and they look forward to a favorable winter, which expectation it is to be hoped may be fully realized.

Personal.—Mr. Blackadar, late of this town, read an able and interesting essay on "The Poets of Canada," at a public temperance entertainment held last week at Ottawa, in connection with the Reformed Episcopal church. Mr. Blackadar is a very clever young man. When he left Peterborough for Ottawa he left many warm friends behind him.

Referring to the Review's statement that some Peterborough hotel keepers are charging ten cents a drink to all the old topers who voted for the Dunkin By-law, and others refusing to give them liquor under any consideration, the Lindsay Post says:—"This is a capital plan on the part of the hotel keepers. They should treat every body in that way."

A Good Purchase.—Mr. Robert Jackson, of Otonabee, has recently purchased from Mr. John Maguire, of the same place, his farm containing 230 acres at the nominal figure of $35 per acre. Competent judges say that he has succeeded in getting a good bargain; making by the transaction about $1,600. This is the cheapest farm that has been sold for some time.

Think of It.—During this changeable weather, it is important to guard against the insidious inroads of disease, and especially of colds. It is hazardous for a person to lay aside an overcoat or cloak when going out, because the atmosphere is milder. The constant exercise of common sense in what are considered minor matters will often prevent sickness and death.

Social Dance.—On Wednesday evening last a social assembly was enjoyed in the Calage House. Quite a number of the young people who were favored with an invitation were present and enjoyed themselves tripping to the merry music of Freeman's quadrille band, which was in attendance. It continued until the small hours were reached. The table was laid out in the hosts usual good style.

St. Pauls Church.—Major Malan who was for some years a missionary in Africa, and is on a visit to some of his friends in Canada, will preach in St. Paul's Church on Sunday evening next. On Monday evening at 7.30 p.m. the annual missionary meeting will be held in St. Paul's Church, when addresses will be delivered by Rev. Alexander Ball, Rev. N. R. Willoughby and Major Malan. All are cordially invited.

Taxes.—The assessed value of the Village of Ashburnham is $393,000 The Licenses last year amounted to ⅓ of $370 or $120. Therefore the rate to raise that amount, would be nearly half a mill on the dollar, so that any increase to make this amount would be only half a mill on the dollar, or for $250,10 cents; $500,15 cents; for $1000,25 cents; not enough to hurt anyone, and this ten without reference to advantages accruing from sobriety and industry.

The Mayoralty.—Mr. H. H. Smith is promising good behaviour if elected to the Civic Chair in 1878. Councillor Smith will be asked to explain his connection with the Licensy Victuallers Association before he can receive the support of those whom he deceived last year. Then there is that $1,200 he voted away to please the Association, and other little things not pleasing to the citizens that require explanation. Let all the candidates be fairly before the people before promises are made. There is time enough yet.

Furs.—The fur market is very much demoralized at present. Advices from the great European markets and from New York report furs as almost unsaleable at any price. In consequence prices in this part of the country rule lower now than, probably, ever was known before. And as a recent sale by hunters and trappers of their season's spoil at Minden, prime mink sold at from 60 cents to $1.25, and a few inferior skins sold at 25 cents each. There has not been much profit for the fur hunters this season, evidently.

Mechanics Institutes.—The season of long evenings is with us, and the question as to how and where to pass the evenings pleasantly and profitably is an important one to young men. The Mechanics' Institute offers excellent facilities for this purpose, interesting literature being provided there, whilst those who prefer to read at their homes or in their boarding houses will find the library well stocked with books of the best kind, carefully selected. The Institute is one of the foremost in the Province, and we hope to see its membership still further increased.

Municipal Appointments.—The time for his promises is upon us. Even those who did not do a wise act during the year will now be ready to promise economy and liberality with almost the same breath. Already councillor Smith is canvassing for the Mayoralty. He languished last year in the Licensed Victuallers for that appointment. Then vested interests—of the publican money—supported all their candidates through the year, and now comes forward to be their candidate for the civic chair. It is no use, however. He may as well possess his spirit in calmness. He won't be elected.

"Queer" Business.—The Toronto Spectator says: "Very few of our hunters are so unsuccessful in deer-stalking as the two young ladies the principals of the following incident; A few days ago Rose and Gertrude Breckenridge, daughters of Mr. J. Breckenridge, of Belmont, while in the vicinity of Long Lake, noticed a large deer madly rush into the water, evidently pursued and slightly wounded. Without a moments hesitation the two girls procured a boat, armed themselves with clubs, and set after the deer. They soon encountered the aggravated animal, when the girls courageously commenced the attack with their clubs, and after a short contest brought his deership to bay, and had him conveyed to their home—a proof of their great victory and prowess."

The Tandy Brothers' Concert.—Posters and programmes will be issued this week giving full particulars of the concert in behalf of the George street Methodist church funds, in Bradburn's Hall on Wednesday December 5th. Many things combined to make the concert a success. The Tandy brothers in former visits have aroused more enthusiasm than any other Specialists who have visited Peterborough for several years past. Miss Barr received high encomiums last year. These three names are sufficient to incite large expectations. The church choir will give a couple of anthems. Mrs. Chambers —always well received will give one piece. Already, a week in advance, one hundred and sixty, or more, reserved seats have been secured. As only a limited number of seats can be had, parties interested should call at Rubidge's book store and secure a seat without delay.

Advertising.—An exchange correctly remarks:—"It is amusing to see how quick some business men are taken by any novelty in the shape of advertising, which does not often last longer than for an agent to collect his bills. The men who patronize these fellows are usually the ones who never advertise in the newspapers, are constantly asserting that "advertising don't pay." We do not wonder at their arriving at this conclusion after paying out their money for "boards," "cards," "scrapbooks," etc, from which they never receive any corresponding benefit. Any advertisement in a newspaper appears new and fresh every week in the year, while these new advertising dodgers are posted conspicuously for a week or two, and then taken to the rear. Judicious advertising always pays, but advertising, like everything else, can be done very injudiciously.

Vennor's latest prediction is as follows:—The present balmy weather will abruptly terminate towards or in proximity to the 25th of the present month, and probably give place to a sharp spell of weather, with sleet and snow. I shall not be surprised should the waters become pretty well ice locked as in 1874 in the latter part of November or the early part of December. This condition, however, will be of short duration, and will speedily give place again to rains and open weather during December and January. Consequently, should the waters escape this first pitch of the winter, navigation will probably be open to an unusually late date. To all intent and purposes, however, our winter of 1877-8 will be upon us towards the last week of the present month; but this, as I have already several times stated, bids fair to be gloomy, wet and open, as well as short.

They Will not Play.—We have been requested by a member of the "Musical Society" to say that the Society will not take part in the concert to be given next Wednesday evening in Bradburn's Hall, in behalf of the George street Methodist church funds. And now we proclaim that the violins won't play! And why! We don't know all the facts, but we do know this, that violin number one consented to take part in the concert previous to the Dunkin contest, but when the contest was over this same violin—and it is a temperance violin too—refused to assist. Well why was this bow hung up! Rumor says that because the membership of the Methodist church dare to vote against the interest of "tavern property." The indignation of one man, in the fold, was aroused. Things very light can show the winds direction. The smallest objects in creation can fill some places, and so a man incapable of preventing manly expression of opinion, may control a fiddle. "So hang up the fiddle and the bow." No white gloves can be soiled in behalf of this incorrigible church. The motly rank and file! To dare to vote against tavern property, against the polite social glass, against the fashionably equipped side-board, against a glass of brandy when a man has a colic!!!! No! never shall swell "music swell" for such a crowd!! Well we ask seriously, how much will the concert lose by all this? We mistake the people of this town if it will spoil the sale of one ticket. The Tandy Brothers and Miss Barr will attract. They are sure of a crowd. The choir will receive a hearty welcome too. The absence of the violins will cause no earthquake. The Methodist church can live without fiddles.

TOWN COUNCIL

The Council met on Monday evening last in the Council Chamber, pursuant to adjournment. Present, Councillors Millar, Dumble, Baptie, Yelland, Rountree, Patterson, McBain and Cahill.

The Mayor being absent Councillor Baptie was called on to fill the chair pro tem

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

From R. Kingan and others asking that the Midland Railway be compelled to pay the rent our due the town, for the use of Bethune street.—Referred to the town Solicitor.

From T. C. Thompson Secretary of the Eye and Ear Infirmary Toronto acknowledging with thanks the grant of $20.00 from the town of Peterborough.—Received.

From F. E. Burnham Secretary of the Musical Society, asking for a remission of the taxes of the Society.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From R. Wescott and others asking for a sidewalk from the south of the town. On motion the material was given them, the Petitioners to do the work under the supervision of the street inspector.

From John Gallaher asking for the remission of his taxes.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From Mr. M. O'Donnel asking for some remuneration for drawing water to two fires.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From T. Bradburn asking for some repairs on Stuart street.—Received.

From Mrs. Wright asking for an approach to be erected to her new dwelling.—Referred to street Inspector.

FINANCE REPORT.

The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts.—

J. R. Stratton, printing	$43.35
J. A. Delaney, balance of account for water for the streets	100.00

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS CAHILL, Chairman.

The report was received and adopted.

DUNKIN ACT BY-LAW.

On motion of Councillor Dumble, the By-law to enforce the Temperance Act of 1864 in the town of Peterborough, was read a first and second time, on a vote being taken to give it the third reading it was lost, there being only seven Members of the Council present, and taking a majority of the whole Council to give a By-law the third reading.

Mr. Yelland asked for some assistance for Mrs. Walsh, as she was in great need.—Referred to the Charity Committee with power to act.

Mr. Millar, asked why it was that Gas Lamps were put up in the first, second and third wards, and not in the fourth, as a resolution had been passed some time ago, for the erection of lamps in the fourth ward, it appeared strange that the fourth ward should not have a few lamps, the other wards all being well supplied.

Mr. Dumble said the frost had not in when they were laying the main pipes north and the Gas Company had to stop, but if the weather kept open for a while no doubt but that lamps would be put up in the fourth ward.

The Council then separated.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

THE ANNUAL SERMON TO THE ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY,

Preached by the Rev. A. Bell.

On Sabbath evening last the Rev. A. Bell preached the Annual Sermon to the St. Andrew's Society here, in the St. Andrew's Church.

The rev. gentleman took for his text the words:

"Who so looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, the man shall be blessed in his deed."

To acknowledge the religion of Jesus once would have been a signal for persecution. Now it is looked on as respectable, and by many considered a mark for favor. Whatever they may be at heart most men try to keep up an outward show, and strive to make others believe that they have, at least, a fair regard for religion. All admit that without the sincerity of the heart religion is profitless, and that, unless the life and the profession correspond, whatever show may be made it must savor of hypocrisy. To have a name to live, and yet be dead, in one of the saddest and most pitiable conditions that a man could occupy. Yet, notwithstanding the readiness of men to admit these facts, they go on to please themselves, and try to make others believe that they do little wrong, while calling "Lord, Lord!" they openly neglect, perhaps refuse, to do what the Lord says.

It is on this account we must again and again remind gospel hearers of the sincerity that ought to rule both heart and life, and the holy harmony in which the profession and the conduct should still be found. And it is this consistency between profession and life that I want to bring before you to-night, and to impress upon your hearts and memory. I will not spend our time then in praising Scotland and Scotchmen, as some tastes and prejudices might require—neither need my praise. It is as professing christian men bound together in a common work, to help the needy and to relieve the distressed, that I address you. And turning to the text, we want you to think,

First—Of the "Law of Liberty."

This we take to mean the gospel—the whole Word of God revealed for our salvation; and in the sense in which our Saviour used it when He said to the Jews who believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make ye free."

And this glorious message of salvation may well be called the law of liberty, for it, as well as the Mosaic code, has its fixed principles,—its settled modes of operation. As surely as the law of light cannot admit darkness into its domains, so surely the gospel of liberty cannot connive at bondage in the heart in which it is established. The principal of love is both the governing and the operating power. The gospel, too, has all the authority of law. It never wavers in any of its teachings. It is positive—no alternative. It points to one door of escape only, and only one way by which the heart can be made holy. It gives us no choice between life by accepting its provisions, and death by rejecting its terms. But if we are confined to one source of safety, how can that be called liberty? Answer: The gospel only secures us the freedom of doing right, and of being right. The highest of all liberty is the freedom of acting so that neither penalty nor fear shall follow when tried by the highest of all standards of life and action—the mind of God. And no known law but that of salvation through Jesus Christ can secure us this freedom To us serving in worse than Egyptian bondage it proclaims liberty. It tells of deliverance the greatest that the soul of man can crave—of freedom the most blessed in which man could walk—casts around us a bond whose drawings are the purest joy.

It delivers the head—frees the heart—gives light to the feet—puts into the mouth a song of gladness. The man who walks by its direction need fear no evil—may wave defiance at the fetters sound, and follow where it leads happy in its liberty, and joyful in the assurance that it shall guide his step to that fair, free and peaceful land where love shall cast out all fear, and the Christ-made-free shall sing their joy, glorified in the rest of God.

It is a perfect law of liberty. Nothing can be added to make it more complete than it is No work of ours can give it greater efficacy. Additions can only hamper its perfect operations and mar the beauty and the perfection of its work. Take part away and the escape of the sinner is impossible. It is sufficient for every case, wanting in none. The atonement made needs not to be made again, so that sin once removed is forever hid—the conscience once purged is for ever free—the soul once cleansed needs no more washing—and washed, the man is free to exercise himself in those Christ-like duties which then become the joy of his life.

Perfect, it reaches to every part—fits into every thought and desire of the heart—finds a home in every power of the mind, and unites the whole in the joyous liberty and work of love, and the man exhibits to the world the glory of his freedom by weaving into daily life the beautiful and living patterns of bowels of mercies, brotherly kindness and charity, of those pure and lovely and good report—things, these which are the first and the highest fulfilment of law, and which, next to the fellowship of Jesus and the enjoyment of God Himself, are the first, and the highest, and the noblest use of life. If the Son, therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

Second—Think how we are to honor this "perfect law of liberty."

Not hearers only, but doers of the work. The man who is right looks into the law not from curiosity, but to learn—not simply to know, but to practice. He looks, and he continues looking—searches as for hidden riches, and finding, he treasures up—not like the miser's hoarding, but to put to usury, and in the increase for the Master get a fuller measure of that whole soul satisfaction which can be found only in the peace and the favor of God. He is not like the man who, beholding his natural face in a glass, goes away, and straightway forgets what manner of man he was; but looking into the mirror of the word he marks the character of every thought and motive and act of life, that he may know what to remove and in what to seek amendment. He learns, he believes and he proves the reality of his faith by the sincerity and the spirit with which he enters into and goes through works of good. Formality he hates—the company of the dissembler he shuns—the seat of the scorner he avoids. He speaks, and his heart is free from guile. He cries, "Lord, Lord?" and in the sincerity of his heart he strives to do what his Lord says. He vows, and to the best of his ability he pays his vow. It is here that the failure of so many professing godliness become conspicuous. They pride themselves in name and connection—make a profession—seek a show. When religion is easy and pleasing, and won't interfere with worldly pursuits, they can bear its presence—listen to its teachings, but the moment it interferes with choice pursuits—the getting of gain—stands in the way of some prejudice—demands love for hatred and candour for cunning, it becomes displeasing, is scorned of requiring too much, and men turn away saying to the pursuing conviction—the pressing claim—"not now, wait till a more convenient season.", Think how many hear and have no inclination to obey, how many come to worship, who come not from the family altar, and who never think of going home to approach the throne of grace,—how many cry, "Spare me, O God," who never think of sparing others!—how many hear with satisfaction while Heaven and its glories are described! Jesus, His sufferings and love are spoken of, and the virtues of the godly and the prospects of the converted are set forth. Yet when the thrill of the moment is past, go away as unconcerned and as unmoved as if it had no application to them, are as ready as ever to embrace the world, and through its hardening love to disregard the claims of both God and man. They are self-deceivers, blind themselves, trampling on their own safety and with haughty hands pushing away their own mercy. You must not be as they. We trust you have not so learned Christ. Follow not their example, but look into the law of liberty, and keep looking till you find the word that speaks to your heart, and hold it fast, and see it, still, by its living power it constrained you to leave every path and refuge and work of darkness, to live and walk in the light of God. You are professed christians, bound together to do a christian work. You have not only a name but a Master also to honor. Then be not as clouds without rain wells without water—hardened wayside hearers disappointing both sowers and reapers. You have the word. You have looked into the law of liberty—continue in it and do the work. Go where the word directs. Whatever it enjoins be faithful and earnest in doing. What it forbids avoid. Linger not in doubtful paths. The moment you find yourself away from the clear path of the word return at once to the place of safety. You are pledged as christain men to do your work—then see, Jesus is before you—the weak, the friendless, the needy and the suffering were His care. To them He gave His help. Follow Him and boast not of country or of name in this. Let your deeds be your glory. Let not professions, but living acts, redound to the praise of the name and the land you delight to honor. Do your work first for the master's sake, and after that as much for country's sake as you choose, and you shall prove yourselves to be not the followers of a disciple, but the followers of the disciple's Lord,

Third.—There is a reward for faithfulness. "This man shall be blessed in his deed." God never asks a man to serve Him for nothing. God always has it so that it is our highest interest to honor His word and will. Doing right, the testimony of the conscience is an unfailing source of happiness. The highest earthly pleasure, the richest earthly gain, the sweetest human joy could not for a moment be compared to the flow of holy peace that feasts the soul where God approves. It is a good—a blessing—a continual feast. The man who continues in the word is constantly getting good. The satisfaction of heart experienced and the consciousness of God's approval while he goes on sometimes sorrowing, sometimes rejoicing, make up a portion for the soul which the whole world could not purchase, which neither the frowns and tortures of men, nor the threats of the world, nor the fears of death could induce or force it to forego. It is in doing that the blessing comes. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." Here is a blessing surely—fullness of good—a rich reward—the Father's love, and Jesus' love, and Jesus manifested to the heart,—what more? What higher good could the soul desire? What richer blessings could it crave? What rest beyond this could it enjoy? Yet all are his who look into the law of liberty and continue in it—"not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word." Worthy object you have in view. Worthy resolve to have no intoxicating liquors on your table. Why not resolve to be wholly free and never let it return, never more to be entangled in that yoke of bondage.

The sermon was earnestly and clearly delivered, and was listened to with wrapt attention during its delivery.

MILLBROOK.

The Dead's Alive.—Mr. Martin requests us to state that he is worth two dead men yet, and that he did not go up in the flames, when his house was burned, as we were informed that it was supposed he did, and as stated in our last. We are pleased, therefore, to announce that his time has not yet come.—Messenger.

LAKEFIELD.

(From our own Correspondent.

About a week ago our hotel-keepers not being satisfied with the license law as it stands at present, they, in their wisdom resolved to have the Temperance Act of 1864, known as the Dunkin Act, submitted to the Village; and last Saturday they (the tavern-keepers) had the necessary requisition signed by about 30 ratepayers, and presented it to the Clerk of the village to be submitted to a vote of the ratepayers, which vote will be taken on the 21st December next. But I think the hotel-keepers are sorry for what they have done, as they are getting more heeps to pass the By-law than they anticipated. About two thirds of the Village being determined that the By-law will be passed, as requested. By this it will be seen that the hotel-keepers and the Temperance men are on the one side, if you can believe the requisition. The first meeting was held on Saturday evening last, although a very disagreeable evening, the meeting was largely attended, there being about 200 present. After the meeting had been opened by prayer, three resident ministers who were present made short addresses, advocating the passing of the Bill, after which Mr. Rose, Bible Agent from Toronto, addressed the meeting at some length, reviewing the working of the Dunkin Bill in other places, and urging upon the ratepayers to have the Bill passed in Lakefield, and show other villages that they two are temperate. Mr. Nevil explained how the Act worked in Lennox and Addington, and said that great improvements in the morals of the people could be seen. There were a less number of prisoners in the county gail, and an improvement which he, and every one else, had witnessed was the absence from the the barroom doors of the crond of loafers that used to hang around to the annoyance of Ladies, when passing. He said that this was entirely done away with; and if such would be the case in Peterborough and Lakefield, no one would dare to say that he had not accomplished something. He closed his remarks eloquently, and giving his opinion that the Bible taught all men to be teetotalers, and if we desired to be strong and healthy men, we should be teetotalers, and he hoped that all present would support and vote for the passing of the Bill. The meeting which was largely "Dunkin" was then brought to a close by prayer and the Benediction, after which the requisition to the County Council was duly signed by the Ratepayers before leaving the Hall.

To the Electors of the East and West Riding of the County of Peterboro',

My object in addressing you at this particular time is to induce you, if I can, to organize and carry out a plan of action, whereby you will secure to yourselves your rightful part in, not only the election but in the nomination of your candidates. I want you, as of old times, to be something more than mere voting machines, compelled to vote for those in whose nomination you had no voice, and in regard to which you were not even thought worthy of being consulted, to be something more than political nomenclature, acting at the mere beck and call of some two or three ambitious men, but I want you to be acknowledged and consulted, and your influence felt in the choice of your candidates, in order that such choice may readily represent your wishes and feelings.

I believe I am safe in saying that some politicians think that the people are intended to be the passive instruments of their own ambition, and that it is only necessary to acknowledge their power when asked for their votes, and that, when given, they are to be again left to their accustomed insignificance. This was not the way in the early period of your history, as many still living can bear me witness; but it has of late years become so, and will to continue just to keep as you submit to such treatment. You have, however, the remedy in your own hands, and if you but apply the remedy as you ought to apply it, you will soon find yourselves masters of the situation, and your intelligence and your rights will be duly estimated.

I have no personal interest in this matter outside of Peterboro. I only claim to be one of the rank and file of the voters. I have no favors to ask of any one; but I have seen and felt the injustice of what has now become an organized system of favoritism and exclusion in our elections, and I have resolved in so far as I can, to resist such treatment in the future and to demand that you, the whole body of the electors shall participate in the nomination and choice of our representatives. And I accordingly call upon you to support me in this good work, and to see that for the time to come, you occupy your rightful position in this matter, and that the next candidates for election in these ridings shall be in truth and in fact the candidates of your choice, and the next representative the result of such choice. I have often felt humiliated at witnessing the apparent indifference with which you submitted to this isolation and exclusion, but I trust now to see a change in this respect, and that, for the future, you will take care to hold your rightful position, and to exercise fully and independently in our elections those rights to which you are entitled.

It used to be the practice here in former times for the electors to form and keep in close working order, local organizations in every township, where the people were accustomed to meet and discuss political matters, and through and by means of which, the choice of candidates was made, each locality naming one or more deligates for that purpose, there being a central or county organization in existence at the same time. In this way the popular feeling was always felt and acknowledged and acted upon. But since a new generation of electors has come into existence this good old practice has been suffered to fall into disuse and the majority of the people now appear satisfied to be the mere instruments of a few politicians, who regulate and control the nomination of candidates according to their own will and pleasure, and the consequence, therefore, is that the existence of the people in political matters is ignored and their power and influence surrendered into other hands. Instead of being rulers the people are ruled. Instead of being leaders they are followers. Their position is thus the reverse of what it ought to be, and so will it continue until the people themselves apply the remedy; and that remedy is in the formation and working of the local organizations, to which I have above referred.

A general election for the Dominion Parliament must take place some time next year, it may be in the early part o the summer, and it is more than probable that the elections for the Local Parliament also will then take place. Already, in anticipation of these events, the people in many parts of the country have oganized, and are preparing for the work, and in some places they have even nominated their candidates. But let me ask, what have you done in this direction. As yet not one step has been taken by you and in all likelihood these elections will find you just as unprepared for them as you are to day. I must make bold to tell you that, if you do not bestir yourselves, the result will be just what it has heretofore been, the choice of candidates for these elections will be made in independently of you, and then all that will be left for you to do will be the bare privilege of voting, for not one single word of counsel, or of choice will you have had in the matter. And the most mortifying reflection of all will be that this humiliating position has been taken through your own want of a proper, manly and patriotic feeling, and through your apparent nothingness to become hewers of wood and drawers of water to those who will use you for their own selfish ends.

No more humiliating evidence need be given to the electors of these ridings of the truth of these remarks than the position occupied by them at some of their recent elections, and the very same thing may happen again unless they bestir themselves, and come to stand upon better and higher ground. At present they are precisely where they then were, and, so far as appearances go, they seem content to stand there still. But I cannot bring myself to believe, with my estimate of their intelligence, and manly spirit, that they will suffer things to remain so any longer, and I expect soon to see them taking the necessary steps to bring about a change—a change which will place them in the front rank at the approaching elections. There are plenty of men in both ridings capable, and I trust willing to begin this needful work. Let these set the example and call upon their neighbours for support, and soon every locality throughout these ridings will have organizations in existence, and in active working order, for the winter is near at hand when good sleighing will afford easy intercourse; and then let this good work be commenced, and once begun, see to it that it is continued. And then be sure and keep yourselves free from all outside influences. Do not suffer persons from other localities to dictate your course of action, or to flatter you to be guided by their counsels. Whatever your own judgments tells you to do, do it with a will, and do it well, and show if you are what some effect to call "the yeomanry," you know your rights, and how to preserve them, and that you are not unmindful of your dignity, and your honor. I claim to be one of these "yeomanry" who are spoken of so lightly. I ask no higher praise than to be called one of the "people." I have passed a pretty long life in their company and in vindicating their claim to an equality with the best and the greatest. And I hope I shall never see the day, when the "people" will submit to any inferiority, or suffer any man, great or small, to treat them with disrespect.

I am now done for the present. If you act upon my advice you will hear from me again. If you remain indifferent, and do nothing, then my work is ended.

ELECTOR.

GEORGE ROBERT NEWBOLD.

His Trial for Bigamy—Insanity of one of his Victims—Sentenced to Two Years in the Penitentiary.

From the Assizes of Thursday last.

George Robert Newbold, who was arrested some weeks ago on a charge of bigamy, was brought up for trial at the Interim Sessions, before his Honor Judge Mackenzie, he having elected to be tried by a judge. Newbold, who has a cunning look in his eye, stepped airily into the dock, smiling on everyone and looking as happy as possible, it being evidenced from his appearance and actions that he regarded the affair very lightly. The original Mrs. Newbold, the lady who caused the prosecution, was present in company with several clergymen and a number of lady friends from Peterborough.

Mr. T. H. Bell conducted the case for the Crown, and Dr. McMichael defended the prisoner.

His Honour enquired if the gentlemen were ready to proceed, and being answered in the affirmative,

The Clerk of the Court read the indictment to the prisoner, and

Rev. Edward C. Bower was sworn and said—I am a clergyman of the Church of England, and reside at Cobourg. I know the prisoner, George R. Newbold; I married him to Jemima A. Wood, at Barrydield, in September, 1868, the ceremony being duly solemnized. The witness recognized Mrs. Newbold present as the person he married to the prisoner.

To Dr. McMichael—There was no publication of the banns, the marriage taking place at my house between seven and eight o'clock in the evening; I have not the license here, nor do I remember who issued it; I have known Miss Wood ever since she was a child; cannot say whether or not she was a minor at the time of the marriage, but no member of Miss Wood's family were present.

Rev. Charles Taylor, sworn, said—I am a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and reside at present at Oakville, Victoria County; I knew the prisoner, and recognize him as the person I married to Miss Mary Adelaide Hughes, at the Village of Cramahe, Hastherd, County of Northumberland, on the 13th of June, 1876. I knew Miss Hughes well.

His Honor asked if she was in Court, and

Mr. Bell presented the following certificate that she was unable to be present:—

Bamaster, Nov. 29, 1877.

I hereby certify that Miss Mary Adelaide Hughes, who was married to Charles Taylor, is now a raving maniac, and unable to go to Toronto as a witness.

(Signed) N. A. H. DEAN, M. D.

Witness resumed—They boarded at an hotel after the marriage, and subsequently entered on housekeeping; prisoner was married under the name of Charles E. Stanley, the marriage was duly solemnized.

To Dr. McMichael—I knew the prisoner to be the person I married; he came to me before the marriage and made the arrangements.

Marshall Nichols, sworn, said—I reside in the Township of Brighton, and knew the prisoner; he married my sister a year ago last June; I was not present at the marriage; I knew prisoner to be married to my sister, because they lived together as man and wife, and I have often heard Newbold call her his wife. Witness produced the following letter:—

"Lakefield, Wednesday.

"My Own Dear Wife,—Enclosed you will find $2. This will carry you home, and I will be with you if possible on Saturday, and if not will send you word. I did not make case cost on Monday, I made $4 on Tuesday, and came in here to get your letter mailed and get some stuff to make some medicine. I shall work for Norwood and then to Hastings, and then home to you, my own dear little wife.

"Your own

"CHARLEY."

Witness resumed—My sister is alive but is insane and is not fit to be brought as a witness. She has one child.

Dr. McMichael asked to see the indictment, and after reading it, said that he would object on the question of venue. The offence was alleged to have been committed in Northumberland, therefore the prisoner could not be tried in the County of York.

His Honour said they could proceed against him wherever taken.

Dr. McMichael remarked that there was no evidence to show that the prisoner had been taken in this city.

Mr. Bull said that the presence of the prisoner in Court was evidence of that.

Dr. McMichael said that the presence of the prisoner was evidence that he was detained, for if he were not he would not be long here (Laughter.) He also objected to the validity of the first marriage being proved without the production of the license. The ceremony had been performed in a private house and not in a church, and at an uncanonical hour, it being after twelve o'clock

His Honour overruled both objections, and in doing so said that he considered a marriage, whether it be solemnized at morning, noon, or night, according to the practice of the English Church, a perfect legal ceremony. On the evidence before him he must find the prisoner guilty.

The Prisoner, in answer to the question of his Honour whether or not he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be passed upon him, said that that woman (pointing to prosecutrix) was a fiend, and although he was willing to live with her, she deserted him, and had gone to Rochester for the purpose of procuring a divorce, but that she had been nonsuited in the courts because she had not resided in the State of New York for the specified time,

His Honour asked if this were true, and

Mrs. Newbold said that she would not live with the prisoner after he had been discharged from the Central Prison. She had suffered too much from him before, and she did not want to have anything to do with him. She had been at Rochester, but had never tried to procure a divorce.

The Prisoner still averred that his wife had wilfully deserted him.

Mrs. Newbold said that the prisoner, after being discharged from the Central Prison, took another woman to his father's house and lived there with her as his wife.

Dr. McMichael—There is no evidence to show that.

Mrs. Newbold—No, but I have witnesses here who can prove it.

The Prisoner then made a rambling statement about the purchase of some land by his father from Mrs. Newbold's people.

His Honour asked prisoner's father to come forward.

Prisoner's father, an old, gray-haired man then came forward and stated that when Mrs. Newbold was living at Ottawa he had written to her several times, but she had refused to answer his letters. He could not account for the seperation of his son from his wife. On being discharged from the Central Prison his son had made his way down to Peterboro' in search of her, but could not find her.

His Honour then committed the prisoner to the penitentiary at Kingston for a term of two years at hard labour.

A lady who was in the court during the hearing, expecting to be called as a witness, told a Mail reporter that Newbold visited Buffalo about five or six years ago and represented himself as Charles E. Stanley, an English gentleman, son of Sir Charles E. Stanley, travelling for health and pleasure on this continent. While there he married a Miss Mattie Keith, but getting into difficulties afterwards he fled the city.

was rather hotly denied by the Opposition press. I intimated that Sir John dare not at present attempt to claim his English Privy-councillorship. That statement was disputed. But here we have from his own mouth pretty substantial evidence that he knows it is idle for him to proceed to England on that errand until he can show in the most decisive manner that the people of Canada have condoned his offences. Here is his answer to a question put to him the other day as to why he did not go England and be sworn in: That was his own business, he might say. In the first place, he was short of money, and could not afford to go for a pleasure trip to England. In the second, he proposed to wait till after the elections, and then he would present himself not only as a British subject, a member of the Washington Commission, but as a member of the Canadian Government." Now I need not point out to you what a tower of strength it would be for Sir John in the coming election, if he could only first go to England and succeed in getting himself sworn and recognized as a Privy Councillor. (Hear.) No one knows this better than Sir John himself; yet he is ready to let seven years go by sooner than risk being told that Her Majesty has no need of his advice in such capacity. Sir, I have grave doubts, even if he were restored to power, whether he would not find it advisable to restrain his ardour still longer.

HIS BAD CONDUCT CONDEMNS HIM.

I happen to know something of the opinion entertained of him by not a few prominent Englishmen, and I doubt much if either those who sat with him at Washington or those who became acquainted with his doings at London in 1867, not to speak of persons who were familiarly acquainted with his grave misconduct at the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales to this country in 1860 would have much to say of Sir John which would bring a blush to the cheek of every true Canadian. (Hear, hear.)

A CHALLENGE HE DOES NOT ACCEPT.

Should Sir John presume further on my patience, I give him this formal challenge, and it is not the first I have exchanged with him. (Hear, hear.) But he will bear in mind that I will take no reply from his followers or his parasites. My challenge is to himself alone, and I have to tell him that if he so desire I am ready to confront him anywhere, here, or before his own constituents, or on the floor of the House of Commons, and then and there, if he provokes the fray, I am ready to compare my public life with his, my private life with his, my services to the public with those to which he can justly lay claim as his own, yea, or even the genuine bona fide sacrifices which each of us may have made. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

THE "POOR MAN'S" PLEA EXPLODED.

And on this point I must say a word or two. Always, as far back as I can remember, Sir John has been pleased, with what I consider very questionable taste, to make loud praise of his pecuniary sacrifice in the public service. I do not dispute the fact that politics is anything but a lucrative occupation, and that for two reasons. First, because, as a rule, it completely absorbs the most vigorous and profitable years of a man's life; and secondly, because it always breeds in a man's mind a spirit of indifference to his own individual private affairs. Still, you must remember that it is, at any rate at first, a matter of voluntary choice on the part of those who devote themselves to that pursuit, and that it has its own compensations as well as privations. Neither can I admit that it is in any case a ground for winning or complaining if men find that they cannot attend to politics and make money at one and the same time. Sir, I can tell Sir John that if, as I do not doubt, he has not found politics per se a very money-making occupation, he is far from singular in his experience, and that I can put my finger to-day on half a dozen men sitting round our Council board, of any one of whom it might be truly said that he has made, and is making, larger pecuniary sacrifices than even Sir John made, or indeed had the power to make; and further, that the same is true of a great many others in the ranks of both his own party and of ours. Nay, more, if he will have the plain truth—and this ceaseless parade of his sacrifices deserves that it should be stated—I say for my part, and I have good grounds for my assertion, that I very strongly suspect, after all said and done, that Sir John Macdonald is to-day far better provided for than he would probably have been had he never touched politics at all; and if he likes to dispute this statement, I will be prepared to give my reasons in some detail. (Hear, hear).

ROOT CULTURE.

We are glad to clip the following from the Prairie Farmer, one of our most valued exchanges, and circulating in a part of the world where the field culture of roots is almost unknown. It is highly commendatory of root culture in general, and of Canadian root growing in particular.

The last vestages of the notion that root crops cannot be grown in this country ought to disappear as soon as it is shown that, in a year not unusually favorable, except that the growing season has been lengthened by the absence of frost, roots can be raised here in the open air far exceeding in weight those produced for competition in England, the home of root crops. Mr. William Rennie's second annual root show is now proceeding, and the roots exhibited show not only a great advance in the quality of the roots over those shown last year, but also that the highest recorded English weights can be surpassed here. The varieties of roots shown embrace all those in general use in Ontario. The veteran root grower, Wm. Burgess, of Mimico, makes almost a clean sweep of the first prizes. He takes a gold medal for the heaviest collection of six roots each of long red mangold, yellow globe mangold Swedes, white turnips, sugar beet, white carrots, and red carrots. The weight his samples reached was 1,003½ pounds, without the white turnips, which, his samples not doing him credit, he did not show. In long red mangolds, Mr. Burgess showed a single root that weighed, as it came from the ground, sixty-four pounds, a single sugar beet of eighty-two pounds, a red globe mangold of seventy-six pounds, and a yellow globe of sixty-three pounds. His collection of six long red mangolds weighed 317½ pounds, and earned the chief prize. The second prize was taken by a remarkable handsome lot of roots grown by Mr. Simpson Rennie, of Scarborough, and weighing 204½ pounds.

CANADIAN BARLEY.

The Prairie Farmer of Nov. 17th has an editorial in praise of Canadian barley. It states that no such barley as that obtained from Canada is or can be grown in the prairie region tributary to the Mississippi River. Largely demanded in Chicago and elsewhere at the West, great quantities are annually imported. Our contemporary says: "As we write, ten or twelve cargoes by lake are close at hand to arrive, perhaps before this will meet the eyes of our readers. Last week duties were paid in one day in the Chicago Custom-house on 19,000 bushels of this grain. All this would be very satisfactory, showing the amount of business done in spite of protective duties, but that there is another side to it. One is that all the profits, it has been considered policy for Canadian farmers to sell their barley. It is worth more for feeding purposes than it has brought in the market. For cattle, swine, poultry and other stock, barley-meal is one of the very best feeding and fattening articles, and at the figures it has brought so far the present season, it has been sold at a loss. The other consideration is, that it is the brewers of Chicago and other Western cities who have imported our barley, and added it into all their beer. We should like to see this valuable grain distributed to other convenient localities in this country and across the border.

Little things should not be despised. The little toe is the smallest on the foot, but it always has the largest corn.

Striped stockings do not seem to be in favor in Paris this season.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.

Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Excelsior Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pains and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts, NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, leaving the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OTH CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "DR. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Heliadonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOUREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the PORous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.

A Triple Crown for Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.

"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS"

The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines were pronounced by E. H. Knight, D. W. Gregory, Fred Pagot and L. D. F. Perrin, Commissioners of Sewing Machines at Philadelphia in 1876, to be the best Sewing Machine in the market. Not only the Centennial commissioners pronounced the W & W. the best Sewing Machine, but Mrs. Jas. Stephenson, of Ashfield, Mrs. W. W. Johnston, Wm. McCullagh, J. G. Hutton, R. Turner, Rev. Dr. Kinnear, Rev. W. Patterson, Jr., of Peterboro'; Mrs. Wm. Deacon and Mrs. J. Smith of Ashburnham, and hundreds of others testify to the same. We would call all those intending purchasers to call and see the new family W & W. "It is a perfect Little Gem."

CAUTION.

I hereby caution all those having the W & W Sewing Machine not to allow any other agent to put their machine in order, as I am the only authorized agent in Peterboro' who has served a regular apprenticeship to the trade, and who pretends to do any kind of work on Sewing Machines. I would recommend those having the W & W Sewing Machine to call on the present only authorized Agent at Peterboro', who will do all kinds of work on the Machine, and all work done by me I will warrant for one year. And I would also caution the public against buying a Sewing Machine from any Agent who cannot show a certificate of character from the Company he represents, as I have had more than enough to do repairing Machines that have been ruined by inexperienced Agents.

A WONDERFUL REFORM IN FANNING MILLS

Farmers wanting to purchase a First Class Fanning Mi should call on

MINORGAN & ELLIOTT

AND GET ONE OF THEIR

'FARMERS FRIEND."

They are the best and cheapest Fanning Mills in the Market, and clean from 80 to 100 bush. of Wheat, ready for the market, in an hour, and does not throw the large grain into the tailings. We have received a large number of Testimonials from different Farmers in the County who have used our Mills. They will speak for themselves:—

Greystock P.O., Otonabee, Mar. 12, 1877.—
MOORE & MINORGAN:
Dear Sirs,—This is to certify that I have given the "Farmers Friend" Mill a fair trial, and have no hesitation in saying that in my opinion it is one of the best Mills now in use for cleaning grain for seed or market.
Yours etc.,
J. SMITHSON.

Otonabee, March 21, 1877.
MOORE & MINORGAN:
Dear Sirs,—This is to certify that I have given your "Farmers Friend" Mill a fair trial, and have no hesitation in saying that in my opinion it is one of the best Mills now in use for cleaning grain for seed or market.
Yours etc.,
J. REDMOND.

Balsam Grove, Peterboro, March 13, 1877.
MOORE & MINORGAN:
Dear Sirs,—I have tested your "Farmers Friend" Mill and find that it works well, taking out all dirt and small seeds out of grain and making a good clean article for sale. I am sure that your machine will give good satisfaction among the farmers, that is if they want to take good clean grain to market, and get five cents per bushel more for it.
Yours etc.,
J. H. WALTON.

Smith, 5th March, 1877.
MOORE & MINORGAN:
Dear Sirs,—I take pleasure in recommending the "Farmers Friend" as being the best Mill I have ever had and I have had several of what was called the Best Maker in Ontario.
JAS. ELLIOTT.

Peterboro, March 5th, 1877.
This is to certify that we have tested Moore & Minorgan's Mill and pronounce it to be the best we have ever seen cleaning, and it is the best Seperator we have ever seen.
JOHN DOBBIN.
I also endorse the above statement.
WM. DOBBIN.

Smith, March 6th, 1877.
This is to certify that I have seen Moore & Minorgan's Seperator in my barn. I consider it the "Boss Mill."

Life Assurance Co'y.

ESTABLISHED 1847.

Assurers Joining now will be entitled to Four Years' Profits at the Next Division in 1880.

THE ADVANTAGES

Of joining an old and successful Company like the CANADA LIFE may be judged of by the following facts:—

1st—The Rates charged are Lower than those of other Companies. 2nd—It has the LARGEST BUSINESS of any Company in Canada. 3rd—The PROFIT BONUSES added to Life Policies are LARGER than given by any other Company in Canada. 4th—It has conveyed that Profits not only altogether EXHIBIT all Premium Payments, but, in addition, yield the holder an ANNUAL SURPLUS.

By the "MINORITY" system of Assurance rates of premium are charged Lower Than Have Ever Before Been Offered for Life Assurance.

The following are the rates for Assurance of $1,000, with profits upon the system referred to:

AGE	ANNUAL PREMIUM	AGE	ANNUAL PREMIUM	AGE	ANNUAL PREMIUM	AGE	ANNUAL PREMIUM	AGE	ANNUAL PREMIUM
15	$12 80	25	$16	35	$20	45	$27	55	$38

THE TELEPHONE!

PROF. BELL'S TELEPHONE having attained to such perfection, it is now offered to the public, confident that a trial of its merits will ensure its general adoption.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables any one to speak or converse over a small wire to a distance of 250 miles. The tone of the voice is recognized where friend or acquaintances are speaking

THE TELEPHONE

Has an advantage over the present system of Telegraphy, as any one may listen without being an operator, or in other words, there is no Telegraphic alphabet needed.

THE TELEPHONE

Dispatches messages with greater rapidity than telegraphing—as by telegraphing every letter must be distinctly made, and every word properly spelled—by Telephone each word must be distinctly spoken, when it is distinctly heard at every moment of utterance.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables the manufacturer to talk with his factory superintendent: the main office with the branch office, the house with the store, the country residence with the stables, or any part of the grounds, the mouth of the mine with its remotest workings, or in short any given point with any other point, although many miles apart.

THE TELEPHONE

Is neat and portable, and an ornament to any room or office. The yearly cost to the lessee for a set of Telephones—one at each end of a line is $20.00.

Any information will be given regarding their workings, lines constructed, instruments furnished, on application to.

THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT.

Reform and Tory Legislation Contrasted.

WHAT THE RECORD PROVES.

Spirited Speech of the Provincial Secretary.

Opposition Charges Forcibly Answered.

Hon. Mr. Hardy was one of the speakers at the Port Elgin Reform demonstration the other week, and as will be seen by the following report of his speech taken from the Globe, made an exceedingly able defence of the Ontario Government, and scattered the Tory charges like chaff before the wind: Hon. Mr. Hardy, who was received with loud cheers, said it was difficult for a Minister of the Local Government to speak at these successive demonstrations without covering the same ground and speaking upon the same topics, as no charges of any gravity had been made during the entire campaign of the Opposition against the Mowat Administration. After refuting the Chieftain's assertions at Napanee respecting the Neebing hotel, Mr. Hardy went on to say: The Hon. Wm. Macdougall at the same meeting took occasion in his haphazard way to make one or two remarks, referring particularly to the members of the Mowat Administration. He said, without being definite, specific, or particular, that they were dishonest, and had been living upon capital. If this charge meant anything at all, it meant that the Local Government had been from year to year expending more than the annual revenue in carrying on the affairs of the Government. How did this correspond with the actual, well known and recorded facts—facts familiar to the youngest member of the Local Legislature—and, he was strongly inclined to think, not less familiar to Mr. Macdougall than to others? From the advent of a Liberal Government in Ontario, during the entire regime of Mr. Mowat, each year had shown a surplus—some years an immense surplus—of revenue over expenditure. The first year they were in power, 1872, showed a surplus of $1,212,000; in 1873, $503,000; in 1874, $700,000; in 1875, $400,000; and in 1876, $342,000, (Cheers.) Does this look like living on capital? Was the hon, gentleman's verdict of dishonesty founded on his belief that the Government had been living on capital? Or was his statement more reckless aspersion without regard to the actual facts? While referring to the question indirectly raised by Mr. Macdougall, he desired to call the attention of the audience to a comparison not unfrequently made by Opposition speakers and in the Opposition press between the expenditure under the Sandfield Macdonald Government and that under the Liberal Government of Mr. Mowat. When he entered the Legislature in 1874, no question perplexed him more than certain alleged increases under specified heads, and in the totals of the expenditure.

The Folly of Hoarding up the Surplus.

He had become so accustomed to hear a large accumulated surplus spoken of admiringly during the time the Sandfield Macdonald Government held the reins of power, that he had, like many others, acquired to some extent the habit of thinking an accumulated, large, and increasing surplus an unqualified benefit. Actual observation and some discussion tended somewhat to modify this notion. There was presented the theory, on the one hand, of amassing in the Provincial treasury a large surplus amounting to many millions of dollars, expending nothing, but adding from year to year to the sum in store. This simply meant giving the banks the use and control of large sums of Government money at small or no interest; it placed the money of the people in the coffers of large and wealthy corporations, or in the hands of wealthy capitalists, to be used by them for legitimate or speculative purposes—to advance their own interests and their own fortunes. Whatever advantage accrued from having in possession this large sum of money went directly to those banks, corporations, and capitalists who have the handling of it, while the people derived but little benefit from it. On the other hand, there was presented the contrary theory of giving back to the people the people's money; of expending it on public improvements, and in developing the resources of the country; of so arranging the financial affairs of the Province that the present generation should receive some benefit from their own money, and that the country should not stand still for lack of the enterprise and activity which always followed the active circulation of large sums of money. These expenditures might be made either by a direct distribution of the surplus among the municipalities to be used in the construction of roads bridges, public halls, and for lightening the burdens imposed by our school system, by enlarging the grants for education; by increasing the accommodation for the insane; by relieving the local prisons of their inmates and the local rates or the burdens of their maintainance; by increasing the grants to the charities and hospitals in the Province, and by a broad and liberal railway policy. The railway policy of the Government had brought millions of money into the land for expenditure during depressed times and if it had not brought a railway to every man's door, it benefits were exemplified in a remarkable degree to the numerous towns, villages, stations, and markets which greeted the traveller at every turn in passing the new, yet prosperous and magnificent, county of Bruce. Some discussion and a little thought had early convinced him that the policy of development as against the policy of stagnation—the policy of giving to the people the opportunity of expending their own money as against that of handing it over to the wealthy capitalist for the purpose of speculation—was the true policy of a Liberal Government, abreast of the time and in sympathy with the people's wants. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

A Comparison of Expenditure.

It was therefore not impossible that those who make a comparison between the expenditure of 1868, the first year of the Sandfield Macdonald Government, and that of 1876, under the Mowat Government, would find a larger expenditure in the latter year. The reasons were obvious to the most superficial observer. The necessities of the country demanded a larger expenditure, even had the Government of the day been compelled to resort to additional taxation to meet the just demands. Happily this was not required. He wished them to examine a few of the items of expenditure of 1876 which were sometimes charged against the Government in the comparisons made with the expenditure in Sandfield Macdonald's first year. In 1876 there was paid to the various municipalities, on account of the surplus distribution, the sum of $424,000, and to railways $322,000; advances on drainage works, $78,000 (a mere loan bearing interest.) These items alone amounted to $874,000, which had all been handed back to the people directly or indirectly in 1876. Sandfield Macdonald had made no payments corresponding with these. At that time there was no Central Prison, no London Asylum, no Hamilton Asylum; no Orillia Asylum, no Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, no Institution for the Blind, no Agricultural College, no School of Pacific Science. These institutions, apart from the London Asylum, the cost of which he could not call to mind, but which would largely add to the outlay, cost in 1876, for maintenance, repairs, and improvements, $292,000. These two classes of items alone amounted to $1,166,000. To go further with the comparison: In 1868 no sum was expended on immigration; in 1876, there was expended on that item $45,000. In 1868 the grants for Agriculture, Arts, and Literary Institutions were $65,000; in 1876 they were $98,000, an increase of $33,000. In 1868 the expenditure for educational purposes was $300,000; in 1876 it was $524,000. Here they would find further outlay amounting to $331,000, which, added to the $1,166,000, gave a total of $1,497,000 actually expended by the Mowat Government in 1876, for purposes and services either not included in the Macdonald items of expenditure at all, or, when included, at greatly reduced figures. (Loud cheers.) Yet who would say the expenditure of any one dollar of this excess was not in the highest degree in the interests of the whole people? (Hear, hear.) Who could truthfully allege that the country would to-day have been better off had these sums been resting in some banks instead of having been so expended? But these figures did not represent the total or additional expenditure on works of public utility or occasioned by the advancement of the Province in population by the organization of new territorial districts, and in a variety of other ways. (Hear, hear.)

The Sixth Minister Charge.

Some opposition had been made by the Tory press and by some of the Opposition leaders to the addition of a sixth Minister to the Cabinet, and it had been censured as unnecessary, and claimed that additional expense had thereby been incurred. The resignation of the Rev. Dr. Ryerson as Chief Superintendent, and the erection of the Education Department into a Department of State, controlled by a responsible Minister instead of by one who was practically irresponsible, rendered this an absolute necessity, The Hon. Mr. Crooks—the able and efficient Minister of Education—had attempted for a year to conduct the business of the two departments—Education and the Treasury; but he had found the strain upon him to great that he must either abandon the attempt or leave the work of one or both departments largely in arear. A new Department had not been created; they were the same in number as under Sandfield Macdonald, who practically had six Ministers to conduct them—Mr. Macdonald himself, Mr. Cameron, Mr. Wood, Mr. Richards, Mr. Carling, and Dr. Ryerson. Mr. Mowat had no more. The salary formerly paid to some one else who did the work from which the doctor asked to be relieved. This was the whole extent of the charge. (Hear, hear.) The present Liberal Administration had been, from the moment of the accession to power of Attorney-General Mowat, constantly engaged in enlarging the rights, extending the liberties, and in mitigating the burdens of the people. (Cheers.) The Speaker then referred to the able and successful manner in which Mr. Mowat had grappled with the Municipal Loan Fund Difficulty,

which Sir John Macdonald's successive Governments had created or greatly aggravated, and which neither Sir John Macdonald nor Mr. Sandfield Macdonald had been bold or able enough to remove. Did he not in this mitigage the burdens of the people?—burdens that had been plunging some of our most enterprising towns into hopeless bankruptcy. Mr. Mowat had not stopped there, but as part of the same scheme he then provided for the distribution of a million and a half of the accumulated surplus—a surplus, which the Macdonald Government had, reserved exclusively for banks and railways, among the entire people of the Province. Did history record a broader or more liberal act on the part of the Government? (Hear, hear.) As the result of the solution of these two questions upwards of $3, 000,000 of money were handed back to the people to be applied in paying off their indebtedness, in relieving them from their educational burdens, and in building highways, bridges, and public roads. Increased grants had been made for educational purposes, and in aid of agriculture; the use of stamps in the poor man's court—the Division Court—had been abolished and the same relief was extended to suitors in country courts, and where formerly as Mr. Mowat had already explained, it would cost an old basketer the price of a week's labor to earn the fee for a marriage license—(laughter)—a day's work would accomplish the desired result under the present state of the law. But not only had he mitigated the burdens of the people, but he and his colleagues had enlarged their rights and extended their liberties (Cheers.)

The Farmers' Sons' Act and other Good Measures.

The Act establishing the income franchise was followed by an Act conferring a like privilege upon the sons of farmers who remained at home upon the paternal estates. No more intelligent, patriotic, loyal and deserving class of young men was to be found in the country—indeed in any country—than the sturdy sons of the Canadian farmer.—(Cheers)—and no class in any community was better fitted to exercise the high functions of a free and enlightened voter than the young men who till the farms of their fathers in the Province of Ontario. The Act was broad, comprehensive, and conceived in an enlightened and freedom-loving spirit, and the young men of this country would not soon forget the benefit conferred on them by the Hon. Edward Blake, who conceived the scheme of the farmers' sons' franchise.—(Cheers)—and by Hon. Mr. Fraser, who embodied the idea in an Act of Parliament, and courageously carried it through against the bitter hostility of his opponents and the lukewarmness of some of his friends, (Loud cheers.) The Election Laws, the Ballot Acts, Parliamentary and municipal, the Voters' Lists Acts, the several Acts giving the honest mechanic a lien upon the building in which he had invested his money and upon which he had bestowed his labor—all bore witness to the claim that the Mowat Government had been constantly engaged in enlarging the rights and extending the liberties of the people. So also did the Act for the payment of witnesses in criminal cases, those relating to fire insurance, and to the acquisition and holding of property by married women. The great and comprehensive acts of law reform, the special product of the ripe experience, knowledge, and learning of the Attorney-General, had given us, without friction or strain in the workings of our courts, or revolution in their practice, substantially all the advantages England had obtained by her several sweeping and revolutionary Judicature Acts and by storms of litigation arising out of them; two Acts which, in their simplicity of construction and comprehensiveness, in their operation had struck the very key note of law reform in our entire legal system. (Cheers.) To crown this great legislative record of four years, the whole body of the laws relating specially to Ontario had been consolidated and revised under the personal supervision of Mr. Mowat, and they would soon be found embodied in two large volumes and distributed throughout the land, to the great convenience of magistrates, councillors, and public functionaries of the Province at large. (Cheers.) No Ministry since the days of Robert Baldwin could point to such a record of wise liberal and sagacious legislation—covering, as it did, the entire field of law, administration and finance. (Hear, hear).

An Inefficient Opposition.

What had the Opposition to offer to the public in this Province as their legislative record? What one solitary public Act save two introduced by the members for London—that any human being could call to mind had they introduced or placed upon the statute books? For five years the entire Opposition, numbering one-half of the whole House, had not, with the exception to which he had alluded, put a public Act of general importance upon the Provincial statute books. It might be true enough that the Opposition were not to be held responsible for the legislation of the country; but when the Hon. Mr. Blake led the Opposition could it be alleged against him that he did nothing—that he propounded no policy—originated no measures—introduced no Bills—and placed no Acts upon the statute books? What policy had they propounded beyond the policy of obstruction? The very measures—amongst them the Crooks License Act—which they had opposed and denounced upon the floor of Parliament had since been upheld by them in different parts of the country as very near perfection, as admirably suited both to the protection of the public and of the legitimate

LIQUOR LAW ENFORCEMENT.

There is perhaps no trade or calling for the regulation of which so many laws have been passed as that in intoxicating liquors; and probably there have been no enactments on the Statute Books harder of enforcement. Licensing the sale of such liquors as beverages gives those engaged in the trade an arbitrary position which enables them to point to theirs as a "legitimate" calling, and entrench themselves behind that definition to the rejection of all moral views or conscientious scruples. People too, outside the trade, are ready to take it for granted, that, as the traffic is legalised, there is some good excuse for it; although they could not for the life of them think out a defence for its comparative uselessness, or search out anything connected with it that can begin to outweigh the positive evils it works. These evils are conceded by the very laws by which an attempt is made to regulate them. Intoxicating liquors form a dangerous commodity, else why place strong restrictions on their sale? If they were necessary, or even harmless, would not common sense demand that the same freedom be given to dealers in them as to those who deal in other articles of common use? Medical science goes further than the law; for it demonstrates that the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage is positively hurtful to the bodies and minds of those who indulge in them. We shall say nothing here of the error committed in legal temporising with a palpable wrong, for no apparent reason except it be a shrinking from the trouble of bringing about a radical cure; but shall confine our remarks to difficulties in the way of enforcing the present liquor laws.

In the first place offences against the liquor laws are committed like other illegal acts, in secret; and the more stringent the penalties the greater the chances that the only witnesses are aiders and abettors in the wrong-doing. Even when an offence comes accidentally within the knowledge of an entirely innocent person, it requires a strong impulse of detestation for the wrong to induce that person to take the steps necessary to bring punishment on one who has done him no direct injury either to person or property. His reluctance to do so is strengthened by considerations not only of the personal inconvenience it will put him to; but also of the personal abuse it will bring upon him. He is sure to be called "informer" by those comprising the class to which belongs the offender whom he helps to convict; though what disgrace attaches to simply aiding the enforcement of the law it would be hard to demonstrate. One thing that gives force to the idea of meanness in the person who exposes an infraction of the liquor laws is the giving of half the fine to the informer. The suspicion of a mercenary motive in connection with that half fine will deter any high-minded man whose conscience might otherwise lead him to expose illegal liquor-selling. The most feasible way of overcoming this difficulty, and bringing about a popular enforcement of the law, would be the formation of Vigilance Committees, and the funding of the money obtained from fines, for the carrying on of farther prosecutions, no one thus personally being enriched by the half fine. In the event of a surplus; it could be handed over to some charitable institution.

But the moral certainty of one witness as to an offence of the kind we are considering does not end the difficulty of proving such offence. A man may feel and know that liquor has been sold in his presence, and yet be unable to prove it without the evidence of the seller or buyer. The vendor, according to a late decision by a Judge, cannot be convicted out his own evidence; and it is in most cases found that the purchaser when put in the witness stand has a very bad memory. In some instances hard swearing for the defence has defeated cases that were clear, but for the most questionable evidence. For these reasons it is next to impossible to obtain a liquor conviction unless a witness is prepared to testify directly that he paid money for what he knows by practical test to have been a beverage within the meaning of the liquor law. Even [illegible] change is sometimes met by flat perjury. It will be seen then, how necessary to the enforcement of the law is the employment of detectives, as they are the life of the trade, as to be able to frame a case that will leave no loop-hole through which the culprit may escape. It is this necessity that has led to the supply of professional whiskey detectives. The assemblage of the trade at unlicensed places, and at unlawful hours, by the whiskey sellers, has created a demand in answer to which these whiskey informers arise. The calling of these men may not be one our very best citizens would choose; but neither is that of the whiskey seller. The one occupation is just as "legitimate" as the other. The detective may have a little the better of that argument; for the law employs him in his business, while it merely permits that of the liquor seller. If, too, the vending of liquors were confined within its legitimate bounds, the whiskey detective would find his occupation gone. We may put the case epigrammatically thus:—Whiskey-sellers are unnecessary; and whiskey-detectives are necessary only because of the existence of whiskey-sellers. Under such circumstances the Licensed Victuallers need not profess such a pious horror of those whom they execrate as "informers." The latter are called "sneaks" because they try to discover secretly in the interests of law what they cannot ascertain openly. And what is that? Simply the secret disregard of law by other "sneaks"—the primary, the fundamental, the foundation "sneaks" in this whole sneakish game.

We do not desire to be understood as expressing an admiration for whiskey detectives; for we have none. At best they are an evil rendered necessary from a cause which we have already pointed out. Evil has an inherent propensity to growth, and if not held with a strong hand it will certainly add to itself by additions from an attraction of homogeneous particles,—if we can apply such a word psychologically. The counterpart in the material world is the growth of the stone. As surely as a rock left free from disturbing influences will become larger, so surely will the inherent wickedness of whiskey-selling fast degrade a man, if he be not put under a deterring influence such as the terror of the law, social restraints, or some other power to apply the brakes. Such an influence is the whiskey-detective; but he is in his turn liable to the same growth of evil We see him go beyond a simple and honest desire to convict known or suspected offenders, and try to pave the way for cases. He has even been known to use sharp practices to induce, and even tempt men to a violation of the law, that he might lay a complaint and secure a conviction. In the early days he would have scorned a proposition to do such a thing, just as the tavern-keeper when he commenced business would not admit the idea that he should ever sell liquor contrary to law. The degredation induced by their callings has worked in both, and neither is now so scrupulous as he once was. Inordinate love of money leads each to do deeds that not only earn detestation for himself but also sinks the calling he follows still lower in the public estimation.

But it is when masses of evil come into agreement and form a combination, that we see the diabolical most plainly. For instance, a whiskey-seller offers to a detective a certain sum if he be not proceeded against, or if the case break down through the non-production of evidence. A bargain is struck, and either an abandonment or a failure of the prosecution follows. The dishonest detective finds that this pays, and next goes into a town or county gets up, or pretends to get up, a number of cases against hotel-keepers, and then offers to compound. The guilty ones feel that they can not only avoid exposure, but save money by buying off the detective, and they accordingly do so. The rascal then leaves on the pretence that his life is in danger, or sees that suits entered break down, and goes to some new field, to prey on other rascals. In the County of Grey a detective held in custody by the License Inspector, as an unwilling witness in cases he had worked up, was sought to be taken out of the hands of the officials on a charge of perjury brought against him. There was no particular fear that the Inspector would let him go, or that he could not with common care be afterwards safely secured on the perjury charge; but there was a fear expressed that had the arrest for perjury been made, the prisoner might have got off, and that too with money enough in his pocket to pay travelling expenses for a considerable distance.

From a consideration of the difficulties we have mentioned it will be seen that there is great necessity for care in the selection of detectives, for a careful vigilance over them, and for the prompt dismissal of any who may display the slightest disposition to manufacture cases or trade with the liquor sellers. It may be well to consider in this connection whether it would not be a simpler plan to pass a Prohibitory Liquor Law at once, and thus do away with much of the line of "legitimacy" that now complicates the present unsatisfactory condition of things. The Dunkin Act is a big step in the direction of such simplifications, and a step also towards a still more comprehensive law in the future.

THE FISHERY AWARD.

The Halifax Fishery Commission appointed to consider the question of the compensation due by the United States for the use of the fisheries on the Canadian and Newfoundland coasts has decided that the Americans shall pay five and a half millions of dollars for the privileges accorded their fishermen, within the terms of the Washington Treaty. The award does not include the Canadian claims for the securing of bait provisions, and other supplies on these coasts, and the right to dry and can fish on British Colonial territory. These were included in the full amount of the claim put in; but were excluded from consideration on the argument of the Americans that the Treaty of Washington could not be literally interpreted to mean anything beyond the fisheries proper, i. e: the right to catch fish, and only to catch them on the coasts mentioned. The award therefore covers only the privilege of fishing within three miles of the shore for twelve years, five of which have passed, over and above any advantage to Canada and Newfoundland from like privileges on the United States coasts and from an arrangement of reciprocal free markets. These, however, amount to little or nothing in favour of our people. The scope of the Commissioners' powers being so narrowed down it is not surprising that the award should be so far below the amount of the claim. The other parts of the original demand being left out of consideration by the Halifax Commissioners still remain for adjustment by another tribunal; and as they form a very important part of the privileges enjoyed by the United States fishermen in British waters when they do come up for calculation they are likely to carry an inconsiderable value in the minds of independent arbitrators. Besides the points we have already mentioned they include a claim to territorial jurisdiction over bays and waters outside the headland lines, which is felt unimportant by the late award. These points, according to the American argument and the decision of the late Commissioners, do not come within the letter and scope of the Washington Treaty. This being the case that treaty does not bind Canada on these matters any more than the United States; therefore they yet remain for independent adjustment. The award made by the Halifax Commission furnishes a calculable value for the fisheries and all other privileges connected with them, and without some of which privileges the Americans' right to fish in our waters would be practically valueless. This then gives a basis as well as a precedent for the recognition of further Canadian claims, which the United States representatives themselves have acknowledged as beyond the Washington Treaty and not affected by it.

Considerable speculation has been indulged in over the formal dissent of the American Commissioner, Judge Kellog, as to whether the United States government will refuse payment of the award because the decision was not unanimous, on the technical plea that the Treaty of Washington did not distinctly declare that a majority decisive should be final and binding. We scarcely think that the United States can afford to compromise their national honor in the manner hinted at, especially with the easy comparison so broadly in view through the prompt payment of the Geneva award by Great Britain to the United States. These incidental damages were allowed by the paying party; now the United States protests against the introduction of incidental claims by holding to the literal interpretation of the words "catching fish." We shall see in the end which was the wiser and most profitable course. The world already knows which is the most honorable and straightforward. For we believe that the Americans will yet be led to repent them of the oversmart position taken in their refusal to submit the whole claims presented, to the arbitrament of the Halifax Commission. We are not among those who fear the final result, and blame Sir John Macdonald as though he were actually guilty of having defrauded his country in this matter though we do agree with the London Times that if the Canadian claims have not been fully set forth in the Washington Treaty, or that treaty drawn so as to include certain matters of primary importance to Canada, Sir John Macdonald is to blame. Still we are ready to go farther than a hope, and express a belief that the various steps will arrange themselves one after the other whereby justice to Canada in all these matters will at last be secured. First of all, we believe the United States will admit the award of the Halifax Commission; and after that will find that their own arguments are favourable to a recognition of other Canadian claims.

HON. MR. LAURIER'S ELECTION.

The Conservative press generally predicted the election of Mr. Laurier in Drummond and Arthabaska, and he was defeated. The Conservative press generally predicted his defeat in Quebec East, and he was elected. Thus the Conservative press preserved its consistency in the only particular in which it is consistent. For a week before the election of Mr. Laurier by a majority of over three hundred votes, the believers of the Mail confident from its assertions that he would be utterly driven from the field. Yet the day after the election the same paper comes out with the mark that Mr. Lauriers election would surprise no one. A pretty compliment truly to its credulous readers, but not undeserved. Of course the Tories claim a "moral victory," though where the morality of their procedure comes in would puzzle a German metaphysician. They argue from the fact that a Reformer was previously returned by acclamation for East Quebec, and that now Mr. Laurier gets only 316 of a majority, there is evidence of the "Conservative reaction." At this rate all a party will have to do to induce a reaction in its favor will be to allow candidates of the other party to be elected by acclamation at one time and afterwards oppose their election in the same constituencies. Every sort of complaint is made as to why the Tory candidate was defeated, though no apology is needed save one for having forced a contest at all. The Ministerialists are accused of doing all in their power to secure the election of a Minister. They certainly were not idle while the opposition was bringing all kinds of base influences to bear to try and bring about his defeat Had their object been accomplished they would have been no more complimentary to the Ministerialists than they are now. Scarcely! They knew that in offering opposition to a Minister on his seeking election, except at a general election, was in direct contradiction of their own formerly expressed views; that if a Ministry be strong, opposition is practically useless, and if weak, to elect a member of the cabinet it is tempted to do as Sir John frequently did when his Ministers were rejected at the polls, even at general elections. With its present protestations of having abjured past sins the tory party should not be ready to bring about what they effect to be horrified at. Party tactics these may be; but they cannot be disguised or strengthened either by after professions of sorrow, and hypocritical whinings over the wickedness of the party that has met and repelled the assault in which these tactics were used.

All things considered we cannot feel sorry at Mr. Laurier's defeat in Drummond and Arthabaska. It carries lessons not only to the Reformers to be ever ready for a skirmish with their political opponents, but also to the whole people to guard against the sudden onslaught of a pack of demagogues, or other impetuous influences that may lead a constituency to the what it will sorrow over afterwards. Mr. Laurier's old constituency has lost him and gained nothing but an unenviable notoriety; the country has gained nothing, and it remains to be decided by the courts whether even the opposition have gained a seat, while it is certain they have lost considerable in reputation, incomplicition of interests with men who now hold strong personal claims on them, and in time and money spent in the poor satisfaction of keeping a Minister out of a seat for a few days. The election in Drummond and Arthabaska has shown Mr. Laurier in a most advantageous light, while that in East Quebec has brought the honorable gentlemen out in an admirable manner before the people of the whole Dominion. If the Conservatives can afford to congratulate themselves they are welcome to their congrating philosophy. The Reformers certainly have no cause for grief.

RELIGION AND TAR "REVIEW."

The Review is in a bad way. By its own act it has attempted from itself the good-will of the Methodist body. Instead of commanding manly repentance for an error, it displays an utterly selfish horror that Methodists should give a preference to other newspapers of the town. Surely the Review does not shrewdly imagine that in driving off the friendship of certain patrons they should comeout to do utterly without local newspapers, or the convenience offered by other printing offices, where they receive at least courteous treatment. The Review is evidently angry at the result of its senseless blunder; yet it perpetrates another in combining the Examiner and Times in some ill-natured remarks last week. Does it want to drive these two journals to a union against their common assailant? If not what does it expect by disgusting its readers with a display of the personal bitterness of its proprietory!

We have also a word to say on the Review's warm remarks on the position of "the Clergy in Worldly Affairs." It is a good subject for consideration, but, like any other good subject, should not be written upon from the promptings of anger, disappointment, or other ungenerous feelings that will prevent an impassioned consideration of so important a matter. Clergymen are certainly not above criticism in their lives and conversation; but they are entitled to fair criticism the same as other men. The so-called criticism of the Rev. Mr. Willoughby was plainly founded on an imputation of motive, which common sense could not admit; and Mr. Willoughby noted wisely that he paid no attention whatever to the distorted interpretation of his remarks. The Review's solicitude concerning the too free use of the name of the Deity may be honest, though its accusations are somewhat extravagant. It should in this regard practice a little of the charity it preaches. We cannot see that the invocation of the Sacred name will injure any cause or that the Sacred Character can at all suffer, even by petitions offered in a spirit that other men liable to mistake may consider a mistaken spirit. Yet we are reminded of the advice "Cast not your pearls before swine," etc.—and believe we need not go far for an illustration of the danger of a disregard of placing precious things before pigs.

ENTIRELY FALSE.

In the last number of the Tangle-leg Advocate there is a paragraph charging the Clerk of Ashburnham with being influenced by the supporters of the Dunkin Bill and with seeking the advice of the advocates of the Bill rather than of the Reeve. In this charge there is not one single word of truth. Not an advocate of the Dunkin Bill sought to influence the Clerk, and we are in a position to state positively, that he sought no advice from any of them. The Review has got down so low in public opinion that it cannot be believed on any subject—much less this one. Is he under the influence of tangle-leg-dom. The friends of truth and soberness know that the Antis who submitted the By Law could not prevent the passing of the By Law in the County; and this would render their little efforts fruitless to make Ashburnham a grog shop for the town and county, and a bar room for topers and loafers. No denial was needed, and no favors sought for; but the Review has become so lost to decency, honor and truthfulness that it imagines every creature is as devoid of principle as it is itself. The whole phantom is the fancy of a black heart and besotted intellect.

THE REASON WHY.

Another reason why Mr. H. H. Smith should not be Mayor of this town is, that he rushes into print and denies the truth. Such a gentleman should not be Mayor. He did write to electors soliciting their support. He also got some of his friends to write to others. He furthermore pleaded that the Temperance party should not vote against him, as if elected he would give the Dunkin By-law a fair trial. He therefore asked for votes promised good behaviour and fair play,—and this was a good deal for him—and he got his friends to canvass for him also; and yet he denies being a candidate. The people have had enough of his promises—especially the temperance people and those who are the well-wishers of the town, as witness his "cunningness" in the Water Works By-law.

He also denies being the candidate of the Licensed Victuallers last year. He got their support and did their work, and in doing so voted away $1,500 of the people's money, and would have given them $20 each more if the Council had agreed. And yet he denies being their candidate. But who will accept the denial as of much value!

THE PROVINCIAL CAPITAL.

Peterborough Praised—The Educational Enquiries—Farmers and Produce Dealers—Business—Pleasure.

(From a Correspondent.)

TORONTO, Nov. 23rd, 1877.

Much pleasure has been expressed in Dunkinite circles over the passage of the by-law in the town of Peterborough, independent of the county. It is looked on as an evidence that the sentiment in favor of the Bill is growing, as formerly it was considered almost impossible to carry the by-law in a city or town of any considerable size without the moral aid of the country working for the same end at the same time. The Licensed Victuallers are correspondingly disgusted, as they plainly see in the result in Peterborough the beginning of a series of successes. They cannot shut their eyes to the fact that the discussion of the Bill, even where it has been defeated, has been a loss to them, in demonstrating to the whole community, themselves included, the low character of the calling in which they are engaged. The moral force of the temperance appeals is augmented by every discussion that takes place, while each repetition of the stock arguments of the Anti-Dunkinites serves to weaken their effect; and as the people throughout the Province read them as they are re-hashed from time to time, reflection brings the conviction of their utter absurdity and worthlessness as logical views or as honest utterances. The Dunkinites of Toronto are not done with the whiskey guest yet. They will have another wrestle with him when the proper time in their view arrives; and taught by experience they will go into the contest better prepared to cope with their antagonist. In the meantime they look to the passage of the measure in as many counties and towns as possible, and to the strong pressure that will then be brought to bear on the House of Commons in favor of a Prohibitory Liquor Law. Doubtless at next session of Parliament the Dunkin Act will be amended in many important particulars; and then it will be seen whether the Licensed Victuallers are honest in some of the objections they take to it in its present shape. King Richard[illegible] man since his visit to Peterborough. He doesn't like that section of country; and I suppose the feeling is reciprocated. In Mount Forest, as to Peterborough, he attempted to prevent Mr. Gibson from speaking, but the people would hear both sides as Dodds had to give in. The attempt of Dodds at the same place to exclude the ladies from [illegible] meeting also failed. He has enough to know the power the ladies wield as opposition to the liquor cause, whatever springs most of the trouble of their sex, and which he is trying to perpetuate both by specious pretenses of bogus temperance views on the platform in the country, and through the columns of his newspaper "opposed to Prohibition," in this city and wherever the Licensed Victuallers can induce a circulation for it beyond their own numbers. Though E. King Dodds is doing a great work for temperance, there is no credit due to him for it, for it is as greatly in the negative degree and against his inward intentions as is that of his brother the saloon-keeper, and "whip" in these Campaigns. The pair no doubt make money out of it, and hence are not so foolish if they are bigger knaves than the rest of the Anti-Dunkin officers, by which term I mean of course the Licensed Victuallers, who pay the piper. It is but right that they should thus pay for the awakening of temperance thought and prohibitory sentiment. It is another instance of poetic justice.

THE EDUCATIONAL ENQUIRIES

have of late been the chief topic, I had almost said outside of politics, but even they have had a political or rather a party foundation. This is strongly evidenced in the charges against the Central Committee worked up by a few disappointed and jealous teachers, who were aided by the Mail for a political purpose. In the case of the Examination frauds the chief Tory organ had only subsequent references of a party coloring, but then there are few matters the Mail can speak of without somehow trying to make a party cry. The charges against the Central Committee were made in a weak effort to bring some complaint against the Department of Education, which has been so well managed under the administration of Mr. Crooks, and thereby to make an attack on the Provincial Government's Education policy. The attempt as it deserved has most signally failed. The very men, who, through personal pique and absurd jealousy hatched the trouble, were too cowardly to come forward and testify; but contented themselves with sending forward a few whom they could influence by appealing to their credulity and greater conscientiousness The count alleging that a "ring" existed in the committee, was abandoned by the council, who appeared for the Mail, and who seemed to have the general conduct of the complaints. Though he objected to the term "counsel for the prosecution," it was a very natural way in which to speak of him, as he alone appeared in the character of complainant. Of the other count I shall say nothing, as it is yet sub judice. There can be no harm, however, in stating that those who are supposed to greatly desire some censure of the Committee by the Commissioner have no great hope that such will be the case.

THE MAILS MARKET REPORTS.

Speaking of the Mail, I would here point out an instance of how that sheet looks after the interests of the farmers, for the "protection" of whom it cries out, though they know their own business better than it does. There was a high old time on the Corn Exchange last Saturday over the market reports of the Globe and Mail, the former paper giving quotations of produce several cents higher than the other paper. Of course it is to the interest of the merchants who compose the corn exchange to get their grain as cheaply as possible, and to this end to have prices quoted low. Thus the low figures given by the Mail just suits them; and it is shrewdly suspected that they themselves give the Mails commercial man the rates they want published. At any rate on Saturday they pitched into the Globe for quoting too high. One produce merchant defended that journal, and showed that even it was a half cent under the market—as regards No. 1 Spring wheat, large sales of which had been made the day before at $1.12½, while the Mail reported that grade offering readily at $1.12, with buyers at $1.10. Discrepancies even greater than these run through the market reports of Globe and Mail, as may be seen by comparing them. I believe attempts have been made to bully the Globe reporter, who evidently gets his information from private sources outside the ring that practically controls the Mails quotations. It was even threatened that his employers would be waited on to the end, that he might be dismissed. I don't know whether the Browns were interviewed in the way threatened, but I do know that the same man still represents the Globe on 'change. It may suit the grain buyers here to try and secure low quotations in the papers, and it may suit the Mail, or the Mail's representative to agree with them; but it suits the outside dealers, and particularly the farmers, to know the highest prices at which produce sells, and it will also in the end suit that paper which gives reliable reports of the market and thus secures a good reputation in the whole Province, even it does clash with the designs of a few persons in the Toronto Exchange.

STATE OF BUSINESS.

Business is generally reviving, and an era of continued prosperity is confidentially looked forward to by men of business in all lines. There is a good deal of idleness to be observed among certain classes, as there is always in cities of the extent of Toronto. Destitution and even crime will no doubt be somewhat prevalent during the winter; but a well-organised plan among the charitable societies will weaken the force of poverty, while evil-doers will be taken care of by our excellent police.

THE AMUSEMENT SEASON

is fairly setting in. It is not a bad sign that several courses of lectures by very able men are announced; while the theatres are but meagerly patronised. The Mechanic's Institute and the Y. M. C. A. have also provided amusements that will tend to act as a counter attraction to saloons. Skating and curling too, will soon commence, and the rinks promise to be well patronised this winter.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The regular monthly meeting of the School Board was held on Tuesday evening last. Present:—James Stevenson, Esq., Chairman and Messrs Edwards, Donaldson, Robertson, Lech, Richardson, Shaw, McClelland, Kincaid, Pentland, Edmison and Coe.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Educational Department asking the number of pupils lately in attendance at the Model School.

From Joseph Sprecally asking to be appointed Janitor for 3rd Ward School.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

A report from the Principal showing attendance at the schools during the month of November was read, of which the following is a synopsis.

	On Roll	Average
Collegiate Institute	123	114
Central School	559	479
South Ward School	243	200
Auburn School	64	61
Total	1035	853

Fees received from Institute.....$4.00
Central School.....11.50

The Principal drew the attention of the Board to the fact that the smoke and foul air coming from the register into the Principal's room is very injurious to the health of the pupils. Also to the accumulation of dust on the School furniture.

A letter from the Principal was then read, suggesting the establishment of a "Library of Reference." If $100 were granted the Educational department could supplement it with a light sum, and a portion might then be appropriated for maps and other requisites as $125 would purchase the necessary books.

The communications were on motion received.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Shaw as chairman of the Finance Committee stated that he might report on the two following accounts as they had been vouched for.

G. E. Laslie.....$4.00
Gas Company.....2.10

LOCAL NEWS

Candidates for municipal honors are stepping up daily.

Wolves are said to be very numerous in the back country this fall.

The children are beginning to speculate what Santa Claus will bring them.

Fancy Slippers.—Larmour is now making Fancy Slippers a specialty, give him a call.

The question agitating fashionable circles: "Do those gentlemen in Ulsters wear trousers?"

Police Court.—Nothing of importance has transpired at the Police Court during the past week.

Soper & Bailey's is the only place in town where you can get the "Pocket Piece" smoking tobacco.

St. Paul's Church.—Major Malan will preach in St. Paul's Church on Sunday evening next. Subject: "Unfulfilled Prophecy."

Against Tax Exemption.—Petitions are being circulated throughout the town praying the Legislature to abolish tax exemptions.

School Vacation.—The Christmas vacation of the public schools will commence on December 24th and end on January 2nd, including both days.

The Dufferin Overshoe is all the rage, for sale at Larmour's. The cheapest and best ever, shoe made, call and get a pair before they are all gone.

People who get up in the front part of the Opera House to put on their overcoats before the performances close, don't know enough to pound sand.

Mr. J. Haggart, Jr., of this town, favored the Lindsayites with a reading at the St. Andrew's concert, on Friday evening last, and was well received.

Carefully ascertain the state of your family's health each morning before leaving home, because the municipal candidates will want to know, you know.

At a social gathering a few evenings since, the following toast was proposed and drunk: "In seconding the bill of prosperity may we never need a friend."

Shipment of Butter.—During the past week, Messrs. Harvie & Bro. have shipped, direct to Liverpool, 21,200 pounds of butter. Mr. W. H. Wrighton also shipped 23,000 pounds to Montreal.

An Exchange says:—"If you want to get robbed of your good name just paint it on your umbrella." The editor of the Tangle-leg Advocate is competent for such work without stealing the umbrella.

Probabilities.—There will probably be a large quantity of new blood in the council next year. Several councillors having expressed their intention of retiring from the trials and tribulations of aldermanic life.

Rudiments of Music.—Mr. J. W. Youmans will give an exhibition of his method of teaching children the rudiments of music, on Saturday afternoon next, at two o'clock. All are invited. Free, both parents and children.

Another Concert.—The Tandy Brothers and Miss Barr were received with so great enthusiasm last night that by request they sing again in Rundell's Hall to-night. Programme entirely different. Tickets only 25 and 35 cents.

Concert To-night.—The success attending the sale of tickets of the Tandy Bro. concert has induced the Committee of Management to change them for a second appearance to-night. Let there be a bumper house. Entire change of programme.

Public Meeting.—A public meeting of the friends of temperance will be held in the Council chamber, Ashburnham, this (Thursday) evening, at 8 p. m. Several persons will address the meeting in favor of the By-law, now before the people for their approval.

Deer Hunting.—The open season for deer shooting closed on Friday last, but parties have two weeks to dispose of what venison they may have on hand. Deer have been found more than usually plentiful this season, and sportsmen have been correspondingly successful.

Service.—There will be a service in the George street Methodist Church, on Friday evening, at 7.30 for young men. Major Malan will deliver an address. It is hoped that the young men of all churches in town will be present. Not only young men, but all classes will be welcome.

Norwood is preparing to enter on its career as an independent municipality.—There is quite an excitement in the village over the Receivship. The friends of Mr. Pearce are quite confident of success. He would no doubt fill the chair to the honor of the village, and with credit to himself, and should be elected.

Personal.—At a meeting of L. O. G. T. Grand Lodge, held in London, last week, Mr. Knowlton, P. G. W. C. T., was, by a vote of the lodge, accorded a public reception, in recognition of his past services in the Dunkin Campaign. This being the first reception awarded a member of that body it is therefore the greater honor.

20 Cent Tea is sold at Stone & Bailey's for 20 cents cash.

A Liberal County Council.—It is not often that the hard-worked scribe of the press receives any recognition at the hands of bodies corporate, and it is refreshing to read that at the recent meeting of the Hastings county council, at Belleville, a motion was unanimously carried, voting the reporters of the press $25 each for reporting the proceedings during the year.

New and Choice Candies for the holidays at Stone & Bailey's.

Getting Scarce.—The recent intimation of the intention of the Government to prosecute all who had not complied with the Registration Act, in so far as it applies to the collection of vital statistics, has scared the delinquents somewhat, and they are making their returns to the Clerks in haste. Those who have not called around should do so at once or they will be put through their facings.

Good Valencia Raisins at Stone & Bailey's at five cents per pound.

Our Coming Mayor.—During the past few weeks the chief query on the streets has been: "who is to fill the civic chair during the coming year." Several names have been mentioned in connection therewith, but the one receiving most favor has been that of our present mayor, and we are pleased to hear that a requisition is being extensively signed by our prominent business men and ratepayers, asking him to again become a candidate for the Mayoralty. Should he accept the nomination we believe he will be elected by acclamation, as we hear of no other candidate who can have the slightest hope of successfully opposing him.

Four Barrels American Cranberries just received at Stone & Bailey's.

Board of Trade.—A meeting of the Board of Trade will be held this evening (Thursday) in the Council Chamber, at 7.30 o'clock, to discuss the advisability of affiliation with the Dominion Board. We would direct the attention of our readers to a communication in another column, touching on the state of this body, and trust that the President and other officers will beenir themselves, and infuse into the Board a vitality it at present lacks. Other towns of less importance than Peterborough have successfully inaugurated and continue to handsomely maintain their Boards of Trade, and why should not we? There should be no difficulty if properly managed. A summary of the proceedings of this body during the past year may be summed up in one word of seven letters—n-o-t-h-i-n-g.

Full Stock of canned goods just received—cheaper than ever at Stone & Bailey's.

Midland Railway Time Table.—Tuesday, 5th instant, another change took place in the time table of the Midland Railway. Three trains now leave Peterborough daily—going south at 6.25 a.m., 10.30 a.m. and 5.50 p.m. the first and latter connecting with the Grand Trunk eastward and west, morning and evening, and the Midnight the local Grand Trunk leaving Port Hope at 6.30 p.m., for Belleville and Kingston. Going northwards will leave Peterborough for Lakefield at 6.45 a.m., 12.15 p.m., and 6.10 p.m. The morning train north of two trains daily, made by the Superintendent was strongly disapproved of by the Trustees of Mr. Hogel, as being most inconvenient to the business men of Peterborough, and as soon as noticed by him was rescinded.

Stone & Bailey's Stock at winter Fruits Groceries, etc., is not complete, give them a call.

County Council.—The County Council met in special session on Thursday and Friday, to take into consideration the advisability of submitting the Dunkin Act By-law to the ratepayers in the county. On Thursday a deputation from the Dunkin Association addressed the Council, after which the petitions for the submission of the By-law were referred to a Committee to report next morning. On Friday morning the Committee reported recommending the prayer of the petitioners, and a by-law was accordingly passed on through its several stages. The poll will open on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, next, in the several municipalities, particulars of which may be seen in the by-law published in another column. A resolution of condolence to the widow and relatives of the late R. B. Rendall, and a vote of thanks to the Warden for his courteous conduct in the chair during the past year, were passed, after which the Council adjourned. We will refer more fully to matters concerning this body next week.

Neat and Stylish.—For a neat and stylish boot, go to W. J. Larmour's boot and shoe store.

The Canada Life.—The following very flattering notice we clip from a late number of The Journal of Commerce in reference to one of our most popular Life Assurance Companies: "The Canada Life has been one of the most successful institutions established in this country, ranking beside our best chartered banks in stability, and its long career of usefulness is attested to-day by thousands of families who are in comfortable circumstances owing to the foresight of their founders, and the prudential and successful management of the 'Savings Bank' in which they invested. Even on the basis of the new reserve of 4½ per cent. adopted by the Government last session, the Canada Life is already not only in a position to make the required reduction, but with a reserve of $90,000 over and above the amount thereby involved; and moreover, that the assets are so invested as to make it perfectly safe for it to work under the 5 per cent. standard for at least ten years to come, the surplus assets under that standard on the 30th April last being no less than $283,000."

Go to Larmour's for a pair of his Lady Dufferin overshoes. He is almost giving them away.

St. Andrew's Society.—We are happy to state that the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society is now in a healthier state than it has been for years. The officers are all efficient and work hard for the welfare of the Society, and as a result the membership is largely increasing. The following is a list of the new members for 1878, obtained by the new President, James Miller, Esq. Let each of the other officers do their duty as well, and we will have no fear but that our local branch will equal any other in the Dominion:—

John Gell,	John Gillespie,
R. Hogg,	W. Hastie,

ST. ANDREW'S NIGHT IN PETERBOROUGH.

The Annual Dinner—A Successful Celebration—No Liquors at the Festive Board—Interesting and Instructive Addresses.

The 30th of November, (St. Andrew's Night,) was this year celebrated by the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society by a dinner at the Carlisle House, at which about fifty or sixty gentlemen sat down. One very notable and commendable feature at the celebration was the absence of intoxicating liquors at the festive board. This act of the Society redounds to their credit, and the success which attended this temperance dinner demonstrates fully that the convivial glass is not necessary to the successful carrying out of annual dinners. The room was tastefully decorated with bunting, tartan plaids and appropriate mottoes. Mr. Moloney, as a caterer, proved himself equal to the occasion, and furnished an excellent bill of fare. James Millar, Esq., President, occupied the chair, and on his right were Rev. Mr. Willoughby, D. G. Hatton, Esq., Dr. Boucher, James W. Fitzgerald, Esq., A. Baptie, Esq., and D. McLeod, Esq. On his left were W. Hamilton, late President, Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Bell, and Muldhern, Dr. R. W. Bell, E. J. Toker and James Stratton, Esquires. The First Vice Chair was occupied by Mr. Charles Cameron, and the Second Vice Chair by Mr. D. Haggart. Supporting the Vice Chairs were Dr. Kincaid, Mayor Toole and other guests.

After the supper had been duly attended to, and the inward man satisfied, the chairman called on the meeting to prepare for the toasts of the evening.

The Chairman then gave "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family" and "The Governor-General of Canada," introducing each in a short but appropriate speech—the toasts being all received with applause.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers" was then proposed by the Chairman.

Dr. R. W. Bell in responding to this toast said, it was with feelings of regret and pleasure—regret that some one more competent had not been called upon, and pleasure at having the honor to speak for such a deserving body. With the Army and Navy he was not connected, but their deeds could speak for themselves. The Volunteers of Canada he had been connected with for the past twelve years—what, and they are making their returns to the Clerks in haste. Those who have not called around should do so at once or they will be put through their facings. and what they had been always found ready upon any occasion to go to the front, and defend their country. It was difficult to keep up this force in time of peace. The Volunteers were composed of young men who joined from patriotic motives, and he felt proud in saying that the Canadian Volunteers had always held their own. At Wimbledon they held their own among the crack shots from all quarters of the globe. Another occasion on which they proved themselves good soldiers was when two battalions were raised by the Government a few years ago to send out to the North West. Few knew the hardships they had on that journey to encounter, but they nobly, and manfully braved them all. On that occasion they were accompanied by the 16th Regt'am, one of the best regiments in the British service—and he had been assured by officers of that regiment that it was the hardest journey any army had ever been called upon to take, contravailing even the hardships of the Abyssinian expedition, but the Volunteers bore up resolutely, and performed their duties even better than the regulars. The officers of the 16th had held him they would give anything to have command of such a noble lot of fellows. One of the reasons why they were so efficient was that they were all Canadians, consequently they were better disciplined, and more cheerful to perform their duties. He again thanked them for the manner in which they had received the toast. (Applause.)

The Chairman then gave "the Day and a' who honor it" and in doing so said, he was glad to see so many present on this occasion, composed of Englishmen, Irishmen—yea Dunkinites and Anti-Dunkinites. (Laughter.) The object of the Society was most laudable—as the funds were used for the assistance of the poor Scotchmen, whose lot might be cast among them. He once joined the small army then contributed yearly; in fact he felt richer, and better after then relieving the distressed. He had joined the St. Andrews Society when yet a boy and with the exception of a few years, had belonged to [illegible] and intended to remain a member as long as he lived. There was plenty material in the town and county of Peterborough to swell the ranks numerically, and this meant raising more funds for the Society. It therefore behooved us all to put forth greater exertions, and as the Society is a benevolent one, as well as a social one—is worthy the support of Scotchmen. Gatherings like the present bring to my memory recollections of the Mother Country, the heather, the old church bell, and also the old grave yards where lie the bones of those whose memory we hold sacred. The world owes a good deal to Scotland for the warriors and statesmen which she has produced. England and Ireland also owe her a great deal. Did Scotia not supply Ireland with her St. Patrick. Scotland has now become noted for her natural scenery, and as a resort for tourists. There is lots of pleasure there, for her fishing, hunting, and bonnie lassies are not without their attractions. And Scotch-men like to see these people come, for they spend lots of money, and the Sect is proverbial for having an eye to business. The Queen when she comes to Balmoral fears no insult, for north of the Tweed she is always safe. The speaker here read a [illegible] from the President of the Chicago St. Andrews Society extending fraternal greetings, to which he had answered in a similar strain.

Rev. Mr. Torrance on rising to respond, said, that although he could [illegible] being a [illegible] he [illegible]ch blood in his veins and as a Canadian he knew something of the characteristics of the Scotchman. He could understand why Scotchmen on St. Andrew's night extended special sympathy to those of the same ancestory. It arises from the love Scotchmen bear to their native land. Other nations may boast of a brighter sky and a sunnier clime, but nevertheless Scotland has her attractions. To tourists its varied scenery always proves attractive, and Scotchmen look with pride on their native land. Besides her natural attractions she has a history second to no other country in the world. Her land has ever been occupied by a valient people, and she has brought forward such heros as Wallace and Bruce. He rejoiced that [illegible]and was united to England and [illegible] thus consentated did far more to cement the two countries than ever the force of arms could have done. Scotchmen also loved their native land because of its literature and its literature grows out of its history. Poets have recorded the early deeds of her heroes, for these heroes left a record. Scotchmen are also well acquainted with the literature of their native land and are proud of their authors. What names could be mentioned that would draw forth more respect than those of Robert Burns and Sir Walter Scott. Their literature was a tie that bound Scotchmen together in whatever clime they might reside. (Applause.)

Mr. Charles Cameron, First Vice-President then gave "The Canadian House of Commons and the Local Legislature" and in so doing regretted the absence of the local representatives of those bodies. He eulogized our forms of government—thought they were second to none in any other country, and that our statesmen in order to carry them out must be men of integrity, ability and experience. The Dominion of Canada was getting a great power and he felt proud in saying that we had statesmen comparing favorably with those of the mother country. Our educational system too was a something that Canadians could feel justly proud of, as at the late Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, Canada took the lead in the Educational exhibits.

The Secretary hear read a letter of apology from Dr. O'Sullivan regretting his absence owing to professional duties, and the Chairman stated that Mr. Bertram was unable to attend owing to illness.

Dr. Kincaid briefly returned thanks for the manner in which the toast had been drank.

Mr. D. Haggart, Second Vice President, proposed "Canada our Home." He said it afforded him great pleasure in seeing those present to-night representing so many different nationalities, although he regretted that Scotchmen had not better patronized it. Although not a Scotchman he could sympathise with them. He was born of Scottish parents in the Town of Peterborough, and he felt sure if his lot were to be cast in any other country, he would always retain a warm side for Canada. He believed that here in Canada the different nationalities should be blended together into one great body, spreading as they do over a tract of country second to none in the world. When we get the Pacific Railway it would do much to bind Canadians together and establish a national feeling. With this great union of people, making such rapid strides towards national development, it was hard to tell what the future of Canada would be. She at present Canada held a third-rate position among the nations of the earth, as regards her merchant ship ping, and if we go on increasing in the future as we have in the past, the time may come when we will break loose from the Mother Country and take our place among the leading nations of the earth. He might not live to see this, neither those whom he was addressing, but he believed that day would come, and that a bright day was in store for this young Dominion. (Applause.)

Dr. Kincaid, in responding, said:—Mr. President and gentlemen, the toast I am called upon to respond to to-night is, I believe, the most important one on the list, and perhaps the way in which I can do it most justice is to refer to it as our home. In doing so I will be brief, as I am surrounded by so many eloquent men who are to follow me. In looking back for the past thirty years, and seeing the rapid development of this country, every one must feel a pleasure in having it as this home. In 1847, when I first came here, Canada was but a small place. She was then suffering from that dreadful fever which so devastated and depopulated her shores. At that time too, her political history was but in its infancy. Those great Reformers, Baldwin, Hincks and others, were struggling for responsible government. Then Canada was but a small place, with but little shipping, and few canals. Her cities were few and had but small populations. Her educational system was then very deficient, and Dr. Ryerson—the father of the educational system of Canada—was working hard to bring about those changes which he has since effected. Since then vast changes have taken place. When Confederation was formed a nation was born that may yet rival the grand old empire that at present we feel proud to form a part of—a nation having already the elements of greatness within sharing new vigour on the east and on the west by two mighty oceans ready to bring the trade and commerce of the world into her lap. We have now a Dominion system of canals, railways and education, with magnificent inland seas and mighty rivers running down to the ocean—the great fertilizers of the soil. When the Governor-General was in Manitoba this summer he was, in one day, able to address thousands—composed of English, Irish, Scotch, French, German, Icelanders, Mennonites, Half Breeds, and for all I know that class termed by Bret Harte as the "Heathen Chinee." Such a population as this surely contained the elements of greatness; and with such we were sure to make rapid strides in wealth and position as a nation. Our Universities and Colleges were turning out men who were a credit to Canada or any other country. They were to be found in the Pulpit, on the Bench, at the Bar, and among all the professions—all sons of Canada and educated in Canadian institutions. They are to be found at home and abroad; and I need go no further for an illustration than your own son, who recently went to Scotland, and has now taken degrees in the College of Surgeons at Edinburgh. You may well feel proud of him as a son, and I do so, as he was a pupil of mine. Gentlemen, to a great degree, had raised the country for the past thirty years, and to them we are indebted for a constitution that makes us the freest country under the sun. True our constitution is modelled after that of the mother country, but our rulers have had much to make it what it is. When Lord Dufferin was addressing that heterogeneous mass before alluded to he told them of the freedom they enjoyed, told that the law which gave them that freedom was equally potent to punish the offender as to protect the law abiding citizen. One drawback in our country, and one I regret—is the spectacle of those engaged in by our public men. Where these great men who brought about Confederation walked across the floor of the House of Parliament and shook hands, forgetting their differences, and burying their political quarrels in the past, they reconstituted a public and a working action; and it would have been well had this been carried out since. But now they are wandered and alienated from one end of the Province to the other; not only by the Provincial lines, but by themselves, although the press does its share. This slander business will have to be done away with, or else our best men will not come forward to serve the country. Their places will be filled by inferior men who care not for the abuse so lavishly dealt out upon them, so long as they can retire upon fat offices. One of our statesmen has been, at all events, above this,—I mean Sir John Macdonald, who, the New York Herald says, has stuck to power "like a ring-tailed monkey to a palm tree." (Laughter.) Young Canadians, I would say to you, buckle on your armour, and as you are indebted to England, Irishmen and Scotchmen for shoulder, our ancestors stood pleading your present position, endeavour to emulate their deeds, and prepare yourselves to take their places in the legislature halls of the country. Take as your motto, "Nobilitas sola est atque unica Virtus."—(virtue is the only true nobility), and whatever you do act in peace and harmony with other nations. Cultivate that spirit existing between Great Britain and the United States, whereby the Eastern Boundary question was settled by the Ashburton Treaty, the Trent affair by diplomacy, the Alabama claims by the Geneva Conference and the Fishery question by the recent Halifax Commission. And above all impress upon your government the necessity of nothing your differences amicably by means of such conferences as was held at Geneva, and leave us alone in this Canada of ours to cultivate the peaceful attributes of peace, of commerce and of brotherly love throughout the world. (Applause.)

Mr. J. R. Orchard, Treasurer of the Society gave the next toast "The Learned Professions" and in doing so thought he had the most important one of the evening, and had hoped that some one abler had been chosen. The Learned Professions embraced divinity, legal gentlemen, and the medical faculty. The divines he considered took the lead, and were the most honorable and responsible, as no other did so much in moulding a healthy sentiment among the people of Canada. There was no social evil but what they could check or greatly alleviate, and received the veneration and respect of the entire community. Another important body was the Bench and Bar, and the purity and impartiality with which our laws were dispensed gave ample evidence that in this department there were men of no ordinary ability. Another important body was the medical faculty—gentlemen we all appreciated when we were sick—and more so if we got better. To them we owe a great deal, and it is but right that we should pay them a tribute of respect. If they did not at all times cure,—we had the satisfaction of knowing that we could die scientifically. (Laughter.)

Song—"For they are a jolly good fellows."

The Rev. Mr. Bell, on behalf of the divines, D. G. Hatton Esq., on behalf the Bench and Bar, and Dr. Boucher on behalf of the medical faculty returned thanks.

The Chairman then called on Mr. William Tolton, the Bard of the Society, to read his annual poem,

Mr. Telford then read the following:—

THE BRAGGEN SCOTCH.

On St. Andrew's nicht when the Scotchmen comes oot.
'Tis a laughable farce, ye hae heard them noo and
Some seems in fair earnest while others in fun,
Makes auld Scotia the fairest spot under the sun,
They brag o' her barras, her braes, grund and
You wad think they were flowin' wi' milk and Wi' honey;
The Frinroses an' Cowslip, without plantin' or Wedon,
They wad mak folks believe 'twas the garden of Eden;
Exaggerate that bit thing, like Scot meet a neb,
'Tis the emblem of Scotia, the Thistle me green;
Wi' its sharp-pointed leaves, an' it gage vera
Ye
Is no safe for nae hands but a Scotchemen's to touch;
They prides up her heather, as bonny and guid,
That has often been dyed wi' their forefathers blood;
Is peace or in war, o'er that heather they tread;
Oft the martyr's spirit was yielded to God.
They brag up the Scotch for their learnin' an'
lear,
They learned an' canny they are hard as a nut.
Hands ready to grip, an' a pouch if ye please,
Always gapin wide open to hand their bawbees.
They tell us the Scotch are a wonderfu' race,
For siller an' learnin' and mickle in place,
Where ever they are, high or low their degree,
Sandy's nature is upward, an up' he will be.
They claim o' their statesmen, their statsmen's high skill,
Of the officers' branches, an' pulpits they fill;
Of the heroes, an' lords, oh they gie us much things,
Its a wonder the Scots hasna a' been made kings.
They brag up the Scotch for their red-rosy face,
Dyspepsia nor gout seldom mention their name.
For their liver is pair, you lanch if you please,
Bannies baked frae the meal, mixed wi' barley an'
peas.
To wash doon the bannies they have plenty o'
kail,
Or some a guid' tato broth keeps then hearty an'
hale.
There is some here this nicht in their young days did learn
To mak a guid dinner on tatos an' herrin',
Blaw away braggin Scotch, we can patiently hear
Ye neglected to tell us how fast a bairn grows
That is raised in auld Scotia on parritch an' brose.
Do you wish optic proof take a glance over there,
See how nicely he fills up the President's chair;
See a nieg sturdy Scot, but as sterlin' as steel;
An' a guid aaaale sample o' auld Scotia's ceilcod.
I could tell you some mair, but it altars the plan,
Why the Scotch can eat guid stuff wi' een white men:
For an Johnnie Malcome's, on St. Andrew's nicht
How the pastry an' poultry disappears, 'tis a fright.
If I was a Scotchman, as I easy micht be,
I could brag up the Scotch, an' auld Scotia see free,
Scotia's name stands untarnished through ages
thats gone,
She may have her equals, but superiors none.
Her history was fire, persecution an' wars,
An' her sons' noble deeds they are still rehearsed,
They fought, fell an' died, for their freedom an'
God.
Scots honor their names on St. Andrew's nicht,
Scots anger at the Scotch, an' their heads gie a wag,
Because o' their kin an' their country they brag.
Then Scotch, English, Irish an' Scot,
If you don't like the name why we care not a jot.
There are others that point out the finger o'
shame,
At some puir worthless Scot that disgraces the name,
There are plenty bad Scots, that I freely admit,
But a race all perfection I never saw yet,
Brither Scots when ye brag ye maun bear this in mind,
An' no let her have but a mere puff of wind.
Open free, heart an' hand, while the oath ye have got,
An' relieve the distress of a puir brither Scot.
If a Scots here this nicht, and all over the earth,
Don't dishonour your name nor the land of birth;
So that when we meet here, wi' fair honor an'
credit
We may brag up auld Scotia on St. Andrew's nicht.

Mr. John Elder then proposed the "Sister Societies" and said:—The toast allotted to me is an important one, not so much in proposing, as the response, it will call forth from our esteemed guest, both Englishmen, Irishmen and Canadians who are always welcome at our National festivities. I am glad to see the sons of Scotia gathered together to-night to do honor to the Patron St. of our native land, and our worthy guests and representatives of our Sister Societies who have favored us with their presence. We are glad to see so many of you and the hearty interest you are taking in our celebration, may you continue to spend the remainder of the evening pleasantly, and that you may remember for a long time the gathering of the Clansmen by your worthy chief when pressing duties on us have to night. I am sorry that such social gatherings are not more frequent. It is good for man to have intervals of recreation and diversion from the daily anxieties and toil of life, and such meetings as these are calculated not only to amuse, but to instruct society. Some times it has been asked why under all the circumstances of our present position with a people lacking from so many different lands, and we being so far from our native lands and progressing so rapidly as we are in this country to prove that we are a nationality. Why perpetuate these St. Andrew's societies? I answer, that it is our own natural bearing to do so. We are of Scotch descent, and we delight to honor our own natural birthplace and to hand down to our children the traditions of more recent time, most persons entertain vivid recollection of the time and events of their earlier childhood. I was pleased in listening to the President portraying to you the beauties, and glory of bonnie Scotland. He is proud of the birthright and so ought all Scotchmen to be of their country, when we think of our long line of heroes, statesmen, poets and philosophers, champions for truth and good government, whose fame will ever go down to posterity. It will be said by some that we sound forth too much praise of Scotia. But Mr. President on a night like this we will be excused. We must not forget them, one other country who have produced great men, both Englishmen and Irishmen have good reason to be proud of their country, they have produced great and intellectual men. No countries ancient or modern can produce a greater firmament of intellectual glory in every department of human thought and action. England and Ireland have sons who rank with the worlds proudest chieftains, and when the roll call of honor of the Nations is made up, England and Ireland will not be behind. These together with our own historic worthies have laid broad and deep the foundations of the greatness of the British Empire. Here is a common ground, shoulder to our ancestors have laboured to hand down to us the sacred heritage of British freedom and glory. Together have they fought on the same battle field in the same cause sacrificing their lives for their country; together have they sung the poem of our shadow. The questions dealt with are still more limited, and any practical benefit effected by it may be termed a shadow, and I believe, like a shadow, it will soon vanish. Such is the fate of all institutions built on delusive hopes. The projectors anticipated too much when they expected to bring business men together for the purpose of discussing the wants defects or changes which are taking place, as well as the disadvantages and irregularities in connection with different branches of business, and endeavouring by united action to conserve as far as possible the trade of Peterboro, which is now being drawn to other places for want of an effort to retain it. It cannot be very flattering to the President to find such a lack of interest and want of enthusiasm amongst its members. The question now is to find what is its true position and what connection it holds, if any, to a Board of Trade. Its next step will no doubt be towards an honourable demise, for such is generally the fate of all institutions born in advance of their time. May it die regretted.

THE WESTON MURDER.

EXECUTION OF JOHN WILLIAMS FRIDAY MORNING.

The Prisoner's Demeanour—Scenes in the Gaol—His Death.

A few minutes before nine on Friday morning John Williams, the Weston wife murderer, suffered death on the scaffold for his offences. The execution took place in the east yard of the gaol in the presence of about one hundred persons. The prisoners in the institution were not called upon, as on like occasions in the past, to witness the execution. They were locked in the corridors, and though those in the northern windows had ample opportunity of seeing the execution, yet very few faces were visible. Mr. Green, the Governor, went into the different wards early in the morning and informed the prisoners of what was about to take place, requesting them at the same time to remain perfectly quiet and orderly. They promised to do so, and scarcely a breath was heard from them for some time before and after the execution.

Of the prisoner the officers of the prison have only good to speak. It is said that Williams, after his condemnation, never expressed any apprehension that he would end his life on the scaffold, but on the contrary informed the Governor that something told him he was not to die. The gaol officials endeavoured to disabuse his mind of any false hope that a too sanguine temperament might raise, but he still clung to the idea that it was impossible that he should be hung in the face of the strong recommendation the jury made in his favor. His demeanor toward the officers before and since his sentence was singularly mild, not to say gentle, and they found that although he tried to hide his feelings under a stolid manner he felt keenly the awful crime that lay upon him and for which he had been passed on him the highest sentence known to the law. He exhibited a great desire for books and papers of a religious character, and being supplied with them, spent most of his time in perusing their pages. He is said to have possessed great intelligence, remarkable in one in so humble a station in life. As the day of his death drew near he became anxious and restless and asked that Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Weston, should be sent to him. His request was complied with, and the reverend gentleman remained with him to the end.

On Saturday last when the Sheriff received the telegram from Ottawa stating that there would be no reprieve, Governor Green visited Williams' cell and broke the news to him. Williams did not exhibit any emotion, but in a low voice said, "My God, is all hope gone?" On the Tuesday following his daughters, four in number, visited the gaol for the purpose of bidding their unhappy father a last farewell. The scene between them is said to have been very affecting, but Williams bore up manfully and gave them good advice, parting with them most reluctantly and with tears rolling down his thin and pale cheeks. After this interview he was in very low spirits and showed the utmost contrition for the act he had committed, but his son called to see him on Wednesday and informed him of the petitions that had been sent to Ottawa, and this again raised the unfortunate man's hopes, and turned his thoughts away from the fate that threatened him. After hearing that the petitions had not affected the decision of the Executive, he said he was willing to meet his fate. He denied all knowledge of what had transpired in his house on the night of the 21st September, saying that he had no recollection of it nor of the man Stones bringing the liquor to his house. His chief anxiety was for his children, for whom he evinced the greatest affection, and often when talking of them he would burst into tears.

Rev. Mr. Johnson remained with him all Thursday night. They prayed and had religious converse, the Holy Communion being administered during the night. About twelve o'clock he asked for writing materials and wrote the following letter:—

"In the Gaol.

"Toronto, Nov. 29th, Midnight.

"To my Children and Friends.—You will want to know how I feel with regard to this side me, and I will try to tell you. I have dropped into a trap which has ended in opening my eyes and letting me see where I have done wrong, and I thing many others are perhaps, without thinking, doing as I did. I can now see two things which I did wrong in. I had good parents, and I ran away from them and have never seen them since. From that time on I neglected God too, and worse the Sabbath. Seldom have I darkened a church door, and never enquired of any one how I might be happy in the next world, and in truth it never came into my head that I should want it. O how different I feel now, and how I wish I had done better, and loved everything I wish I had attended my church, for there I would have known something about God before where I must stand in a few hours more. When I think how the church was open close beside me Sunday after Sunday, and how I knew all were invited in, yet I neglected it, though I did not want to break the Sabbath, but just idled or frooled my time away. I see now what a chance it was of me to know there was a God over my head, but I neither served or loved Him, and oh what would I not give if I had it to have done what I ought while I could. Oh dear children and friends, hear and believe a dying man beseeching of you to attend your church. Never make excuses: go there wet or dry. Something seems now to say to me God set apart this day for our good, and I knew it and would not attend to it. and it weighs terrible on my mind. There are many amoung my friends who mean no more ill than I did; but this is enough. If I had tried to serve God He never would have taken this most awfull manner way to teach me. Oh, why did I not learn while I could. And oh, do you try now and do as you will wish you had done when you come to die, and may you never be caught in the trap I am caught in. Oh that I could only be let to make you hear and believe me. Never forget to honour and serve God. Go to your church and try to do your best, and He will never forsake you or let you go to the bad as I have done.

My notion is to write this to a few in Weston and around there, and to my children too. Never forget your church, or you will soon forget God, as I have done, and then find it very, very bitter and hard work to find Him again. I bid you good-bye in the world. When you hear my name remember what I say. Think about God and serve Him while you can, before you come into this trap and have to pay your life for neglecting it. I never should have come to this if I had remembered Him at all. This is all the truth. If I had done that I never should have been here. God have mercy on my soul and pardon me. Now dear children you are alone in the world; but have no fear try to honor God and serve Him and do right, and I can assure will take-care of you."

The condemned man, it is said made a private confession to the minister, which was not made public. At one o'clock he lay down and, for the first time since his imprisonment, fell into a deep sleep. Shortly after six Mr. Green entered the cell, and found him still sleeping, and at seven he was in the same condition. At twenty minutes past seven, when the Governor entered the room, he was sitting at the stove eating a piece of bread. He rose and, as was his custom, raised his head in salutation.

"Good morning, Williams." said the Governor, "how do you feel?"

"Well, sir," was the reply, "I feel as light and as well as I could possibly feel."

"Put away your bread," said the Governor, "and I will send you a strong cup of coffee and something for your breakfast to strengthen you."

"Never mind, sir, this will do just as well," answered Williams.

The Governor repeated his remarks, and Williams laid dawn his bread. Mr Green then asked him if he wanted anything done to prepair him for the dreadful trouble that awaited him. He answered that he was prepared, and wanted nothing that he could think of. The Governer then left him, and shortly afterwards his breakfast, consisting of a cup of coffee, a mutton chop, and some sausages, was sent into the cell. Of these the prisoner made a hearty meal, and laid down his knife and fork with the words, "Thank Almighty God." He was then shaved and put on a clean shirt. "When the sheriff and officers entered his cell to pinion him he stood up and said in a low voice—"The last hour has come." He then walked to his bed and taking up his hat put it on his head, and then held back his arms for the cords. The mournful procession then moved out of the cell in the following order:—Governor Green and Bailiff Bright, Sheriff Jarvis and Capt. Maule, assistant-deputy sheriff, the Prisoner, supported by Rev. Mr. Johnston, the Executioner, and two or three gaol officials. The assemblage had previously passed into the yard and the march through the rotunda and down the stone steps was witnessed by but half-a-dozen members of the press and one or two turnkeys, besides those engaged in it. The doomed man walked with a firm step and displayed no outward emotion. His face was pale, almost to ghastliness, and bore unmistakable evidences of the mental agony he must have endured within the past few days. As he passed the large iron gates opening from the main entrance into the rotunda he grasped the hand of Orsweird, a turnkey, and shook it warmly, at the same time bidding him good-bye. It took but a minute to walk from there to the yard where the scaffold was erected. Ascending the steps, the prisoner, for the first time, caught sight of the dread structure which was so soon to be the means of terminating his existence in this world. He quivered but otherwise betrayed no agitation, although terribly agitated he must have been too see death staring him in the face. He walked with steady tread across the yard and ascended the steps to the platform shortly yet with great firmness, his eye all the while fixed on dangling rope suspended from the cross beam. The scaffold was of the ordinary kind, built of stout timber, and having a drop of about five feet. Besides the [illegible] there were present on the platform Sheriff Jarvis, [illegible] Green, Rev. Mr. Johnston, Captain Maule, Dr. Richardson, and [illegible] Bright. A moment of awful [illegible] intervened after these gentlemen had taken their places. The Sheriff then asked Williams if he had anything to say, and on the latter replying [illegible] yes, motioned for him to step to the front of the platform, which he did. With his hands tightly upon the railing and his eyes surveying the spectators, the dying man spoke as follows:—

Gentlemen.—I desire to make a few remarks regarding this. I would wish to thank the Governor and deputy-Governor, and all the officers under his charge, for the kind way they have used me. I would also wish to thank my counsel for the way they defended me; I am sorry that I got a fair trial. I thank the people at large for what they have done for me, also my clergyman. That's all."

He uttered these remarks without tremour or emotion, although it was evident it was a great effort on his part to do so. There was a pause between each sentence as if the speaker hardly knew what to say. The clergyman came to his assistance and prompted him in his concluding words. At the motion of the Sheriff, Williams then took his stand upon the trap door, which was about four feet square. The hangman pinioned his legs just above the knee, and the doomed man knelt down, having drawn the black cap over his face, the executioner adjusted the noose about his neck. The knot was very large, and the noose seemed rather awkwardly placed. While these operations were being performed Rev. Mr. Johnston was slowly reading a commendatory prayer, the work and the prayer being concluded almost simultaneously. The hangman then took his position in front of the kneeling murderer, with his hand on the lever which controlled the gear of the trap. In solemn voice the clergyman began to repeat the Lord's Prayer, and just as the words "but deliver us from evil," were escaping from his lips, the Sheriff gave the signal to the executioner who sprung the trap, and Williams fell through with a thud, gasping in the throes of death. For four minutes the body twitched convulsively, and the limbs quivered violently. After the lapse of seven minutes the body ceased to move, and shortly after Dr. Richardson pronounced life extinct. The noose had not been made tight enough, for the knot slipped around to the back of the neck instead of remaining under the left ear where the executioner adjusted it, consequently death resulted from strangulation rather than from dislocation of the vertebræ. When the usual twenty minutes had expired the body was cut down, placed in a black pine coffin, and carried into the condemned cell where where a post mortem examination was made by Dr. Richardson in presence of a number of medical students who had witnessed the execution. The features of the deceased were placed and calm, and bore no appearance of the violent struggle which had taken place before death. The usual formality of an inquest was gone through before Coroner Bridgeman. The evidence of Dr. Richardson was to the effect that deceased died from hanging, and the jury returned a verdict accordingly. In the afternoon the body was buried in the gaol yard, immediately beneath the spot on which the scaffold stood.

The executioner was Henry England, an ex-whiskey detective of this city. He wore no mask, and went about his ghastly work in a very business-like manner. He has lived three years in Toronto, and being hard up and having a family to support proffered his services in order to procure a little money. He said that Williams acted "as firm as a rock" up to the moment of his death.

Ignoble Warfare.

From the London Advertiser.

The Mail points in its editoral columns, and editorially comments on it, an extract from a letter addressed to the Minister of Public Works describing the sufferings to which disabled workmen on the Pacific R. R. are exposed, and the cruel indifference of the contractors to the claims of humanity these wretched fellows have, whom sickness have overtaken or accident broken down. The letter concludes with a defiant challenge to the Minister and 'his organs' to dare to deny the truth of its contents, and the Mail cautiously, but artfully, concludes its comments with the reflection that "somebody has blundered."

The challenge of the letter and the crafty prominence given to it by the Mail are intended to create an impression on the unthinking mind that the Minister of Public Works is responsible for the sufferings of those poor, disabled navvies. Is there any limit to the malignity with which the Tories pursue Mr. Mackenzie? What has the Minister to do with such a matter, scandalous as it may be? He lets a contract to a certain man at a certain price. His business begins and ends with seeing that the work is completed according to contract and duly paid for. He has no more to do with the contractor's treatment of his workpeople than he has to do with the color of his hair or his religious creed. If the navvy is wronged, the courts are open to him as to any other citizen; if he is cruelly treated, he must charge it to "man's inhumanity to man," like the rest of us. Human suffering always deserves commiseration, but those who twist it about for political purposes, as in this case, are wretched specimens of humanity, and their philanthropy the most imprudent pretence. After a while perhaps, if a landing-waiter beats his wife, the Minister of customs will be arraigned for the crime, or if an indian indulges in some scalping the Minister of the Interior will be held responsible for the bald-headness.

A Question to be Answered.

A statement is going the rounds to the effect that a gentleman who has made it his business to find out discoveries that during the six months the Dunkin Act has been in force in Owen Sound 400 barrels, or 20,000 gallons of whiskey have been sold in that town. This is being used as an argument that the Dunkin Act increases the consumption of liquor; but before such a conclusion can be drawn we should know whether the quantity formerly sold in six months was less; also whether the 400 barrels were all drunk in Owen Sound, or if the whole quantity does not include what was sold there for shipment to Manitoulin, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay, and other outside places. Give us the particulars gentlemen, for we cannot beleive that Owen Sound, hard and all as its name is, drinks every day, Sundays included, more than two barrels of whiskey alone. The citizens of Owen Sound should certainly call upon "the gentleman who has made it his business to find out" to explain how he gets the figures which represents them as guzzling over one hundred gallons of whiskey daily, to say nothing of other drinks. Anyway who is this "gentleman who made it his business?" An Owen Sounder of our acquaintance would like to make his for a few minutes.—Barrie Gazette.

LINDSAY.

Typhoid Fever.—Seven members of Hon Mr. Wood's family, at Lindsay, have been stricken with typhoid fever. Three of them are now convalescent, one more is improving rapidly, but three are yet in a critical state. His second daughter is very low. Mr. Wood himself has been very unwell, but did not have the fever.

Fatal Accident.—Simon Lovett, an old man upwards of eighty years of age, who resides on the boundary of Mariposa and Eldon, met with an accident at the Globe hotel in this town on Thursday last, which caused his death on the following day. He had come to town on Wednesday evening to see his son, who is confined to gaol in default of not finding sureties to keep the peace against his father—and stopped at the Globe Hotel. He occupied a room in the third storey and on the following morning whilst making his way down stairs he fell from the top to the bottom. He was picked up shortly after, and on medical aid being procured it was found he had his hip bone broken and received serious injuries inwardly. He suffered much pain and died on Sunday. He was burried on Monday in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

NORTH VERULAM.

Threshing has been going on briskly, and a large quantity of grain has been thrashed out during the past ten days. Among the most successful of the thrashers is Mr. Jas. Humphries, with one of Mowry & Forsythe's machines. On Wednesday, the 14th., he threshed out for Mr. William Trotter, of Harvey, seven hundred bushels, and the next day at Mr. Brodie's, he threshed 525 bushels of good clean wheat in five hours and a half. This is exoplent threshing, and can not be beatenby button. Bobcaygeon Independent.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Films, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rheumers and Oil Cancers. Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from other causes, yield to the American Eye-Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Perry's American Eye-Salve," while making use of the most improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing medicines ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIODOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS, PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often proves a CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

Good Suggestions about Fairs.

The New York Tribune, in a discussion about farm fairs, in the course of which their good and bad points are pretty freely handled, makes one or two suggestions that are well worth considering. Here is one that we are particularly pleased with:

"Set up one of your judges to declare on what grounds he gives the premium to this or that animal. Let him give a good, common-sense cattle talk in the presence of the animals, and submit to occasional questioning; or, if you please, call upon the breeder of the prize bull or cow, as the case may be, to make reply respecting lineage or treatment. The same course might be pursued with respect to dairy products, field crops garden vegetables or fruits.

"The practical difficulties in the way could not be very great. It would only be needful to announce in advance that Messrs So-and-so, at such an hour, would declare the decision of the judges upon such and such classes, with reasons for the same. Much of this might be done simultaneously, since those interested in the cattle awards might be indifferent respecting the fruit. The method would certainly provoke a more careful weighing of judgment at the hands of those who might have the decision to make, and would as certainly fasten the reasons for that judgment in the minds of the attendants—a matter as to which there is now, generally the blankest ignorance."

"We are coming to special poultry shows and fruit shows; why not also special graniers' shows? or dairymen's fairs? These would bring closely together, and undisturbedly together, those who would gain much by such easy contact. Special fairs of this kind might not bring together so great a crowd as swarms to a general State fair or a county fair. But does the presence of a great crowd really help to good issues?

"A capital adjunct to such special fairs would be a cosy sit-down to a dinner, or lunch, or supper, where the products shown might be put to actual test. The grower of prize fruits might be brought to his feet to tell how he managed his trees or how he ripened and stored his fruit. A lunch again, at which the pick of dairy products should be put upon the table would provoke appetite, and the very best sort of practical talk. The same would be true of a supper where there would be opportunity to compare a Leghorn fowl with a well-trussed Houdan, or a South-down haunch with a cut from a long-wooled mutton. There would belong to such gatherings good cheer and good talk, or good companionship, and a better chance of carrying away positive grain in the shape of valuable information, and new-wakened pride in a man's specialty than he is apt to get from the dust and turmoil of a universal farm ourous."

SHOULD REFORMED DRUNKARDS WORK?

(From the Christian Guardian.)

A few weeks ago, when we heard the Rev. Mr. Beck, of Peterboro', complaining of those who put forward reformed drunkards to tell their story or set them to try to reform others, it occurred to us that those who talk in this way are probably people who have a very limited experience in the work of reformation. People are generally most forward to carp at the way in which others do any good work of that kind, who have the least practical experience in such work themselves. It would be interesting to hear such a man as Mr. Beck describe his method of dealing with inebriates whom he has been the means of reforming. A nearly similar complaint has been recently expressed by the Rev. Alfred J. Bray, of Montreal, a gentlemen who speaks like one who has a comfortable assurance of the superiority of his own judgment to that of ordinary mortals. He recently, during the Rine movement in Montreal, expressed his aversion to making so much of drunkards who have reformed. He says: "Don't put him up in a few days as an apostle of temperance to boast of what he has been, and probably, as it has happened, in a few days or less to go back to the old state." Mr. Bray says he likes to see good work done with good tools. The reformed drunkard, he thinks, should be taught to be ashamed of his past life, rather than to talk of it. Mr. Bray in the Kingston Whig calls those who see in this a fling at the Rine movement "ill-intentioned fools"—a some what petulant retort, not really deserved; for who could doubt that the remarks were called out by that movement.

Our own opinion is that Mr. Bray does not understand the practical philosophy of the subject at all as he thinks he does. An ounce of practical knowledge is worth a pound of theorizing. A man who has been a drunkard can hardly stand at all in social inaction. He must work for life. In many instances active hostility to the cause of his degradation seems necessary to his own safety. To compare a reformed drunkard telling the experience of his downfall and rescue, in order to influence others, to a newly reformed thief setting himself up as an expounder of integrity is neither a just nor appropriate comparison. No one thinks it right for the man who has renounced strong drink to boast of his former degradation; and we hope there are few who refer to there intemperance in this spirit. All the reformed men whom we have heard speak of their former life have done so with a feeling of sorrow and humiliation. And through all the Murphy Gospel Temperance movement the experience of the reclaimed has been the most powerful human means of inducing others to reform. If a drunkard, or any other sinner, breaks the fetters which bound him in unholy companionship, how long must he wait in moral quarantine before he will be allowed to warn and invite those who are still slaves of the same vice. We do not see any good reason why he should wait at all. "He that confesseth and forsaketh his sin shall find mercy"

Toronto and Ottawa Railway.—In one sense only, and that but to a very limited extent, can it be considered a competing line against the only other road with which it would run parallel—the Grand Trunk. It is not a through line, from the upper frontier to tidewater, like the Grand Trunk; and it would compete with that road chiefly for passengers between Toronto and Ottawa. Freight at Toronto destined for the steamboard or tide-water, with the choice of route before it, is not likely to take the Ottawa route. Traffic at stations between the two points would take this line; but it would still leave a margin of local traffic for the Grand Trunk, the widest point of which, especially if the northern route were adopted, would be equal to the extreme length of practicable carting distance. The Toronto and Ottawa road is really a local line, between two important points, which will open up a country on the north, in great need of railway facilities. Colonization can extend only as facilities for getting produce to market are created. The fact that this railway would in time draw a large traffic from points north of the area which the Grand Trunk can serve, and which traffic it would greatly assist to create, is a strong argument in favor of the immediate necessity of its construction.—Monetary Times.

THE TELEPHONE!

PROF. BELL'S TELEPHONE having attained to such perfection, it is now offered to the public, confident that a trial of its merits will ensure its general adoption.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables any one to speak or converse over a single wire to a distance of 250 miles. The tone of the voice is recognized where friend or acquaintances are speaking

THE TELEPHONE

Has an advantage over the fleetest system of Telegraphy, as any one may listen without being an operator, or other words, there is no Telegraphic alphabet needed.

THE TELEPHONE

Dispatches messages with greater rapidity than telegraphing—as by telegraphing every letter must be distinctly made, and every word properly spelled—by Telephone each word must be distinctly spoken, when it is distinctly heard at every moment of utterance.

THE TELEPHONE

Enables the manufacturer to talk with his factory superintendent: the main office with the branch office, the house with the store, the country residence with the stables, or any part of the grounds, the south of the mine with its remotest workings, or in short any given point with any other point, although many miles apart.

THE TELEPHONE

Is neat and portable, and an ornament to any room or office. The yearly cost to the lessee for a set of Telephones—one at each end of a line is $20.00.

Any information will be given regarding their workings, lines constructed, instruments furnished, on application to.

KEEP COOL.

Patent Close Slat Window Shades
SELF ROLLING.

EDWARD HERON having purchased the right of Canada for the above Shades, is now prepared to supply the trade with them. They are the best article ever introduced to keep out the heat of the sun's rays, and to exclude dust and flies when open for ventilation. They are self-acting, and can be raised or lowered to any position desired, and remain stationary. They are also recommended to keep out cold in winter. They are easily attached to any window, and are ornamental as well as useful.

ADVANTAGES:

The advantages of these Shades are that they are of uniform width, which prevents them from getting out of order, such as Cords, Pulleys and Weights getting broken, as in the old style of Shades.

These Shades are sold CHEAPER for cash, and will be delivered at any part of the Dominion, Charges for Boxing &c.

THE COMING CONTEST.

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBORO' COUNTY TO SUPPORT OUR DUNKIN BILL.

To voters of this county, now has come the time
Friendship, in contrasting over the merits of those you
To vote.
Think not there is no danger when the fox upon
The sheep.
To time indifferently he leaves you in his deadly
Victims lay;
Fathers, brothers, husbands all the noble, brave
And true.
And women, and, and in ruins, are oft his
Victims lay;
No honour safe, though he has not chain them
Still they must fear.
Have you forgot when Canada was in its finest
And
And, choosing out their future home their rough
Pioneers
Proved that true, faithful hearts with them their Cheerfully shared;
But while these toils through peaceful homes
Were blessed by the God,

To the Queen with their assured vo
[illegible]
"Yes, for our country, for our homes, we'll con-Quer or we'll die."
No more we dread the foe that fell on far-famed Quebec Heights.
But where not, oh man, I ask, on enemy than Malice!
With unresisting rage and wrath, and crowds
His victorious minds.
By thousands on the battle field, our need we Tell his name.
For wife to there in this fair land, who has not
Ask the blow?
Of his fell sway, when it was drawn to lay
Low their dear friends?
For where the world oft hearing them, love, joy,
And peace doth dwell,
Is heard, grief, or deep remorse, no mortal
Tongue can tell.
We need no more repeat the tale, if secret tears
Dost flow,
Freeze, screaming cries, where hearts are wrung
With anguish and deep woe.
But if a spark of loyalty within your bosom
Burns,
Thrills not your heart fervently the Dominion to Spurn?
Then bravely give, if not for self, for others
Sorrows feel.
Strike for a brother's cause, defend his fireside
And hearth's weal.
Rise like those gallant pioneers, be daring brave
And true,
Vote for the Dunkin Bill and then Ross's allied
Force subdue;
Then forward march, till you have made the Atmosphere of the tent
And word the Prohibition flag o'er Beerites
Laying low.
Oh, sisters think not in this work that you
Have naught to do,
Kind words, and true consistent lives, much
Evil can subdue.
And, oh, remember that you have, the power to Move the hand,
That receives wine or blessings o'er our homes
And cheerful land.
Oh see that power not carelessly placed at the Throne of grace,
That drink may soon be banished from each
Home and public place.
And, oh, may all scratch into prayer, and cast
Each trouble and sin
Aside, that to the reign of peace may soon be Ushered in.

M. M., Dec. 1st 1877.

PRESIDENT HAYES' MESSAGE.

President Hayes sends, to Congress this year a message exceeding most if not all the messages of his predecessors in length. He begins with a defence of his Southern policy, saying in effect that the wounds left by the late war cannot be left open forever, and that the national army could no longer be used to sustain local Governments. The claim is made that the policy of leaving the South to its own local Government has actually succeeded, and that the country is the better for the change. Fatal conditions have almost entirely ceased, and political turmoil and turbulance have disappeared; while trade is rapidly improving; all which goes to show that the right course, and the one suitable to the country's circumstances, has been taken. The Southern people, it is affirmed, are well pleased with the change, but whether the blacks are included in this designation is not very distinctly indicated. On his Southern policy the President is cheerful and confident, and shows no sign of "going back" on what he has begun.

The President is very clear and emphatic in insisting that the public debt and interest thereon must be paid in gold—in a currency that will be accepted the world over at its face value. He holds that both internal and external trade suffered greatly from the present uncertainty, which profits none but those whose business it is to deal in money of fluctuating value. The policy of resumption of specie payment should be pursued by every suitable means, and without wavering of purpose. He sees no reason, however, for disparaging silver, as if it were not a precious metal. Both gold and silver should be used as a currency, a fair volume of both being made available. To do this certain conditions of commercial value and limited legal tender must be observed; which means that ninety-three cents is not sufficient intrinsic value for a silver dollar, that, in fact, it must come pretty near to 100 cents, and that a fair limit must be set to the amount for which it can be made legal tender. Were the United States to insist upon paying its debt in silver dollars worth only ninety-three cents, the loss from having to pay higher interest would greatly overbalance the profit. There are now outstanding some fourteen hundred millions of six and seven per cent. bonds, and, if the interest on these could be brought down to four per cent.,—a reduction of one-third—the Government would save far more than it would by paying in silver dollars, worth only ninety-three cents. What the Message says on this point is pleasant to the country that the President will sign a moderate silver bill, but not such a one as that lately passed in the House.

On former occasions he declared reform of the Civil Service, and he claims that now he is merely trying to deliver out what he promised before, amid general approval. He virtually charges hypocrisy upon both political parties, citing the fact that both have made resulting platform declarations in favor of Civil Service reform, while the Presidents who tried it gets the vigorous opposition of both whenever he endeavors to put it in force. What he says may fairly be condensed into this—that the politicians are in favor of the law but against its execution.

Relations with foreign States are satisfactory, except in the case of Mexico, and there it appeared that the Government of that country will do its duty and put an end to incursions of marauding on American soil. The Panic Legislation, and questions as to currency and finance generally are touched upon. Friendliness between the United States and the British Dominions is expressed to be still strong of a permanent and satisfactory kind. Of the Fishery Question, Lady sitting at Halifax he merely says that the result will be duly reported to Congress. He laments the continuation of the war in Cuba, and looks for improved commercial relations, and larger trade with [illegible] American States.

The President closes with calling attention the special effort made by the State Department to obtain from its diplomatic and consular agents abroad information as to the prospects of finding markets for American goods and produce, and appears to think that this move will lead to something important. He recommends a duty of ten cents per pound on tea, and two cents on coffee, for the reason that these would be easily collected, also because the twelve millions, which it is expected they would produce would render convenient the abrogation of a number of petty and vexatious imposts, lingering relics of the war, which yet remain. Congress is invited in its wisdom to consider what is to be done for the shipping interest.

The closing paragraphs of the Message are devoted to the army, navy, the Indian question, present agricultural prosperity, the duty of the National Government and of Congress with regard to scientific education, and various other topics.—Mail.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

What is Being Said and Done in Connection Therewith.

56 liquor cases on the calender for one day in Toronto.

The Rev. Mr. Haskell, a visitor to Hamilton, declares that the Maine liquor law is a great success.

A Richmond, P. Q., hotel keeper has started an axe factory since the Dunkin Act passed there. Congratulations!

The Inebriates' Home in Halifax has thirty-two married and fifty-seven single men under treatment this year.

Every saloon in Morrisville, Pa., but one, has been closed by a temperance revival. Almost every one has signed the pledge.

Banks McKenzie and Dutcher have inaugurated a great temperance revival in St. John, N. B., but not before it was needed.

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company says: "We decline to take any risk upon the habitual user of intoxicating liquors."

Newmarket has had a new temperance revival. One evening ninety-seven—many of whom were the hardest drinkers—signed the pledge.

The Rev. Mr. Macdonnell in a recent sermon alleged that, after all, "intemperance is at the bottom of most of our poverty in Canada. It is surprising in how many instances, where you would not suspect any tendency to excess, you will find on investigation that a man has gone down hill from a love of strong drink. What, then, tends to reduce intemperance helps to diminish poverty."

A Scotch Synod has had before it a motion to the effect that intoxicating liquors should not be used at the induction services. Rev. Dr. Phin though it was impertinent to bring in such a resolution, and spoke for "rational temperance as opposed to irrational intemperance" at the said services. The motion was rejected by 25 to 4. Which means that the ministers should be allowed to enjoy their "wee nub" at ordinations, but take care they don't get "faddled."

The Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, box 1,036, Toronto, wishes the temperance men to send to him, their suggestions as to what amendments should be made to the Dunkin Act, so that the Alliance may present their petition at the coming session of Parliament. Elgin County temperance men are awaiting alterations to the Act before submitting it. The Dunkin battle has been fought in Wellington Co., and the friends of the Act have been defeated by over 2,000 majority. The whole campaign was conducted with great vigor by both parties. The entire county was traversed by the candidates of both views. We are sorry to learn that violence was used at Fergus, the Rev. Mr. Ball, of Guelph, being brutally assulted by two ruffians as he was returning home from the meeting. Fergus has achieved an unenviable notoriety by this act of violence. In view of this large majority against the Dunkin measure, it would almost seem as if Wellington is one of the Licensed Victuallers' special preserves. The temperance workers must not lose heart by this defeat. Uninterrupted success would lead them to self-reliance and carelessness. This set-back must show them the need of further education of the people in the principles of abstinence. To the men who so nobly and incessantly labored for the right during the long campaign, we convey our sympathy, and wish them better luck next time.

The whisky-vites of Grey seem determined to bring the Dunkin Act into bad odor, and so are committing all manner of lawless acts in hope it may seem to be inoperative, and so be repealed. An immense temperance gathering met in Chesterville and passed the following resolutions, which show them they mean business: (1.) That this meeting expresses its strong disapproval of the manner used by the men interested in the liquor traffic to frustrate the law by stealing or bringing in base lawless characters from a distance, giving them liquor and inciting them to deeds of violence, by which the lives and liberties of peaceable citizens were in danger, and that this meeting further expresses its decided opinion that steps should be taken by the proper authorities to find who were the guilty parties in that riot, and bring them to justice. (2) That this meeting sees in the scenes that have disgraced our county for the last few weeks a fresh argument for putting an end as speedily as possible to the traffic in strong drink; that we hereby express confidence in the leading features of the Dunkin Bill, and that we appoint a committee to co-operate with the Licensed Inspectors to see the law enforced for the time to come. (3) That this meeting would hereby petition Parliament for such amendment in the Dunkin Bill as will make it more workable, the petition to be put in the hands of Mr. Gibbs, M. P. for North Grey, and that the following points be pressed upon his attention:

1st. That the right of appeal be added to the Bill.

2nd. That a man found drunk be compelled to divulge the name of the dealer who sold him the liquor, and in refusing to do so may be punished by imprisonment or fine, at the discretion of the magistrate. (4) That a committee be appointed to consider the advisability of starting a temperance hotel in Owen Sound—committee to report to a meeting to be held on Wednesday, the 19th of this month.

The Fastest Locomotive Builder in the World.

A SINGULAR COMPETITION—WON BY A CANADIAN.

Lately in Jackson, Michigan, at the engine works of the Michigan Central Railway, a competition took place between two gangs of workmen, as to which could succeed put a locomotive together and send her out of the shop in running order. Heretofore the usual time for doing this work with a gang of five or six men, in the "Baldwin Locomotive Works," of Philadelphia, has been from nine days to two weeks. When, therefore, the fact was published that the same feat had been accomplished at Jackson by Robert Stewart, with 14 men, in 25 hours, and by Walter Edington, with his gang, in 16½ hours, the engine builders of the country were loud in their expressions of disbelief. This piqued the Jackson men, and they determined to transcend all previous efforts. Accordingly on Nov. 16th, the parts of two new locomotives, which had never been put together, were collected, while on two trucks were the boilers. As the clock struck seven, two gangs of fourteen each, one commanded by Robert Stewart, and the other by Walter Edington, sprang to their work. The boilers were rolled by jacks on the massive frames, the driving-wheels inserted in their pitches, the cylinders, valves, link motions, connecting rods, levers, smoke-stack, jacket bolts, etc., numbering altogether thousands of pieces, were all scanned in their respective places. The fires already lighted convert d into steam the water run in shortly after the start. Edington's gang beat the other about a minute in the finishing touches. The engineer, standing in his place, blows the whistle, turns on the steam, and driving-wheels revolve, and the first engine moves down the yard. A few seconds later the other, with a shrill clarion whistle, follows its completed companion. The spectators, 200 in number, who watched every detail with breathless interest, break into a cheer, to which the grimy workmen, drenched in perspiration, give hearty echo. Two hours and fifty-five minutes is the record from fifty watches, and the Jackson shops and workmen are covered with a blaze of glory. The two engines were attached to an excursion train, filled with employees, and an excellent crew went to Detroit. Each engine made the trip of seventy-six miles without heating a journal, and both ran as smoothly go it they had been months in commission. Walter J. Edington, the winner of the competition, was born in Northumberland County, Ontario, twelve miles north of Cobourg, and served his apprenticeship in a Cobourg foundry.

"GOLDSMITH MAID."

This remarkable mare—the queen of the trotting turf—the fastest trotter the world has ever produced, has retired from public life in the 21st year of her age. Whatever we may think of horse racing, and this writer is not among its admirers, there are some valuable lessons to be learned from the history of this world-renowned animal. The first is that she was well-bred. Her excellence was not accidental. Of Hambletonian stock on the side of her sire, and of Abdallah stock on the side of her dam, she had the best of pedigrees. Breeders of animals cannot be too thoroughly convinced that it is thus the highest forms of excellence must be attained. Another lesson is that of perseverance in educating animals that show promise. The first owners of the mare in question were discouraged by her waywardness, irritability and high temper. She changed hands repeatedly at comparatively low figures, her owners getting tired of worrying with her. A driver named Wm. Bodine, in the employ of Mr. Alden Goldsmith, had the sagacity to discover her marvellous capabilities, and plead with his employer when he was on the point of giving up her training and selling her at any price, assuring him that she was the fastest animal on his premises, and would ultimately come out a great trotter. Mr. Goldsmith sold her in 1863 for $20,000 with a record of 2.20. In 1874, she made the fastest time ever recorded in the annals of racing, viz: 2.14, and in in 1876, made again the same time. The only other lesson we shall stop to point is the absurdity of undervaluing really good horses after they pass 8 or 9 years old. Some people will not look at a horse with a view to purchase if past the years just named. Goldsmith Maid was 17 years when she made her best record, and 19 when she made it the second time. At 21 she is a wiry, high-strung mare, probably capable of doing all she has ever done, not raticing because of inability, but because she has won glory enough, with an honor list of ninety-two victories, and a prize money of $333,900. A "horsey" orator of this wonderful animal closes his account of her by saying with a pardonable pride: "Great horses, like great men, live long after they are dead, and Goldsmith Maid will ever live in the horse history of America, and the world, as being the first trotting horse the world ever produced, with a clean record of 2.16 whatever time may be made in the future."

RISKY.

An exchange says: Parties having animals on their premises which do not belong to them, run a great risk advertising them immediately. It is a habit to wait a month or so, but then you are liable to pay damages for detention of property without public notice. A case bearing on this point came to our knowledge a few days ago. A farmer living some miles from this village advertised two stray animals. It appears that the advertiser had previously lost an animal, and after making extensive enquiries, would find no trace of it at all. Besides the two advertised a third animal strayed on his farm, by offering which he imagined he might get some due to his own. Soon after the advertisement appeared, the owner of the animals appeared, and claimed not only the two advertised but the other also. It is hard to say what steps the owner might have taken were it not that he had others know the farmer to be a man of upright and honest character and he was convinced that he was pursuing a wrong course in endeavoring to advertise the third animal.

USEFUL RECEIPTS.

MOLASSES COOKIES.—Three cups of molasses, one cup of butter or lard, one cup of boiling water, two teaspoons of soda, two of ginger.

TO KEEP MOTHS OUT OF CARPETS.—All carpets should be kept free from dirt; under the carpet dirt breeds moths; when putting down sprinkle cayenne pepper under the carpet, or fine cut tobacco; also, sweeping the carpet with salt is very good.

HOW TO MAKE A WAX PLANT BLOSSOM.—Use a teaspoonful of ammonia to every quart of water, stir well together and water them well around the roots; it keeps the soil pure and makes them blossom; ammonia water is good for all plants.

COCOANUT CAKE.—One cup of flour; one of sugar; a half cup of butter; a half cup of sweet milk; two eggs; two teaspoons of baking powder (mixed in the flower); bake in sheets, and then mix your cocoanut with a thin frosting and spread in between the sheets.

REMEDY FOR NEURALGIA.—Hypophosphite of soda taken in 1 dram doses three times per day in beef tea is a good remedy for this painful affection. So is the application of bruised horseradish, or the application of oil of peppermint applied lightly with a camel's hair pencil.

CURE FOR CROUP.—Croup can be cured in one minute, and the remedy is simply alum and sugar. The way to accomplish the deed is to take a knife or grater and shave off in particles about a teaspoonful of alum; mix it with twice its quantity of sugar, to make it palatable. Almost instantaneous relief will follow.

TO CURE CHILBLAINS.—Take raw onions and crush them in a cloth by pounding them; bind on your feet before going to bed. Do this three evenings in succession and it will cure them. Another cure is to wear on the foot, inside the sock, a piece of sweet skin; this is a thin, transparent, tough skin peeled off from the inner side of leaf lard.

REMEDY FOR HEADACHE.—A Parisian physician has published a new remedy for headaches. He uses a mixture of ice and salt, in proportion of one to one-half as a cold mixture, and this he applies by means of a little purse of silk gauze, and with a rim of gutta percha, to limited spots on the head, when rheumatic headaches are felt. It gives instantaneous relief. The application is from one-half minute to one and one-half minute, and the skin is rendered white and hard by the applications.

TO PREPARE CITRON FOR CAKES.—Three pounds of sugar to six pounds of citron; when prepared put in your citron in strips or pieces and boil until it is tender; then skim it out and drain; put on plates previously sprinkled with sugar and set them in some convenient place to dry; sprinkle sugar on the top and stir frequently; don't dry them too hard and when dry pack them in a tight box or can, putting a layer of sugar, then one of citron, and so on until full; keep it shut tight and it will soon be as good as any you can buy.

TO CURE A COLD.—Before retiring soak the feet in mustard water as hot as can be endured. The feet should at first be plunged in a pail half-full of lukewarm water, adding by degrees very hot water until the desired heat is attained, protecting the body and knees with blankets so to direct the vapor from the water, as to induce a good sweat. Next, to two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, add one tablespoonful of white sugar and fourteen drops of strong spirits of camphor. Drink the whole and cuddle in bed under plenty of bedclothes and sleep it off.

The Celebrated Burnet Grape.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the fact that the Fruit Growers Association of Ontario will send to each of its members a plant of this new grape vine. It was originated in Prince Edward County by Mr. Peter C. Dempsey, one of our most skillful hybridists. The fruit is large, purplish black, sweet and rich, and ripens earlier than the Concord. The vine is vigorous, productive and hardy. It is one of the most valuable grapes for our country that has ever been grown, and the Fruit Growers' Association deserves great praise for their forethought in securing vines of this luscious grape, named in honour of the distinguished President of the Association. We counsel our readers to send at once the fee of one dollar to the Secretary, Mr. D. W. Beadle, St. Catherines, which will entitle them to a copy of the report for 1877, now being printed, which is worth the full amount of the subscription fee, and in addition thereto, a plant of this splendid new grape, which can not be bought for less than a dollar apiece. If any one would like to secure two of these grape vines he can do so by sending the names of nine persons besides his own and ten dollars to Mr. Beadle, and a plant will be sent to each of the nine persons, and two plants to the person who gets up the club.

The following are additional victims to the fatal draught: Mr. T. Lane, of Watford, who had been drinking very hard for some time past, fell dead in the street of that town. He was an old resident. One Belanger, of Jos Joachisme, P.Q., while on a spree fell overboard from the steamer Deux Rivieres, and was drowned. The body is not yet recovered. Ann McCormic, of Montreal, was picked up drunk from the street, and died during the night in the Police Station. Ann McGrath, of Montreal, also found dead on a door step in Tilbury (never with a "bottle of whiskey by her side. By the way, is not Montreal powerful enough for intemperance among women? Two women died last week and five more this week. A young son of Daniel Close, of Cote St. Paul, got at a bottle of brandy and drank so much that he died shortly afterwards in great pain. What a life!

Two gunpowder factories at Quebec are to be removed from their present position. The citizens are anxious about the matter, fearing that some accident may occur.

The following appointments are announced from Ottawa:—Judge Moss to be Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal, in the room of the late Chief Justice Draper; Judge Morrison to be transferred to the Court of Appeal; Mr.

A FORCED UTTERANCE.

The Review's rascally references to the Collector of Customs here are if possible, more uncalled, for than they are coarse and contemptible. Its despicable slander concerning what may go on in the privacy of an inoffensive and unoffending family, is too utterly mean to be fitly condemned. If THE EXAMINER's course must be commented upon by the Review, comment can be made in an impersonal manner. Even if this be impossible with the Review the publisher of the EXAMINER has no desire to escape at the expense of his father, or anyone else. The Collector of Customs, having once exchanged hard knocks with the Review, should now be left severely alone by that paper; as the natural inference drawn from the opposite course will be that it is aroused by the memory of old defeats, acting on a vindictive spirit. There is no reason whatever for connecting the name of the late editor of the EXAMINER with the present editorial utterances of the paper; as they are as independent of his inspiration as of that of any other citizen of like influence friendly to the paper.' In order that we may be explicit enough, we will here state plainly that MR. JAMES STRATTON, COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, IS NOT THE EDITOR OF THE EXAMINER, NEITHER HAS HE HAD CONTROL OF THE PAPER SINCE HE ACCEPTED HIS OFFICE. The new hand is willing to be judged by what it pens; nor asks to escape criticism, however rude, at the expense of a practically defenceless gentleman, or his still more defenceless daughters. However, we will take upon us to denounce the assault on these defenceless and innocent ones, in whom we naturally take sufficient interest to impel us to espouse their cause. They need none to apologise for them. Their lives will shine out the brighter by any comparison with the conduct of their ungentlemanly, not to say blackguardly, assailant. It is the Review which needs apologetic advocates.

The only cause we can assign for the Review's conduct in invading the family circle, is that it attempts to bully the EXAMINER through the feeling of its manager for those he loves. Such an adoption of the tactics of savage warfare will not do. It may cause a slight diversion to properly punish the offender against all rules of good taste and honor, but nothing more. The EXAMINER is able when occasion requires to defend virtue and innocence from wanton attacks, and at the same time pursue its general course of earnest ministration to the public good. When the Review can display equal equanimity it will probably be under other control than that which now makes it disgraceful.

THE INCIDENTAL FISHERY CLAIMS.

While the United States press naturally seeks to belittle the advantages for which the Halifax Fishery Commission declared the American's should pay five and a half millions of dollars, the feeling seems to be practically unanimous that the Award shall be paid promptly. There appears to be no desire whatever to take the position, mentioned by some alarmists as possible, that because the Treaty of Washington did not specifically state that a majority decision should determine, therefore the dissent of the United States Commissioner should upset the deliberations and void the award. Such an absurd contention would be utterly untenable, else why have an arbitration at all, which could be made a mere farce by a single nonconsent! Though former acts of the United States government, and the character of the popular politics of the country gave some grounds for a suspicion that our neighbors are fully capable of accounting the position hinted at, there are no fears that they are foolish enough to deliberately choose a course that must fatally and finally prejudice them in the eyes of all nations. They couldn't afford it; not even for five and a half millions. The entire element of an yielding like encouragement to the idea of resistance to the award may be taken as an evidence that already the influence of a President who stands upon the lucid platform of Right is already beginning to be felt in the astonishing Republic. We trust that such influence will speedily pervade the whole length and breadth of the country, to the confusion of the politics of the country throughout their respective ramifications.

American newspapers that appear bent on the general choke off, the Wall Street press in favour of paying the claim, the Chicago Tribune and the Cincinnati Commercial, are all in favour of paying the claim, and the Boston Advertiser, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Baltimore Gazette, the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Cleveland Herald, the Detroit Free Press, the Milwaukee Sentinel, the Indianapolis Journal, the St. Louis Republican, the Kansas City Times, the Portland Oregonian, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Sacramento Union, the Virginia City Enterprise, the Salt Lake Tribune, the Omaha Herald, the Cheyenne Leader, the Denver Tribune, the Albuquerque Review, the Santa Fe New Mexican, the Arizona Citizen, the Helena Herald, the Bismarck Tribune, the Yankton Press, the Sioux City Journal, the Des Moines Register, the Minneapolis Tribune, the St. Paul Pioneer Press, the Duluth Tribune, the Chicago Inter-Ocean, the Milwaukee Sentinel, the Indianapolis Journal, the Cincinnati Gazette, the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Detroit Free Press, the Cleveland Herald, the Pittsburgh Gazette, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Boston Advertiser, the Baltimore Gazette

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met on Monday evening last. Present—The Mayor, and Councillors Cahill, McBain, Parnell, Beavis, Dumble and Hilliard. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Treasurer giving a statement of the receipts and expenditures for the month of November.

From Dumble and Fowler, asking for a By-law, stating that it was not necessary for the Council to pass a By-law through the usual stages to make valid the By-law voted on by the ratepayers.

From John Moloney, Reeve of Dysart, asking to have the allowance reserved at the River Road between the town and township of Dysart, and the road opened in accordance with the original survey.

From Scott & Edwards, requesting the gate between the Market Clock and there that he had taken action against for infringement of the Market By-law.

From Chas. Lodwin, asking for remission of taxes.

From Jas. Duncan, asking to have the next visit of the town clock regulated for the accommodation of the residents east of the market.

From W. S. Fowler, asking to be allowed to take out a carter's license for the remainder of the year for $2.50.

From John Boyd, asking leave to repair his sidings and fences in connection with the Quarry road.

From Louis C. Peard, Michael Hoffman and Timothy Rogers, asking for remuneration of their losses.

From Mrs. Mahon, asking for charity.

From Thos. Harper, handing in a schedule of his assessment for 1877, and his tax paper, between which there was a discrepancy of $600.

From Mrs. Hall and John Morden, asking for remission of their taxes.

Councillors Yelland and Hamilton entered and took their seats.

DISPOSAL.

The east end of the clock was ordered to be repaired in conformity with the petition of James Duncan.

On Scott & Edward's opinion being taken up, the Mayor stated he thought the Council had got the worth of their money, as the opinion was very lengthy.

Councillor Millar asked who ordered this opinion.

Councillor Cahill stated that he had.

Councillor Dumble thought it out right to allow Councillors to ask for legal advice on their own responsibility.

Councillor Cahill stated that the less solicitor Mr. Dumble did pay know whether it was necessary to have the By-law passed by the Council, and he thought he was perfectly justified in seeking for this advice, in order perhaps to avoid future litigation.

The opinion was received and ordered to be filed.

The other opinion of the Town Solicitors in reference to the Market Clock's was received.

Councillor Dumble thought the Market Clock should in future consult the Town Solicitors before taking action in such matters.

W. J. Fowler's application was granted.

John Boyd's petition to be allowed to repair stable and sheds gave rise to some discussion.

Councillor Dumble thought it should be referred to the Inspector to report.

Councillor Beavis believed it should be referred to a committee and let them use their discretion in the matter. The Mayor suggested in the meantime that it be received, and that it be taken up afterwards.

The application of the Reeve of Dysart was referred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

The applications for remission of taxes were referred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

The Mayor stated that Mrs. Watt who was burned out last spring had spoken to him some time since about her taxes and he would like to see her application also to the Finance Committee.

Mrs. Nolan's application for relief was referred to the Charity Committee.

THE DUNKIN ACT BY-LAW.

Moved by Councillor Dumble, seconded by Councillor Millar,—That the By-law adopted by the electors, under the provisions of the Temperance Act of 1864, on the 31st day of October, A.D. 1877, be numbered as By-law No. 369 and that the same be signed by the Mayor and clerk and that the corporate seal be attached thereto.

Councillor Cahill thought it not necessary to pass the motion as the vote of the electors had already made it valid.

Councillor Dumble thought it better to be on the right side, especially as the passage of the motion could do no harm.

Councillor Cahill would not oppose the motion.

The motion was then carried.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION BY-LAW.

The By-law fixing the names of the Returning Officers and Poll Clerks for the various Wards, in the Municipal elections was read a first time.

During its second reading the blanks were filled in as follows.

First Ward—Joseph Leady, Returning Officer, and Albert Shaw, Poll Clerk.

Second Ward—C. D. Macdonald, Returning Officer, and John Sawers, Poll Clerk.

Third Ward—John Irwin, Returning Officer, and James Macdonald, Poll Clerk.

Fourth Ward—Wm. Lee, Returning Officer, and Francis Mason, Poll Clerk.

The By-law was read a third time and passed.

ST. JOHN'S ASSIGNMENT.

Councillor Baptie Moved, seconded by Councillor Yelland,—That the application of John Boyd with regard to repairing stable and sheds be referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs Paterson, Rutherford, and the Mover, with power to act if they see fit.

Councillor Millar said he did not object acting on the committee, but if the repairs were not in terrid of the By-law he would not sanction the work being done

The Inspector said he understood Mr. Boyd wished to tear down the front of an old shed and put another roof on, of shingles laid in mortar, also to extend his stable—in fact, to lessen the risk, he thought.

After a desultory discussion the motion was carried.

A NEW HOSE TOWER.

Councillor Dumble said he had a matter to bring up—one which had been before the Council for a long time, viz., the erection of a hose tower. He thought that we were yearly losing from $200 to $400 per year owing to depreciation in value of hose each year. He would move that the following be a committee to consider the advisability of erecting an engine house and hose tower, with instructions to report probable cost, and the best site, for the same, viz., Messrs. Dumble, Beavis, Hamilton and Cahill.

Councillor Rutherford seconded the motion.

Councillor Paterson said this matter had been before the Council now or three times and nothing had been done out of it, and he thought it was time this year to take the matter up.

Councillor McBain said he thought a man should be hired at a salary of $600 a year, to take full charge of the engine and [illegible] Hundred Dollars a year for a new building.

Councillor Beavis thought it would be no saving to give a man $600 or $600 a year, as that would more than pay the interest on the principal invested.

Councillor McBain.—Your going to [illegible] George Street, and now you want the engine house there too.

New Lodge.—A new lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars has lately been organized in this town, under the name of Carnwith Temple, No. 411. The Temperance reform of the past few months has led to augmented the ranks of Friendship Temple, that it was deemed advisable in the interests of [illegible] another Temple, and a few of the prominent members undertook the work, and with marked success, for in less than a month they obtained their charter, organized their Temple, and are now in good working order, with a membership of about thirty. We wish the new lodge every success, believing there is plenty of work for them to do, and that they will form one of the right arm forces in the temperance and moral work which they have undertaken. The following are the officers for the current term :—J. H. Cobb, W. C.; Miss D. Billigham, W. V.; D. M. Smith, W. Sec.; Wm. Smith, W. Fin. Sec.; John King, W. Treas.; John Cummings, W. Marshall; Mrs. J. H. Cobb, W. D. G.; Wm. Long, W. O. G.; Mrs. Thos. Harper, W. R. H. S.; Mrs. Wm. Billigham, W. L. H. S.; Sister Elizabeth Irwin, W. Assist. Marshall; H. Matthews, W. Chap.; D. Poultry Association.—A meeting of the Poultry Association will be held in the room adjoining the council chamber this evening. A full meeting is requested as business of importance will be brought before it.

Death on the Deer.—Mr. B. Spencer of Burleigh, brought twenty one deer into town yesterday, all taken within a short time by two Americans, who were taking them across the lines. Can the Conservative organs not get protection for those inoffensive animals of the Canadian Forest?

General Session.—At the Peterboro' County Court and General Sessions last week there were no criminal cases to be disposed of, and the civil ones had little or no interest for the public. Judge Dean commented in severe terms on the condition of the rooms set apart for judicial purposes. They are badly ventilated, and he censured the indifference of the County Council in a matter affecting as it does the health and comfort of all who have to attend the courts.

Examinations.—The examinations for entrance into the Peterborough Collegiate Institute were held on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. There were 30 Candidates, twenty-three of whom were from Mr. Bredon's room. The penmanship and general style of the answers show marked progress. Spelling was exceedingly good, very many taking from 75 to 100 per cent of this paper. The specimens of penmanship would do credit to any boys of the same age in any school in Canada.

Burned.—The dwelling house of Mr. John Kidd, of Dummer, was consumed by fire on Tuesday evening, 2nd instant, between 6 and 7 o'clock. We did no learn the origin of the fire, but in all probability it will be found to have been a defective stove pipe. Very little was saved, we understand, [illegible] as Mr. Kidd had no insurance his loss will be considerable. During the progress of the fire the wall fell out, from which Mr. Kidd had a narrow escape from being hurt. Our correspondent was unable to give an estimate of the loss.

New Route Allan Line.—The new route of the Allan [illegible] steamships, reduces the sea voyage to about eight days from Lisbon to land. The Intercolonial Railway, over which passengers will travel, is the [illegible] railway on the continent, equipped with steel rails, iron bridges [illegible] of first class, [illegible] comfortable, and good refreshment rooms along the line, and passengers for England have no custom house annoyance. We predict large increase of traffic for the Messrs. Allan by this route.—Gen. A. Cox, agent at Peterborough.

WHAT'S TONGUE

(From the Liverpool Bee, 45 years ago.)

O, what is woman's tongue!
'Tis an organ composed of most wonderful shape;
Arresting, shocking,
Nervous and three-score,
Half low, rich and sweet;
Pert, piquant and pert;
Long, narrow and fast;
And is seldom unstirring.

But what words can set forth the power of its worth.

When, in tones which a seraph might envy,
It flatters and coaxes, in caressing sounds
Steals a tear from the eyelid of sympathy,
When Pleasure abounds, its caressings rebounds
Give to Rapture's soft accents new breath.
Rouse the lions to dress, check his riotous charge,
And make him to crouch at its touch!
But how altered the tone which wounded its throne

Whose pain sickness her victim doth keep;
No soft lullaby then draws the sting out of pain,
And gentle lines engraven lie stored
Deep within the aching memento chamber.
Mercy on us! What a clatter!
How the shrews fling fire in our ears!
Every note how discord tears!

Then are all the demons roaring
Through the flames in volleys,
Like the drum, is sounding!
Like the fife, it whistles shrilly,
Till its piercing wild notes thrill you:
Subduing soon, the heart it pries,
And in submissive murmur dies.
Then like harp its measures sweep,
Reviving whenever's round to keep;
From, like the flute, it helps to drive,
Some, like the sweet guitar;
Which lover's deity sees,
When music's soft notes touch,
It thinks through the window her
And calls on love to walk;
And then all day does this organ play,
In silence, tones, [illegible]
Never ceasing running,
With drums', fifers' and trumpets' sound,
Harps, horns and flutes making chorus round
Of woman's countless remarks.

TWO MINUTES TOO LATE

A Thrilling Adventure on the Iron Road

With his good bye ringing in his ears, Drexie Miller re-entered the little telegraph office and dropped into the chair before the clicking instrument. Glancing at the clock above her head, she noticed that it was almost time for her to close the office for the night and seek her humble home at the foot of one of the darkest streets of the village.

The rumbling of the train which had just left the station was growing fainter and fainter, and the girl listened to it as though it were the voice of a friend who was leaving her for a long time.

She did not expect any more messages that night; the engine breathing heavily from its great iron lungs on the track near her window would not move until the night express had passed up, and the [illegible] for he had sought his sweetheart who lived in the village.

Tom Grey, the engineer of the night freight, and Drexie's lover, had [illegible] but his friends knew when the wedding was to take place. He had not known her long, but that did not matter, since he who's true father who loved her with all his heart, and with all hers she loved [illegible].

The rumble of the train at length died away and Drexie was about to shut off the connection and keep herself when a message began to fall on her ears.

She quickly, for the first words drove the colour from her cheeks, and standing over the instrument she took the message:

'Number ten switch at Colby till number six passes. Sig just starting.'

'Six just starting! My God! They will meet!' cried the beautiful operator, starting from the table, 'what can I do to save them?'

And with her eyes staring at the clock, she stood in the centre of the room, thinking of the [illegible] everything each other except the fact that almost hid the moon.

The real situation, enough to blanch a young girl's cheek, was appalling.

The order for the train which had just left Fletcher to switch at Colby, could not be obeyed now. The telegraph, also, could not stop it, for there was no night office at Colby. It was an unusual meeting for number six to leave Fort Wayne before the arrival of number ten; but as the latter train was generally twelve minutes behind time on that particular night, six, anxious to leave on time, to save its connection, telegraphed to Fletcher the message which had so started Drexie Miller.

From Fletcher to a point [illegible] where Colby, the Company had completed a double track, which, when finished to Fort Wayne, would obviate the trouble of switching and prevent accidents.

When Drexie recovered her self-possession, she started for the office with the message in her hand. It had arrived just two minutes too late, and Tom Gray unconscious of its existence was driving his engine ahead, and thinking of the girl he had lately kissed adieu. He knew that it was known in Fort Wayne that he was unavoidably behind time, and thought that according to the custom, the express waiting there, would not move on until he had arrived.

But let us return to Drexie Miller.

She saw the freight train standing on the new track already mentioned and caught a glimpse of the young fireman asleep on his box.

A determined resolution entered her head, and the next moment she was standing in the engine-room with her hand on the boy's shoulder.

'That you, Miss Drexie?' said the boy rousing himself with a yawn. 'Leave a mercy!—

Get out and uncouple the freight,' she cried. 'Tom's moved out, and if he don't switch at Colby everybody will be killed. We must catch him!'

The boy with a cry of horror left the engine and a minute later the freight cars were standing idly on the track while the engine and the tender were moving out, gaining momentum at each revolution of the wheel.

'What will Dick say when he comes back and finds his engine gone?' says the boy looking up into Drexie's face.

'What do we care what he says? What is Dick's life to the precious lives on two trains? Jim, how fast can your engine travel?'

'About two miles a minute!' the boy answered, with a smile. 'She's the swiftest bird on the road. But I don't think we can catch number two; we might if we had Dick with us. He knows how to manage the Belle.'

'And so do I. Wood up, Jim! Fill the furnace chock full. We must catch Tom this side of the track's terminus or—'

The girl paused and looked at the pale boy.

'Or what, Miss Drexie?'

'Or blow up!'

'That's what's the matter,' said Jim, catching her spirit. '[illegible] And we'll catch him, too Wood! Wood! There the furnace is chock full. Golly—whiz! how we are going.

Drexie smiled faintly at the boy, and noted the head of the gauge. The engine had received new momentum, which momentarily increased, and all at once Jim, who had been trying to pierce the haze, said:—

'Two miles a minute, I'll bet, Miss Drexie If it was daylight the telegraph poles would resemble a fine tooth comb.'

But the girl did not reply. She stood before the lever, wishing that she could urge the engine to greater speed. She had calculated that the two trains would meet in a grade that embraced a curve about six miles below Colby. It was a terrible place for a collision and the loss of life there would be great. The midst of haze would prevent the engineers from seeing each other, and a collision was inevitable.

The train, which seemed to have broken loose, rushed madly on, with Jim hunting at Drexie, whom he was inclined to believe was mad. The cold midst slowly turning to a drizzle, was occasionally blown against his face by the wind: it served to cool his heated temples, and to make him think calmly of his situation and the folks at home.

So fast were they moving, that they passed [illegible] with such unusual rapidity that in their rapid passing [illegible] Jim to listen for the sound of Tom's train ahead, the boy poked his head [illegible] window and held his breath.

[illegible] without turning his head. 'Better go [illegible] —so many things appear to the last now.'

'Thank God!' exclaimed the girl, [illegible] with all your might, Jim. [illegible] by a bullet.'

Her face was glowing with heat, and while he listened she opened the furnace door, and threw in the last stick of wood they possessed.

[illegible]ne, Jim. How far yet can [illegible] of speed?'

[illegible] miles,' the boy answered [illegible] if we must do it.'

'We will catch him. Colby must be nine [illegible] right, and the grade is six miles [illegible] Jim can't you hear [illegible]

'No; I guess that I was mistaken a while back,' the boy said, and Drexie's countenance fell.

'There is the sound again! he exclaimed a minute later, 'Listen for yourself girl.'

Drexie went to the window and put her head out.

'That's Tom!' she cried, 'Oh, Heaven, let me [illegible] the other precious souls, to-night.'

With this prayer she turned to the furnace again and smiled at the red hot door. The engine and its empty tender seemed to fly [illegible] and when Drexie looked at Jim again, she found him staring at the [illegible]

'[illegible]-matter Jim!' she asked. He [illegible] with his hand extended toward the little instrument.

'[illegible] and we'll blow up,' she [illegible]

'Tom would hear the explosion and stop [illegible] it would prevent the collision' was Drexie's reply.

It was now evident that the sound ahead was that of Tom Gray's train, and the girl prepared to [illegible] lover of his danger. The tracks were quite close, and she told the [illegible] to watch the machinery while she [illegible] the path of the warning work which she had always to herself.

The sound [illegible] more distinct, and the daring girl [illegible] she could hear number six coming through the valley below Colby.

'Yes, it's Tom!' she cried, to encourage the boy at the lever, 'Lose his light now.'

Then she leaned out of the window and shouted at the top of her voice:

'Switch at Colby! Switch at Colby. Colby, old Colby sir!'

Many times [illegible] so he leaned from his engine she shouted. 'Switch at [illegible]

'Saved! saved Jim!' she cried with joy, turning upon the breathless boy, who already was checking the speed of the Belle.

Soliloquy of Titcodle of the Club.

THE RUM VICTIM'S CURSE.

On a pallet of straw, in a dingy room,
The blessed Greatheart lay;
He saw the light through the midnight gloom—
The Angel he heard—in the Rum-fiend's house,
In the restaurant over the way.

His lips spat threats through his withering soul,
And he hugs with a curse to his fast;
But above, about, as the drunkard's soul—
A gentler, a grave, and a solemn howl,—
His bewildered vision must.

"A curse!" he hissed from his gnashing teeth,
And sank again to the floor;
While the poisoned blood through his arteries
And his lungs with a laboured motion breathe,
And he wished they might breathe no more.

A curse on the men in the Rum-sellers hell,
(And the women) who fatten with wine;
Their soul shall sink, their daughters fall,
Their wretch dowry, at the Rum-fiend's call.
Taunt and be the name as mine.

A curse on the men of law and state,
Who bow to the Rum-fiend's sway;
They shall taste the cup of bitterness hate,
And their children shall be their fate
Without hope of a awakening day.

A curse on the people whose voice is given
To protect the Rum-fiend's trade;
Which curses feeds shall their trade be riven,
The curse from their country's grave be driven
By the rotten old fiend's maid.

For they were the people themselves, power,
To shove to a country's grave;
He cursed but the hand that was red with gore,
But put me to die on the gibbous moor—
A man and a curse to their name!

And the victim turned from his pallet of straw,
As his eyes him beyond mortal ken while
Shall in with her carnings, fain by law,
Your country—he, he—or your life!

He raised the cots with a desperate glare,
And his wife sank down dismayed,
While his child cried: "Father, buy bread for me!"
O, maiden my conscious brain!"

He entered the place with a trembling hand
And dashed the liquid to flame;
Then filled again—and his soul grew grand.
He was monarch of sky, and sea, and land.
As he strode 'neath the magic spell.

Then his brain caught fire; with maniac joy.
He laughed at the burning pain;
Then dashed out the brains of his angel boy;
And his wife, whom he conceived without alloy.
By a fatal blow he felled.

Arrest! How fiercely his eyeballs glare.
What terrors seize him now;
He wrestles, he stabbes at the empty air,
His clothes, and tears out his matted hair.
And horrors wreathe his brow;

"Ha, ha.—I'm free!" he cried; "I'm free!
No, voices, I'll not be your slave!"
Swift, swift to the river I saw him flee,
A shriek, and plunge ends the tragedy;
He has found a watery grave!

But his curse remains: in fire and blood
It is written in statutes and graves,
And in human hearts and in misery's flood—
In the desolate homes of each neighbourhood—
Our people are craven slaves.

REFORM VERSUS TORYISM.

The following address was lately delivered before the St. Patrick's Reform Association, Toronto by Mr. John M'Cormack, the chair being occupied by Dr. Snelling:—

SIR,—The leaders and disciples of Toryism are putting forth their best efforts at the present time to gain the upper hand in Canada. Will they succeed? I venture to say that they will not. I am free to admit that the pressure of the times during the last two or three years are in favour of their pretensions. They pretend to make people believe that, to a large extent, the present Government, by sins of omission and commission, are responsible for the hard times through which we have passed, but which, I believe, are now passing away.

Had there been no hard times or commercial depression anywhere in the world but in Canada, we might begin to think that there was some truth in their assertions, iterated and reiterated; but we all know that the times of depression we have so keenly felt here, have been all but universal over the civilised world. Point out to me the country, or the nook, or corner of the trading or commercial communities of the world where the depression has not entered and been severely felt; yes, in many countries much more severely than we have felt them in Canada.

Were Bismarck and the other leaders of the German Government to be held responsible for the hard, hard times they have had in Germany, notwithstanding the enormous indemnity poured into their coffers from France, Was it ever pretended to hold ex-President Grant and his Cabinet Ministers accountable for the extreme hard times the people of the United States have had to suffer? Or was it ever attempted by the Liberal party in England, or any other party, to father upon Disraeli, the Tory leader of the present Tory Government in that country, the cause of the great depression felt by all classes in Great Britain and Ireland? No such thing. The very idea is absurd, and it is equally absurd to tell sensible men in Canada that our present Government are accountable for the times of depression we have experienced in this country. The truth is, there is a class of men in Canada who labour under the delusion that unless the country is governed by Tories, that everything is wrong and going to the dogs; that a curse and a blight is upon everything and everybody when the heaven-born Tory rulers are not in power.

I want to know what these same Tories have done for the world or for Canada that they should put forward such extravagant pretensions and assumptions? We are not ignorant of, nor have we forgotten their history. Their history, whether at home in the land we left, or here in the land of our adoption, might be summed up in one sentence—that of obstruction and bitter and persistent opposition to every political measure that would emancipate, advance, or enfranchise the people. Oh no, we have not forgotten the rule and the bitter fruits of toryism, whether it be in the British Isles or in Canada. Let us take a short retrospective glance at the modern political history of Toryism. I will put it briefly.

Who opposed liberty of speech and freedom of the press in the latter end of the eighteenth century, under the rule of the 3rd George? Why, it was the Tories. Who suspended the Habeas corpus and enthroned upon the ruins of justice about the same time, 1794? It was the Tories. Who instituted the Government prosecution against the sterling Reformers of those days, John Horne Tooke, Hardy, Thelwall, Major Cartwright, and their associates? It was the Tories. Because these men dared to speak and write their views about the wrongs of Toryism and the rights of the people by a peaceable and constitutional method they were indicted for "constructive treason." Toryism was bound to crucify both tongue and pen, then was the cause of British freedom. But we had the very glorious Reform to extend liberty to the persons of his citizens. The speech for Hardy is one of the most splendid specimens of popular juridical eloquence on record. Reform triumphed, Toryism was beaten, and the doctrine of "constructive treason" was buried, and from that hour the liberty of speech and freedom of the press was assured to British subjects. Who opposed religious toleration, Catholic emancipation, parliamentary reform, the repeal of the penal code, repeal of the corn laws, tenant right, and the enfranchisement of the people? Why, it was the Tories. But most of these reforms have been accomplished in spite of the Tories.

Reformers in Canada have fought Toryism and conquered, and we will triumph again. We have the best cause and the best men to lead us. In former times we had our Baldwins and Blakes and Lafontaines. We have still our Blakes and Mackenzies, our Laurier and Browns, our Cartwrights and Mowats and Frasers, and a host of others—"noble Romans" all of them—who will lead us again to victory in defiance of all the forces of Toryism in Canada.

THE DUNKIN ACT IN GREY.

The following letter we take from last Friday's Globe, It speaks for itself and is but another evidence of the good work the Dunkin Act is doing in the county of Grey, notwithstanding the concocted reports so industriously circulated throughout the country by interested parties:

(To the Editor of the Globe.)

SIR,—Mr. A. M. Stephens, Reeve of Owen Sound, having during the late contest in Wellington written to the Mount Forest Examiner a letter characterising the working of the Dunkin Act in Grey as demoralizing and damning, both in influence and tendency, let us now listen to a few "personal observations" from the other standpoint, illustrative of the working of the Dunkin Act in Grey. A person who resides in Sarawak, one of the "adjacent townships," says:—"I have neither seen nor heard of one solitary ounce of intoxicating liquor being sold in the township since the by-law came in force neither have I seen nor heard of a drunken man, excepting such as were made so by liquor sold in Owen Sound; whereas before Saturday and Sunday nights, particularly, were often rendered hideous by

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 20, 1877

CHRISTMAS GREETING.

Time flies, change succeeds change, and what important changes may have come to many of our readers since we last enjoyed Merry Christmas holidays! In the well designed order of the Ruler of the universe, all these appear arranged for the good and happiness of his creatures. In these arrangements joys and sorrows too often intermingle, and it is not so easy to view each with equal equanimity. During the year we have had to be the chronicler of joy to some and grief to many, but this rather in the order of duty than any desire to be the bearer of sorrow to any one of our readers. In the world there is enough to make its citizens happy. The anticipations of buoyant youth, are sufficient to encourage him to noble endeavours, and even in more gloomy reflection there is something to stimulate and direct to more careful and determined exertions towards success. With these joys, sorrows, hopes, fears, and determinations we have endeavoured to make our work as pleasant and as instructive as the range of our possibilities would admit, and we are glad that our efforts have not been unsuccessful. Our progress we view as indicative of the prosperity of our town and county, and we fondly anticipate increasing success, not only for ourselves but for all our patrons. It may be that some unguarded word has caused some little pain, that could have been prevented—this is always a source of regret to the parties concerned. Just at the approach of this general festive season their should be nothing to mar the usual greetings of pleasure that ought to prevail. We sincerely hope therefore, that all our patrons may be in the full enjoyment of such health and friendships as are calculated to make Christmas enjoyable, and to this end we wish them all a very Merry Christmas.

THE TEMPERANCE ACT OF 1864.

The avowed intention of all classes of our citizens is to lessen drunkenness, by any means in their power. We find very often the much contemned tavern-keeper or saloon-keeper trying, by persuasion more or less earnest and disinterested, to persuade actual drunkards to reform, or become less offensive in their dire habit. The avowed temperance man tries his means; and, to be very candid, even at our own expense, our experience with confirmed drunkards has been by no means encouraging. Still the State has an interest in making the people as sober as it is possible to do by wise legislation.

Even the seller of liquor who has become a slave to the article he vends is looked down on by his more fortunate or stronger fellow in the same trade, who is "respectable" inasmuch as he has not succumbed to the seductions of alcohol. It is admitted on all hands that to become an outcast from society through the use of whiskey is deplorable, to the poor outcast himself and to all connected with him by business or family ties. What then are we to do to lessen what all alike call "the curse of Canada!" There is, so far as we know, no panacea; but every aid to effect the great end is of value. The Temperance Act of 1864, soon to be voted upon by the people of this County, is a long step in the right direction; and in such has our most earnest and hearty support.

The appetite for drink is an acquired one, as even the most hopeless drunkard will in a moment of soberness himself admit. There was a time in the history of every drunkard when he was not a drunkard, and feared not to become one. There is, therefore, something wrong when we see so many becoming habitual drinkers, not only wasting their own health and happiness in their evil courses but becoming the fruitful sources of unhappiness in others, and burdening the State with the consequences of their crimes, traceable directly to drink. A happy state of society would be the result if the drinking habits of society were things of the past. We write this more particularly for men who "can take a glass or leave it alone." Why do they not leave it alone! They know best; but their strength, even when it prevails against a lifetime of temptation, makes them neither better men nor better citizens. Their strong example is fruitful of causes for which they have to pay the penalty—often by seeing those they love sink under what they have never feared. The denial of their own gratification is made an insult to their liberty that they will resent to the uttermost any law calculated to restrain what they themselves are among the readiest to admit would be a national blessing. The Dunkin Act is not perfect. But it is a step in the right direction. The Scott Act Amendments to it have helped much, and as such is a "legitimate" advance. If the latter and other amendments have been adopted by the public there would be very little drunkenness. But are they so observed? Are the very men who, in opposing the Dunkin Act, praise the Licensing Laws the most men who most strongly and strenuously observe these laws? Just let anyone think of the legalised liquor dealer who observes all the requirements of the law he calls to his aid to argue the respectability of his calling. The Anti-Dunkinites appeal to the Crooks' Act as an unexampled piece of wise legislation; yet they opposed its passage as strongly as they could, as they now do in the case of the Dunkin Act. Then too how many convictions under the Crooks' Act have taken place from among those ardent admirers of it; and how many more should have been made?

The effort of every good citizen should be, to try to the utmost of his power to stop the formation of drinking habits among the young. Very few respectable young men would be willing to expose themselves to the disgrace of being found drinking in an unlicensed groggery. Their own consciousness of wrong doing, their liability to be called as witnesses against the law-breaker, in fact every one of the manly feelings that the young men of this County have in a pre-eminent degree, would prevent their frequenting illicit bar-rooms. Give us a generation under the Dunkin Act, and we venture to say that their will be very few young men enthralled by the terrible habit.

To temperance men of all shades of opinion, whether total abstainers, those wishing to become so, or those who mildly desire a lessening of the drink-curse, we appeal alike. Work with all your might for the Dunkin Act, a legalised interest is banded against you. VOTE FOR THE ACT! and show no lukewarmness. No matter if every hotel in the County is closed by your action; still VOTE FOR THE ACT. And when you have succeeded, and the Act is enforced, you will find that hotel-keeping for the accommodation and comfort of the travelling public is a legitimate business, and the more legitimate and honorable without the bar-room. Those men who have hitherto considered the enormous profits of their bars as the revenue necessary to sustain the legitimate business of providing food and lodging for travellers will, if the law is enforced, give way to the legitimate traders who alone should be called "Victuallers," unlicensed like the baker and butcher; and requiring no license, because their business needs no governmental supervision, and no police espionage.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The prospects of this road are continually brightening. The Toronto by-law is to be voted on to-day, and that of Ottawa on Saturday, and though the opposition in both cities is not to be despised there is a good prospect so far as appearances go, that both by-laws will be carried. A by-law to grant a bonus of $50,000 is about to be submitted in the County of Carleton, and probably carried by the vote of the people. The line has been surveyed to Arden the common point from whence diverge the two proposed routes for which our friends in the East are disputing, and which dispute shows the value set upon the road. As the star of the company brightens the cry of opposition of course becomes louder and more extended. In first commenting upon this line we showed that opposition might be expected from some of the towns along the front, and through which the Grand Trunk Railway runs. A new aspirant for the questionable duty of opposing the new trunk line appeared last week in the Belleville Ontario, proposing to speak "in the interest of the people of the frontier towns." There is little new in the Ontario's article, as it consists chiefly of an enlargement on the fancied injustice of asking the population at the front to pay for a line of railway to open up the back country, without taking into consideration that all the money granted by government to the Grand Trunk Railway included a share paid by the people of the back countries and townships, who now ask only to be dealt with as they have virtually dealt with others. We have formerly shown that it is "in the interest of the people of the front" to secure a new through line in order that the Grand Trunk road may be enabled to devote some of its attention to the hitherto neglected local business, which will with such attention be given an impetus hardly dreamt of before, and we shall not here repeat our arguments. The existing lines which will be crossed by the Toronto and Ottawa road will also be waked up to a sense of their proper duty to the country through which they pass, and by a re-organisation of rates on a liberal scale will increase their own traffic in developing the business they have hitherto neglected and killed by exorbitant freight charges.

In the course of its article the Ontario refers to Peterborough as follows:—

"There is not one single place of importance on the whole route between Toronto and Ottawa, which the exception of Peterboro', a town of 6,000 inhabitants, and there are already something like six or seven railways in the locality proposed to be traversed by this line. Peterboro has already two means of communication with the outer world, and will secure, in the completion of the Grand Junction line next summer, a third; and if this is not sufficient for a town of 6,000 inhabitants, all we can say is, that the ambitious people of Peterboro' had better commence and build railways for themselves."

Here is rather a setting down of this "single place of importance," from the soon-to-be City of Belleville. A few thousand people does not make much difference here or there in the consideration of the question. Peterbrough is not satisfied with its two means of communication with the outer barbarians, now will the line to Belleville satisfy it; therefore the "ambitious people" literally "commenced for themselves," and, by persistent agitation and honest argument, have got the project of a through line for the back country into pretty good shape. It does, however, sound somewhat amusing to hear the advice to "build our own railways" tendered from Belleville; and that too by a paper that should be looking to a friendly connection with the "single place of importance" on the projected Toronto and Ottawa Railway. But there is no accounting for what will be said in a sagging—or trying to argue—a weak cause.

The Tory journal of this town thought last week to "better" both Conservative and Catholics into a love for Conservative politics, and at the same time tackle their prejudices into hatred to Reformers. It, however, defeated its own object, the one article more than destroying the intention of the other. The fox's skin is not large enough to conceal the ass' ears.

COUNTY COURT BUSINESS.

If there is one thing more than another for which the present Ontario Government deserves credit it is (2) successful efforts to, had by Attorney-General Mowat, has made in the matter of reforms in legal procedure and facilitating business in the Courts. In this they have been ably assisted both by the Superior Court Judges and those of the County Courts. The great work of consolidating the Statutes of the Province is just completed, and when the amplified code comes into force, as it will on the 31st inst., it must prove of great convenience to solicitors and suitors, and be of incalculable benefit to lawyers and litigants. This work and other efforts for the simplification of legal processes have formed a strong desire in the mind of Hon. Mr. Mowat, and he has since his fortunate accession to office made their forwarding and peculiar labor of love. He has been warmly seconded by his colleagues, the Bench and the Bar. Indeed the spirit of legal reform is visible on all sides and in every Court in the Province. Much of the business that in former years cumbered the Courts at their regular sessions are now disposed of summarily before the Judges, and a great deal of unnecessary formality, expenditure of money, and drain upon the patience of Her Majesty's liege done away with. The great point that appears to be now fully recognised in each of the Courts, is saving of time. The Judges particularly are entering upon a zealous crusade in the matter of forwarding business without allowing inefficiency. Not long ago courts were often adjourned for a day because those to whom the conduct of cases was trusted were not ready to go on. Now the rule of the Judges appears to be the preferable one of proceeding with the business of those who are ready, and striking delayed suits off the record when the legal gentlemen who should proceed with them do not appear. This will have the good effect of waking up the lawyers, forcing them to prepare their cases in time, and to take only such a number of suits as they can properly attend to.

Another excellent plan whereby time, trouble and money is saved in the Courts, is the employment of short-hand reporters to take down evidence as it is given. This not only relieves the Judge from the laborious task of seeing that the evidence is recorded, but it gives a full and better record, in less time, and one which may be referred to with confidence at any time as the true evidence given at the particular stage when it was taken. So satisfactory has this taking of evidence in short-hand become, that it is certain to be adopted in all the courts before long. At the last Sessions in Hamilton His Hon. Judge Sinclair stated that he had on his own responsibility engaged a short-hand reporter, and he was certain the sum of $1200 would be saved to the County, of Wentworth, by his so doing. The expenses of the Court were about $300 a day, and if the length of the Sessions could be reduced five days twice a year there would be a clear gain of $1,000. In the large County of Peterborough this reasoning will particularly apply, and the shortening of the time the Courts are held will also prove a saving to all those who have to attend them, either as suitors, witnesses or jurymen. Indeed the advantages are plainly apparent, while there does not appear to be a single disadvantage.

ORANGE INCORPORATION AGAIN

With the near approach of the session of the Ontario Parliament the Conservative press again begins to harp upon the Orange Incorporation Bills, which have been dragged through the mire of political partyism for several years, to the disgrace of nearly all connected with them. There can be no doubt that the question of Orange Incorporation will come up again during the coming session, and its fate, as in former years, will considerably depend on whether it be introduced and considered solely on its merits, or subjected once more to the insult of being merely tacked to some petty plan, and made to do duty in putting up a party dodge. We notice that the Conservative papers are preparing diligently to find fault with whatever decision may be arrived at, whether of complaint, if the bill be rejected, or of accusation, if it be passed, that the government majority dared not oppose it. The manner in which bills for Orange Incorporation have hitherto been submitted to the House has been a courting of their defeat. They were made to do special party duty only in the interest of the Opposition; and the Orangemen of the Province were represented by Opposition speakers in demanding a special Incorporation Act, rather than presenting petitions in which "humbly sheweth" had even the slightest reference to their case. The natural rejection of such a "demand" time and again is good proof that the House—or, as the Tory prints put it—the Government—did not fear to oppose the measure so offensively pressed on their attention. The position of the Orange body on this question of Incorporation has been misunderstood, and chiefly through the party nee sought to be made of the bills by advocates in the Legislature. A temperate letter, published we think just after the close of the last session of the Ontario Parliament, by Mr. David Marshall, did more to allay the trouble caused by the mouthings of political demagogues, and to pave the way towards the passage of a special Act for Orange Incorporation, than anything that had been said or written previously. The letter we referred to sought simply to argue the question on its business merits, exclusive entirely of religious or party aspects of the case, and in that way carried a weight of conviction that could never be attained by placing politics or Papacy in the balance against reasonable recognition of the case by all creeds, classes and conditions. Had this policy been followed from the first we should have had less excitement over these Orange Bills, and probably there would be now no "grist" then as to the fate of that to be introduced at the session opening next month. Whether or no, we are satisfied that the question could now be decided with less display of foolish feeling, and with infinitely greater ease.

The voting on the Dunkin Bill for the Municipality of Malahide and Bidout, took place at Eagleville on the 10th inst., and resulted as follows:—Yeas 27; Nays 11; majority for the Bill 16. The voting was conducted in a very orderly, and creditable manner.

BURLEIGH.

The settlers on this Road are just now exercised about the passage of the Dunkin By-law. A couple of Lakefield lumberers in the misconception of the rule of alcohol went up there, got up a petition, placed names at random on it and submitted it to the Clerk requesting him to submit a By-law in terms of the Temperance Act of 1864. After publishing it once, the same Anti-Dunkinites went to work, got up another petition and re-submitted it. The vote on this second By-law will be on the 7th instant. On Saturday last the Rev. Mr. Willoughby and Mr. Stratton went up the Road to hold meetings and strengthen the hands of those who favor the By-law. They held a meeting on Saturday night at Apsley, when the Rev. Mr. Harding Episcopalian, Rev. Mr. Willoughby and Mr. Stratton addressed the people. All present were in favor of the By-law, except six persons, some of whom very much require some break on their down hill course. At this meeting thirty two persons signed the pledge to abstain from intoxicating liquors. On Sabbath the Rev. Mr. Willoughby preached three Gospel Temperance Sermons at different places to large numbers of the people of all religious opinions, who were out to hear him. At the three meetings one hundred persons took the pledge. At the meeting in South Burleigh (Stones' School House) forty two persons gave their names to be total abstainers, and all in the house declared themselves supporters of the By-law. From all the information that could be gleaned, the By-law is sure to be carried in those Townships. At the Apsley meeting, the Reeve, Mr. Golborne occupied the Chair; as he is to be Returning Officer he is not taking a part for or against the By-law. Pressing engagements prevented a visit farther north but Chandos will not be recreant to duty when the day comes.—COM.

OUR ALMANAC FOR 1878.

We this year intend presenting our subscribers with the neatest and most complete Almanac yet issued from any office in this town. It is named the "Proverbial Almanac," and contains in addition to the useful information usually found in such publications, twelve pages of national proverbs set opposite the calendars for each month. The usual memorandas for each day in the year, are also inserted, making altogether a very useful and convenient book. A limited number of advertisements will be inserted, and those will be printed on colored paper, and bound up as a portion of the book, being placed in the most conspicuous parts. From the large number of the Almanacs which will be issued, and the low rate asked per page, advertisers cannot fail to make a judicious investment by securing an advertising space. Already the success which has attended a partial canvas has exceeded our best expectations. During the coming week we will complete the canvas, and those parties who have ordered spaces or may wish to do so would confer a favor by having their copy prepared at an early day, so as to enable us to issue during the first week of the new year.

Approaching Municipal Elections.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

I hope the electors and people of this town are not losing sight of the important fact that the municipal election will very soon be before them, and I earnestly ask them to consider this fact well, and to strive to make a good choice of Municipal Councillors. I suppose very few of them will deny that their best effort in this direction has proved worse than a failure, and that there are but a few who will not say that their last selection of councillors has proved to be a misfortune. With a properly constituted council there is not the least reason why our taxes should exceed from eight to, at most, ten mills in the dollar. This year the council has managed so to raise the expenditure as to necessitate in tax during these hard times, of fourteen mills in the dollar, and had they succeeded, as they tried to do, in imposing upon us a useless and expensive system of Water Works, the burden of the tax payers would have been so great as to drive many of them out of the town. I hope the electors will put longer the doings of their present councillors. Their determined efforts to ruin the town by the construction of Water Works, which we require about as much as a dog needs two tails. There is one piece of advice which I will give the electors, and, that is not to elect lawyers for their Councillors, but choose good plain honest representatives and the people will have done all they can do. If, however, the tax payers would get parliament to reduce the number of councillors to one, instead of three for each ward, they will then have obtained the correct remedy for economy and good management in municipal affairs.

Yours &c.,

Ventilation in the School Room.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—My attention has been drawn to a letter appearing in the Review of Dec. 14th., with the comprehensive caption, "Death in the School Room." This at first sight frightened me, fearing some accident had befallen that institution, but a few lines convinced me of the base motives of the writer, and nothing would be more pleasing to him than to let this foul, slanderous writing pass unnoticed. I am at a loss to find language strong enough to apply to such a man, who without cause puts our School before the eyes not only of the public of Peterborough, but before the whole world, as an institution in which the health of the children is imperilled, for want of ventilation, and I must repeat it, that this assertion is an untruth and a slander of the vilest description. It is not two weeks since I had occasion to visit the School, during school hours, and as the atmosphere was damp that day, I called the Principal's attention to the throwing open of the whole windows instead of only the upper half as being dangerous to the childrens' health, especially those sitting close to the windows. If there is any danger to the childrens health it is not for want of ventilation, but by the over-heating of the room and the draft by opening the windows, and how this can be remedied so long as be heating of the rooms is done by stove, instead of steam, or hot air is a question not easily solved. The regulation of the proper warmth of the rooms must be left to the judgement of the Teacher. I hope the public will receive such anonymous letters with caution. As conclusion of so great importance if true should be expused without fear of criticism, and the thanks of the public would be due him. It is infamous and unbecoming a man in the position the writer is in, to try to injure our institution, of which every head of a family must take an interest in, as the time and money spent therein seals the fate of the young for weal or woe for all his lifetime. What in the name of common sense was the object of that ominous visit to the school house on Saturday? Has the writer ever visited the School during teaching hours? If not I recommend him doing so, and let him commence his inspection with smelling; and he will smell, and smell again, and fancy his so well developed sense of smelling has perished. I hope the County Council will take it seriously into consideration to relinquish their hold on a person fitted for a more useful sphere. Should my letter fail to convince, a report to the Town Health Inspector would not be amiss.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
I am Yours &c.,
W. LECH.

Complimentary Meeting.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—As an advertisement alone, the passage of the Dunkin By-law is a good investment for any town. Orillia won wide fame through her determined, and successful campaign against shop licenses, and the effect has been beneficial far beyond the efforts put forth to enforce the regulation. That the recent action of Peterborough has already extended her fame as a moral town is shown by two circumstances within my knowledge. The Alliance News, a widely circulated Manchester paper, has had a complimentary reference to the carrying of the By-law, and this being read by a gentleman in another part of England, who had spent some time in this Province, he in a private letter, to a friend here, says:—"Knowing Peterborough pretty well, I am pleased that the inhabitants of that fair-looking County Town have adopted a means of sobering her would-be drunkards." Hoping that the good action of your town may be an example to many other towns and cities both in this and the dear old land. I am, yours truly.

DRAINING LAKE SCUGOG.—The Town Council last night appointed a committee to watch the drainage of Lake Scugog scheme, and favoured leaving the exemption question until after the House meets.

A MEAN TRICK.—A piece of vandalism was perpetrated at the Benson House yesterday morning which for meanness beats anything we have heard of for some time. Some evil disposed person entered the billiard room at an hour when none of the employees were about and deliberately cut a gash of about four inches in the cloth of one of the tables.

FARM LANDS

IN THE

TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

By Direction.

Pursuant to an order made herein, bearing date the 11th day of September, 1877, there will be sold with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the Court at Peterborough, on Saturday, 12th day of January next,

at Two o'clock P. M., at the COURT HOUSE in the Town of Peterborough, the following lands and premises in one parcel, viz:

The West half of the Broken Front of the Fourth Concession of the Township of Smith, county of Peterborough, containing by admeasurement in the whole one hundred and three acres more or less.

About 40 acres of this land are cleared and the balance is covered with timber. There is on the land a rough frame house, a log stable and a good bearing orchard. The land is in a high state of cultivation, and is one of the most desirable farms in the County of Peterborough, and is situate within a few miles of the town of Peterborough, and is well worthy the attention of any person desirous of purchasing a farm.

REPLY.

To Wm. Dixon, Esq., and others:—

GENTLEMEN: In reply to the above requisition, I would say that I feel highly gratified for the confidence therein expressed in my capacity to fill the office of Councillor, and will accept the nomination with pleasure, and will endeavor, if elected, to discharge the duties devolving on me to the best of my judgement and ability. I will make it a point to see that the greatest care and economy is exercised in husbanding the resources of the people, and endeavor to restrict as far as possible the burden of taxation, now pressing heavily on the ratepayers.

I am, gentlemen,
Yours respectfully,
J. R. ORMOND.

LOCAL NEWS

50 Cent Tea is sold at Stone & Bailey's for 39 cents cash.

Snow—Sleighing.—The "Toque House" are all ready for a snow-shoeing tour as soon as sufficient of the beautiful has fallen.

Fancy Slippers.—Larmour is now making Fancy Slippers a specialty, give him a call.

Selwyn Temple.—A soiree under the auspices of the Selwyn Temple will be held in the Temperance Hall, Selwyn, on Christmas Day. A pleasant time is anticipated.

Henry Best has now in stock five car load of Silver Star export oil, the finest brand of refined petroleum made in Canada. Messrs. Engelhart & Co., Hamilton are the refiners. (My prices are as low for any quality as the more inferior brands are sold.) 50-tf

Affleck's Lecture.—We would again remind our readers of the treat in store for those attending the Rev. Mr. Affleck's lecture in Breddan's Hall, to-night. There should be a full house, as during previous visits he has always been greeted with large audiences.

Try "Bene" Five Cent Cigar in town a Stone & Bailey's.

Too Late.—Toronto journals complain of the bad habit some people have of coming into church, concert halls and other places of public entertainment long after the hour named for commencing the services or performances, Perhaps the guilty remarks will apply to some in Peterborough.

New and Choice Candies for the holidays, at Stone & Bailey's.

Fruit Growing. We have received the last annual report of the Fruit Growers' Association for the Province, to which is appended the report of the Entomological Association. Both are valuable to the fruit grower and husbandman, inasmuch as both contain much valuable information. The report is accompanied by a number of very fine illustrations.

W. J. Larmour is almost giving away his Rubbers and overshoes.

Post Office Order.—The Postmaster has received notice that the Post Office Departments of the United States and Canada have agreed to return uncalled-for letters bearing a request to do so without specifying the time, without, as formerly, adding them, for return through the Dead Letter Office.

W. J. Larmour has a very fine assortment of ladies', gents' and children boots and shoes selling very low for cash.

Eclipse. In 1878.—No person need be alarmed at the eclipses next year, either as regards their number or their appearance. There will be only four—two of the sun and two of the moon. An annual eclipse of the sun will take place on the 2nd of February, invisible. A partial eclipse of the moon, Feb. 17, partly visible to the United States. A total eclipse of the sun, July 29, visible in the United States as a partial eclipse.

The Dufferin Overshoe is all the rage, for sale at Larmour's. The cheapest and best over shoe made, call and get a pair before they are all gone.

The Weather.—The temperature continues remarkably mild for the season, more nearly resembling that of the latter part of April than the middle of December. It is fortunate for the poor that it should be so, though business men would prefer to see good sleighing, as also would the farmers generally, especially the residents of the back country, who are waiting for sleighing in order to get their winter trading attended to.

Go to Larmour's for a pair of his Lady Dufferin overshoes. He is almost giving them away.

Selling Off.—As will be seen by an advertisement in another part of this paper, Mr. J. R. Ormond being desirous of retiring from business offers the whole of his large and choice stock of watches, clocks, jewelry and fancy goods at and below cost. To parties wishing to obtain bargains in valuable holiday presents this sale offers inducements rarely met with, as first-class reliable goods can now be bought at prices heretofore asked for inferior and second-rate articles.

Neat and Stylish.—For a neat and stylish boot, go to W. J. Larmour's boot and shoe store.

Personal.—The following from the Paris Star will no doubt be read with interest by Mr. Caldbeck's numerous friends and acquaintances in this town, who will learn with pleasure of his success in business:—

"Our townsman, Mr. Geo. Caldbeck, having disposed of his dry goods business in this town, is about to leave here for Woodstock. Mr. C. has been in this town for over three years, and has succeeded in building up a good business, being one of our most successful merchants. He has a large business already in Woodstock, where he intends to remove as soon as he can collect his accounts in this place. We wish Mr. Caldbeck success in his new home."

Obituary.—We clip the following from the Cobourg Sentinel; the subject of notice being the father of Mr. Wm. Croft of this town:—We briefly announced in last week's issue of the Sentinel the death of Mr. Richard Croft at the advanced age of 81 years. Mr. Croft was one of the pioneers of this township, having settled in this vicinity in 1824. He was very much respected by all who knew him, and the funeral cortege which followed his remains to the grave on Sunday last was one of the largest we have ever witnessed."

Stone & Bailey's Stock of winter Fruits Groceries, etc., is not complete, give them a call

Hung in Effigy.—The anti-Dunkinites outraged decency at Napanee on Thursday night last, by hanging an effigy of Mr. Marvin Knowlton across the main street. Such acts as this can only do a cause harm. Mr. Knowlton is well able to turn the incident to good account in his platform dealings with his opponents. However this is an example of the "legitimate business men" that the temple-lay advocate of this town upholds. Poor thing.

Four Barrels Americus Cranberries just received at Stone & Bailey's.

Vigilance Committee.—As we stated in a late issue, the most successful and in fact the most satisfactory way in which the liquor law can be enforced in any community is by the agency of a thorough and well organized vigilance committee, and we are pleased to state this week that the friends of temperance in this town, who during the recent contest worked so earnestly and faithfully for the passage of the Dunkin Act By-law are determined to enforce its provisions when it becomes law, and with that object in view are organized a vigilance committee, which, we feel satisfied from its composition, will keep a close watch on refractory ex-tavern keepers. It might not be amiss to suggest that they commence work immediately to enforce the provisions of the Crooks Act, rendering to the Inspector such assistance as he needs in detecting the violations at present taking place.

Beware of all American Axes claiming to be the same as Westmore's E (Any Axe, or as good, or in any other way trying to take their place. Each genuine Axe has the label (copyrighted) E (Any Axe, and is stamped Westmore, New York. All others are frauds, being without reputation, they try to steal or borrow from the best Axe in the world. 50-tf.

Musical Society.—We direct attention to the coming concert of this Society, which will take place on the evening of Thursday, 27th instant, in Bredbarn's Hall. The Society deserves the greatest praise for its efforts towards the production and cultivation of classical music in our midst, notwithstanding the difficulties and discouragements it has met with. The public certainly owe it all reasonable support, and as no aid is sought in the way of outside subscriptions, they should show their willingness in this respect by giving this Society a full house. Special attractions are offered at the coming concert, the services of Mrs. Bradley, of Toronto, having been secured, and also of several resident ladies of special merit. Mrs. Bradley will be favourably remembered by our concert-goers of years ago, when as Miss Gray she so often delighted a Peterborough audience. Her return should be greeted, as that of an old friend. As will be seen, a most attractive programme has been prepared, and anything given such encouragement to performances a full house, we ask all music lovers and the public to remember this entertainment on the 27th instant.

Stone & Bailey's is the only place in town where you can get the "Pocket Puke" smoking tobacco.

Sensible Advice.—You are asked every day through the columns of newspapers and by your Druggist to use something for your Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint that you know nothing about, you get disappointed, spending money with but little success. Now to give you satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will cure you of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint with all its effects, such as sour stomach, Sick Headache, Bilious Constiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heart-burn, Waterbrash, Fullness at the pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated tongue, Indigestion, overcoming of the head, low spirits &c., we ask you to go to J. D. Tully Druggist and get a Sample Bottle of Green's August Flower for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

Store Vacuum.—The following are Mr. Vacuum's quotations for the coming winter. It will be observed that it is St. Patrick's Day that he has misplaced this year and not the "January thaw":—"December will, in all probability, set in sharp, but this cold term will be of short duration, and give place speedily to rains and some snow. January of 1878 looks to me at present gloomy, wet and foggy, and not unlike that of 1876—unusually open." February again—I must be cautious about this fickle month this time—will set in severely. I look for more snow than rain; consequently this month will probably be the most wintery-like of the whole winter. St. Patrick's Day this year will have its snow storm. March will bring more snow during its early part, but the month will end wet and cold, with heavy winds, and bids fair to go out exceedingly stormy. April, May, and the first part of June, will be very wet and cold. This impression is firmly imprinted on my mind, and this wet and cold spring will be followed by an intensely hot midsummer. April will be characterized by a cold white Easter. The whole autumn and winter will be favorable to the increase of throat diseases and fever, also, cattle diseases; and I agree with Prof. Mantill in anticipating the approach of Asiatic cholera towards northern latitudes during the coming summer.

Remember the Rev. Alex. Bell's lecture to-night in St Paul's Church.

Save Money and buy your Dry Goods and Clothing at W. Fairweather & Co's

Reduction in Prices.—We are instructed by Mr. Affleck's agent to announce that the prices of unreserved seats for Mr. Affleck's lecture to-night have been fixed at fifteen cents each, or two for twenty-five cents. All should go and hear this popular humorist.

Full Stock of canned goods just received—cheaper than ever at Stone & Bailey's.

Christmas Tree.—There will be a Christmas Tree in the Bible Christian Church, Peterborough, on Christmas eve, at 7.30 p.m., admission 10 cents.

For Christmas.—Stone & Bailey are again to the front with a large stock of Christmas toys, suitable in prices to the hard times. Their change of advertisement handed in too late for this issue.

Good Poultry Pays.—We are informed that one of our local poultry fanciers has during the past month sold nine well bred birds, realizing therefrom the handsome sum of $63.00. Raising fancy poultry, at those prices must surely pay.

Entertainment.—An entertainment in aid of the organ fund of St. Andrew's Church Sunday School and Band of Hope, will be held in the School Room, on Friday evening, 28th instant, at 8 o'clock. The programme will consist of dialogues, readings, recitations, singing, &c. A tea will be served, commencing at 6.30. Admission 25 cents; children 10 cents.

Santa Claus.—The little folks have only to read this heading to excite their fancy to the highest pitch, and papas will have many sweet little voices chattering out the holly-crowned monarch's name:—"Oh, papa take me to see Santa Claus." Papa cannot resist, and there is no better place to go than David Lemay's confectionery store.

O. Y. B's Ball.—The Orange Young Britons of this town will hold their annual ball in Bradburn's Hall, on Christmas Eve. From the success attending their last annual ball, we have no doubt but that those favored with an invitation this year will avail themselves of this opportunity of "tipping the light fantastic toe."

Will not be a Councillor.—We regret to learn that Mr. D. W. Dumble has announced his intention of not again seeking re-election as Councillor for No. 4 Ward. We trust that he may be persuaded to reconsider this matter, as the town can ill afford to lose the services of such an efficient representative.

Church Burglary.—On Monday night last, some person or persons effected an entrance into St. John's Church in this town and carried off the contents of the Sunday School missionary box, amounting to about forty cents. They left behind them a common screw driver, which is now in the sexton's possession awaiting an owner.

Juvenile Concert.—To-morrow evening a grand juvenile concert by over 150 voices and instruments, under the direction of Mr. Youmans, will be given in Bradburn's Hall. The programme will consist of solos, duets, trios, glees, choruses and national and patriotic songs; also illuminated tableaux, vivants, &c., making altogether an attractive entertainment. Don't fail to attend.

The Indian Queen.—Messrs Rabidge & Shaw have now on hand for the holiday trade a very fine selection of meerschaum, briar root and other fancy pipes, cigar holders and handsome tobacco pouches and cigar cases, especially adapted for holiday presents. Their stock of cigars and tobaccos has been replenished and they have now in stock the finest and most popular brands manufactured. Call and see them.

Very Large.—The crop of "tidies" is unusually large this year. The ladies have made a great improvement in this article, and can now cover the back of a two dollar and a half chair with a wonderful urge of silk, satin and lace embroidery costing fifteen or twenty dollars. Experienced and far-sighted married men are laying in a stock of camp stools, so as to have a chance to sit down this winter.

Poultry Association.—At a recent meeting of the Midland Central Poultry Association it was resolved to hold the second annual exhibition in the Town of Peterborough on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 5th, 6th and 7th of February next. Circulars have been distributed to the different poultry fanciers throughout the country, asking their co-operation, and it is confidently expected that the coming exhibition will be a great success.

New Year's Ball.—The seventh annual ball of the Young Canadians' L. O. L. of this town will be held in Bradburn's Opera House on New Year's Eve, December 31st. An efficient committee of management has been appointed, who will, no doubt, succeed in maintaining the reputation enjoyed by the members of this lodge in all their public gatherings. The usual invitations by circulars have this year been dispensed with, owing to the amount of trouble they entail, and tickets will be disposed of by members of the committee and officers of the lodge. Those who have heretofore attended the Young Canadians' social gatherings, will, no doubt, avail themselves of this opportunity in spending a pleasant and enjoyable evening.

Splendid Furniture in great variety at A. Chase's, George street. 51-4ins.

T. E. Fitzgerald's Carriage Works.—Attention is directed to Mr. Fitzgerald's advertisement in another column, where he announces that he is now manufacturing every description of cutters and sleighs from the very choicest timber and finest quality of steel shoeing. He has secured the right to manufacture the "Common Sense sleigh" which has given universal satisfaction wherever used. A new structure upon an entirely new plan, and saves fully fifty per cent horse power. Call and see it.

Pillows, Mattresses, Spring Beds, Walnut Bedroom Suites with Marble Tops, and all the cheaper grades at Chase's, George street. 51-4ins.

Mr. J. R. Ormond, as will be seen by a requisition in another column, has been requested by a large number of the ratepayers of No. 1 Ward to become a candidate at the approaching election for Councillors, and has announced his intention of complying with the requisition. As Mr. Haggart has determined to be no longer a candidate for civic honors, we know of no one who could fill his chair with better satisfaction to the ratepayers than Mr. Ormond. The report that is being circulated that he cannot qualify on account of holding a position under the town as caretaker of the clock, is incorrect, his son being the person who fills the situation.

Important to Farmers.—Clegg's Mill is fitted expressly for Custom Work with the latest improvements in milling. The grinding is superintended by Mr. E. Clegg, a practical miller of more than thirty years experience.

Presentation.—On Friday afternoon last, at the closing exercises of the Collegiate Institute, previous to the holidays, Mr. Wm. Scott and Miss Jennie Leonard on behalf of the teachers and pupils of the Institute and Public Schools presented the Principal, Mr. Jeffers, with the following address, accompanied by a handsome and unique tea set of five pieces, elegantly chased and satin finished:—

MR. JEFFERS, PRINCIPAL.—We the teachers and pupils of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Public Schools have met to-day for the purpose of conveying to you this expression of our confidence and esteem. We have at all times found in you a kind friend and counsellor; and we cannot separate for the holidays without marking in some way our appreciation of your labors for the welfare of the schools, and of your friendly and kindly demeanor towards us. We ask you to accept this slight token of our good-will, and wish you to accept, for yourself and Mrs. Jeffers, this tea set, accompanied by the sincere prayer that you may be long spared in the teaching profession.

It must be gratifying to Mr. Jeffers to be thus tangibly remembered by the teachers and pupils, with whom he comes daily in contact, and cannot fail to show the harmony and good feeling existing in our schools under the present management.

METHODIST CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

Interesting Services—Rev. Mr. Poole's Lecture—Trustees Financial Statement

The anniversary services in connection with the George Street Methodist Church were held on Sunday and Monday last, December 16th and 17th. On Sunday two services were preached—morning and evening—by the Rev. W. H. Poole to very large congregations, the large and capacious Church being filled to its seating capacity. The reputation which this reverend gentleman enjoys of being one of the ablest divines in connection with the Methodist body as well as being a former pastor of this church, drew many from other congregations to listen to the eloquent and able sermons delivered by him. On Monday evening of the church was held, when the Rev. Mr. Poole again addressed a large audience, delivering his celebrated lecture—"Anglo-Israel; or the British Nation the lost tribes of Israel." The meeting was opened by singing and prayer, after which the choir sang an anthem.

The Rev. Mr. Willoughby rose to move the Rev. Mr. Watson to the chair and in doing so regretted that he was unable to be with the congregation at the services on Sabbath, as he had been called away to perform a duty elsewhere. Mr. Watson, who was well acquainted with the business of the church, would he felt sure fill the chair ably, and he had much pleasure in calling upon him.

The Chairman in a few appropriate remarks called upon the speaker of the evening.

Rev. Mr. Poole on coming forward was received with applause and without any apologetic or introductory remarks, proceeded with his subject. For the better purpose of illustrating his lecture he had hung in the rear of the pulpit several maps and drawings, descriptive of his course of argument. We shall only attempt to give a mere outline of the lecture which abounded with interesting statistics and clear reasoning, showing that the speaker was complete master of the subject he was handling, and whether his hearers were willing to accept all his theories, they at least were bound to admit that he produced facts and figures for all the arguments which he advanced. The lecturer commenced by stating that many theories were abroad as to where the lost tribes are situated. Some say they are in Persia, some in the regions of the Caspian Sea, some say they are in Afghanistan, while others place them in Peru. These theories were all antagonistic to the glorious prophecies of the Old Testament. He referred to a number of divines and professors who took his view, and maintained that the British nation are the descendants of the lost tribes. He referred to the early history of the Israelites and to the formation of two distinct nations known as the House of Judah and the House of Israel. He asked his hearers not to mix or confound these two together but to follow each distinctly and separately. The Jews were never to be lost. They are known to this day in whatever land they may be found by the expression of their faces and the formation of their skulls. Israel was to be a powerful nation, while the Jews had no such promise; Israel was to have a perpetuity, while the Jews were never to have a nationality until after they accepted the Messiah. The Jews put our Saviour to death; the Israelites did not participate in it. After Judah shall have accepted the Messiah then shall the two nations be united. They are not yet united, but the time is drawing near when they shall be. The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind sure. The loss to Israel of her land, her name, her language was foretold by divine prophecy. The speaker held that after the captivity and the loss of the empire, the Israelites went to Media where they found good pasture for their flocks. They afterwards passed through Asia Minor and by way of Constantinople to the North and West. Paulus' apostolic journeys were made to a Hebrew colony in Spain. A host of the early writers referred to this colony. If we are to find the lost tribes we must look for them in the North and West, and we are to look to our Saxon forefathers for them. The name Saxon he claimed was derived from the sons of Isaac, the different changes in the name, (some twenty or thirty) were pointed upon a sheet of canvas which he explained to the audience. The name could be traced in the old languages as far back as 500 years before Christ. Geography also gave abundance of proof. The British Isles had been known by various names, such as Kittea, Javan, Tarshish, Yerish Land or the land of sunset, Scone and Alpania. The Phœnicians named it the land of tin, from which its present name Britain was derived. History and Geography both agreed in establishing that the present Anglo race were the descendants of the lost tribes. He claimed that the ships of Tyre in trading with the land of Chittim made their voyages to Cornwall. Solomon's vessels must have traded here in the west as there was no place known in the east where a three years voyage could have been made. It was to these same British Isles that Jonah wanted to go. The descendants of the tribe of Dan, he claimed, settled in what was now known as Ireland. In looking at the history of Dan, we find that he was allotted but a small territory, and that he afterwards added to it a tract of country lying near Damascus. The people took to shipping and commerce, and carried on trading with other countries. A number of the descendants of this tribe landed on the Irish coast and established a colony there, which was afterwards raised to the position of a new nation. Traces of their early history were still to be found. When they planted the new nation they introduced many new customs. They brought with them a portion of the ark of the old Testament, as well as the coronation stone, which is at present at Westminster, and upon which every king and queen of the British Empire has knelt when taking the coronation oath. Rectories were also established, and the harps which were used in playing those beautiful Hebrew melodies, were also introduced. Educational institutions were formed, and a change rapidly came over the place, Ireland becoming the seat of learning for the west. More than 4000 Hebrew words were found in the language of these early days. If the British people are not the descendants of the House of Israel, then what other people exists, that enjoys all the promises made the Kingdom of Israel. The word of God tells us that Israel shall be as numerous as the sands of the sea. Have we not this promise fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxon race whose possessions extend over all portions of the earth—in every climate—ruling more than one-fifth of the entire population of the globe, and composed of a grand confederacy of nations. Israel was also to be a first naval power; she was to go down to the sea in ships. How do we fulfil this? Does not the tonnage of our vessels stand in the proportion of two to one, when compared with other nations. We are also told that one shall beat a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight. Britania by her conquests has also fulfilled this. Israel was never to be conquered. The British nation has never been yet subdued. He then referred to our national coat of arms—the lion being the symbol of strength. The Union Jack, composed of the red cross of St. George, the cross of St. Andrew and the cross of St. Patrick, sounded to him very like the union of Jacob. The standard weights and measures of Britania were the same as those found locked up in the great Pyramid of Egypt. A command given to Israel, was that her Sabbath should be kept, and what other nation observes the Sabbath in a like manner with Britain. Israel was to be the great treasure house of the earth. "Thou shalt lend to many nations; thou shalt lend, but not borrow." Britain never yet made a national loan but on the other hand all the nations of the earth look to her to borrow money, there being no less than eighteen nations found on the debit side of Britain's ledger to the extent or £400,000,000. Many other instances were cited to prove the position taken by the reverend lecturer, who spoke for nearly two hours, and was listened to with marked attention throughout; and at the close received loud applause.

THE TRUSTEE'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Mason Secretary of the Trustee Board read a report in detail giving a statement of the finances of the church for the year. The following is an abstract of the report:—

Total revenue from all sources including cash on hand.....	$4116.35
Expenditure.....	$4264.24
	147.89
Add unsettled acts.....	450.00
Balance against Trustees.....	$597.89

A collection was afterwards taken up with a view of meeting the deficiency, after which the meeting was brought to a close.

THE CLERGY IN WORLDLY AFFAIRS.

(From the Napanee Standard.)

A supercilious article on the above subject from the Peterborough Review is quoted by the Anti-Dunkin organs as if clergymen are for the present "brought up with a round turn" and from this time henceforth and forever they must hold their peace on "Worldly Affairs." Who has claimed infallibility for them? When have they cried peccavi when fairly criticised; When do they, as a class ask their hearers to, swallow everything they say without question? Do they not reason "of righteousness, temperance and a judgment to come?" Their hard and unanswerable arguments during the Dunkin campaigns in Ontario have brought upon them abuse, on the principle of "when you have a bad cause abuse the plaintiff's attorney." The clergy who opposed the Act are notoriously few and, when confronted either through the press or on the platform, cut a sorry figure indeed. We would like to see the names of these champions enrolled, a curiosity for future generations!

In the heat of discussion strong language may in some instances have been used but these are exceptions and not the rule. Grave exception is taken to the statement of a minister in Toronto that "God was on his side, and (adds the writer) a few days after the Act was beaten by a large majority." Is God always on the side of the majority? Is the voice of the people the voice of God? God was on the side of Stephen yet Stephen suffered martyrdom. The best causes have suffered reverses and at times defeat. It has been so with Christianity and with the efforts made to abolish slavery, but as in these instances truth prevailed, so will it be in the cause of temperance.

Advocates of prohibition are said to work themselves "into religious hysterics and to blaspheme the name of the Creator." Consistency is a jewel, surely. The blasphemy, the riot and violence is on the other side. Intimidation, letters threatening personal violence, are the common arguments of those who have opposed the Dunkin Bill. Toronto, Brant and Grey may be mentioned as illustrations. The clergy are rapidly falling into line, and the day is not distant when all the churches of the Province will join in a holy crusade against the liquor traffic as the greatest enemy to morality and religion.

MERE MENTION.

—Mosaics has a great variety of beautiful Christmas and New Year's cards, unique, neat and stylish.

—Welcome the wintry days—
The ringing steel on frosty pools;
The silvery bells, the bloom'ing blades
In sleighs!

—Rev. Mr. Bell last Friday evening delivered a lecture in Port Hope to a large and respectable audience.

—Remember Affleck's lecture in the Opera House to-night.

—13½ lbs. of sugar at Chambers Bros. for $1.00.

—Where are "the cold, chilly winds of December?"

—Christmas slippers are beginning to sprout. Christmas is generally a very slippery time.

—Considerable taste is now shown in the dressing of shop windows for the Christmas holidays.

—J. R. Ormond is selling his stock of watches, clocks, jewelry, fancy goods, &c., at and below cost.

—The question now agitating the minds of "the boys" at present is, whether their overcheque will stand a new pair of skates or not, these hard times.

—Now is the time of the year when the hucksters try to get up a "corner" on turkeys by swooping the market, and forcing people to buy at their prices. Look out for your turkeys in time.

—New Year's calls will be fashionable this year, and it is to be hoped that the custom of giving wine will be less popular than usual.

ALICE CARY'S SWEETEST POEM.

Among the beautiful pictures
That hang on memory's wall
Is one of a little old parlor
I call it recollection;
One moment my heart of all
Holds for its treasured color.
Dark with the shadows;
Not for the violets pressed
Between the folds of the curtains,
Not for the roses that lent
Their mingled breath to the evening,
Not for the singing
Of the sweet home birds
That warbled all day long;
Not for the vines on the window,
Where the tendrils reached out;
Nor one stalk, nor the whole garden outshone,
In strength to be remembered.

I open and a little brother
Whose curls that were dark and deep
As the hair of that old picture
Lie black in pressed flowers,
Looks on the flower of his fancies,
Poises on the wheels that spring,
Who moved those the Centennial commences,
The seasons of long ago;
Rent his coat on the gate post nearby.
And one of the dearest eyes
I needs for my light to see by
Is dead on the yellow leaves.

Sweetly his pale arms folded
His head in a sweet mockery
As the light of a happy spirit
And vision that passed through it.
And vision the sweetest of all
Lingered in the lovely features,
Repeated by the eyes of light.
Transparent, of all the pictures
That hang on memory's wall
That one of the deep all hours
Smoothes the least of all.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

I am a doctor. I live in London, and in one of the most crowded localities.

I had been in my present abode two years, and had never had a patient from the more aristocratic circles, when one night, about 11.30 I was startled by a violent ring at my bell, and having just got to bed after a hard day's work, I can't say the summons was agreeable.

However, I ran to my window at once, and thrusting my head out into the rain, cried, 'Whose there?'

A voice answered, 'Only I, Doctor. It is an urgent case. Please come down to the door.'

I hurried on my clothes, and down the stairs and opened the door. There stood in the full light of the hall lamp, an elderly lady robed in mourning.

She put out the smallest of hands in a fine black kid glove, and said piteously—'Are you the doctor?'

'Yes,' I said.

'Then come with me,' said she. 'Don't delay. It's life or death. Come.'

I hurried on my overcoat, caught up my umbrella, and offering my arm to the old lady walked down the street with her.

'You must be my guide, madam,' I said 'I do not know where you live.'

She hesitatingly gave me a street and number, that surprised me still more. It was in a tolerable aristocratic quarter of the town.

'Who is ill, madam?' I enquired—'a grown person or a child?'

'A young lady—my daughter,' she said.

'Suddenly?'

'Yes, suddenly,' she answered. 'Do you keep a brougham? You should have brought it out if you do. We would have been able to go faster.'

'I keep no conveyance,' I said.

'Perhaps you are poor?' she said, eagerly.

'Certainly not rich,' I said.

'Care her, and I'll make you rich,' she said, in a sort of suppressed shriek. 'Care her and I'll give you anything you ask. I don't care for money: I'm rolling in gold. Care her, and I'll shower it on you.'

'Madam, you are excited,' I said. 'Pray be calm.'

'Calm! Che said—calm! but you don't know a mother's heart.'

We had reached the street she had indicated, and were at the door of one of the houses. The old lady ascended the steps and opened the door with a latch-key. A light burned in the hall; another in one of the parlours, the furniture of which was shrouded and draped in white linen.

'Wait here, sir,' she said, as she led me into one of these.

I waited what I thought a most unreasonable time in the gloomy parlor. I began to grow a little nervous, when a stout, short, red faced woman bustled into the room.

'I beg pardon, sir,' she said, in a singular tone, such as one who had committed a speech to memory might use—'but my mistress is very nervous, and needlessly alarmed. She begs your acceptance of the customary fee; and there is no need of your services.'

Thus speaking she handed me a guinea, courtesied, and opened the door for me. I bowed, expressed my pleasure that the patient was better, and departed.

It was a queer sort of adventure, but rather amusing than otherwise; besides, I had a good fee.

I rose early next morning, and paid two visits before breakfast. Returning to my astonishment, I found sitting in my consultation room the lady of the night before. She rose as I entered.

'What must you think of me?' she said. 'But no matter. My daughter is very dear to me, and I have heard of your skill. She is worse again. Can you call some time to day, as early as possible, at my house?'

'I will be there in an hour,' I said.

The lady took out her purse. 'I am an old-fashioned woman,' she said. 'I retrain old-fashioned habits. In my day the doctors received his pay on the spot. It was in ordinary cases a guinea. Will you receive it now?'

I did not know what to say, but she laid the money on the table and departed.

I ate my breakfast, and having dressed myself carefully, made my way to the old lady's house. I knocked. The door was opened by the stout female who dismissed me the night before.

'The doctor,' I said, by way of explanation

'Ah,' she said. 'Has missus called you in again?'

'Yes,' I answered.

'There is no need, I assure you, sir,' she said. 'I can't really ask you to. There's no one ill. It's a whim of missus. I am a better judge of illness than she. No need of a doctor.'

I left the house, of course, partly in dudgeon, and partly in amazement.

Three weeks passed by, when lo! the old lady again.

She walked into my consulting room, dressed as before, so greatly agitated, as carefully polite.

'Sir,' she said, 'again I trouble you. My poor daughter! Come at once.'

'Madam,' I answered, 'it's a doctor's duty, as it should be his pleasure, to obey such calls but you are aware that I have been sent twice from your door without seeing the patient. Allow me to ask you a question. Are you the mistress of that house?'

'I am,' said the old lady. 'I have lived there for forty years. I own it. I am the only person under that roof that has the right to give an order.'

'And the person who sent me away?'

'My old servant, Margaret.'

'Did she do it at your orders?'

'No, sir: it was a piece of presumption. But Margaret means well; she loves me.'

'Then, madam, if I accompany you, I shall see the patient.'

'Assuredly, sir.'

I put on my hat again, and we went out of the house together. We exchanged very few words as we walked along the streets. At the door of the house the old lady paused.

'Don't mind Margaret,' she whispered; 'she means well.'

Then she ascended the steps. At the last one the door was opened to us by the woman I had seen twice before.

The doctor must see my child, 'Margaret,' said the old lady.

Margaret stepped back. 'Walk in, sir, was all she said.

The old lady beckoned to me to follow her. I did so. She went up stairs and opened the first door we came to. It was an empty bedroom. She closed it with a sigh. The next room into which she led me was also empty. Margaret stood on the landing. We visited the apartments, one after another, and finally entered one in the attic. It was tolerably furnished as a sleeping chamber, and on a bed in the corner lay an old lady of about my own age.

'Sister,' she said, 'sister; somebody has come to see you. Will you let the doctor feel your pulse?'

'Yes,' I answered.

'There is no need, I assure you, sir,' she said. 'I can't really ask you to. There's no one ill. It's a whim of missus. I am a better judge of illness than she. No need of a doctor.'

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 27, 1877

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The project of a through line from the capital of Ontario to that of the Dominion has suffered a temporary defeat, and in a quarter where, judging from an outsiders standpoint, it should have least reason to dread opposition. By a majority of over seventeen hundred Toronto on Thursday declared that she does not wish a new channel of trade to be opened to her tradesmen and merchants. By this decisive vote she affirms it is her desire that the Credit Valley Railway which she has given $200,000 to assist in building shall remain with but a single outlet to the ocean. She has predained that she is satisfied with the monopoly of the Eastward trade, which the Grand Trunk holds wholly in winter, and against which the vessels offer but a feeble competition in summer. She has given the Province to unde stand she does not wish a large tract of Country, only waiting means of communication to become her customer, to pour its riches into her coffers. Such being her decision of course we accept it, though we must confess it is very difficult to see how her citizens could imagine themselves losers in imposing a trifle on their burdens in consideration of the large additions to their trade and the increased value, such an undertaking would give their property. The result however is so astonishing that we are not surprised to learn there are many reasons for believing the conclusion now arrived at, but temp rary and for cherishing the hope that a le t regr t will eventually prevail. In th t corp ration s many demands of this kind had previously been made, so many burd ns had been added to those already bo ne by the tax payer, that it is not strange he should start alarmed from any scheme promising to increase them, no matter how necessary to his business, or how fruitful of profit it might ultimately pr ve. Hard times are most effectual teachers of economy, and sometimes their lessons ever top the bounds of prudence and restrain even necessary expenditure. Then there were a multiplicity of interests arrayed against this measure, and in outside ring them Toronto tonians might almost be excused for forgetting their own. It will not be surprising to those who have followed the discussion in these columns, to hear that the entire influence of the Grand Trunk was cast against carrying the bonus By-Law To that Company the building of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway means pecuniary loss. It means a competitor for through freights; it means a lowering of tariffs; it means the b eaking up of a monopoly as profitable for it as injurious to the countries, the proposed line would traverse It was natural that every means should be tried of preventing a granting of a bonus which would make the construction of that line a certainty, and every means was tried. Not only were persuasion and whiskey used, but it is affirmed more substantial arguments were not wanting. Slanders and falsehoods of every description were freely circulated. It was affirmed the promoters of the By-Law wished to secure offices for themselves and their relations. It was maintained that the debentures voted to the Credit Valley Railway had been sold, and inferentially that the city officials were pocketing the interest already paid on these bonds.

Although impossible and expressly provided against by the terms of the Credit Valley by-law such a cry, tending said did to the belief that all bonuses were swindles, got up for the benefit of individuals only, no doubt had its effect. Then there were personal and section jealousies employed against the measure. There was want of organization on the part of the promoters, and incessant and unwearying activity on the part of its opponents All these influences have been more awful in inflicting a temporary defeat. Temporar, it can only be, Toronto is too enterprising, her business men are too shrewd, not to see ultimately the benefit such a grant would be instrumental in conferring on the city. Its advocates have fought an honorable battle There is no stain on their banners, no bribery is imputed to their adv cacy. If they has failed to insure them victory now it will assist their efforts materially hereafter That these efforts will be successful we have, as we said, no doubt. But those who are entrusted with the management of this affair must not relax their exertions in the meantime. The best counties have suffered too long, the ultimate gain of this railway is too certain to admit of any hesitating. Others have undertaken the question for the present. With the favorable example of Toronto before her, Ottawa has but done nobly. But Ottawa can not afford to fail in her share of the undertaking. If her $200,000 will build the road, the road will assuredly be built. Let the othe rs then be pressed with all vigour, let the other bonuses be secured and soon nobody but Toronto will have any cause to regret that her $200,000 was not as promptly and cheerfully given as the other municipalities contributed theirs.

NO NECESSITY FOR DRINKING AT HOTELS.

Not long ago it was quite boastfully announced in their local organ that the liquor sellers of Peterborough were charging more for "horns" to those who voted for the Dunkin Act than to those who voted against it. No fault was found with them for that by the friends of temperance, whose sole desire was that they should charge the higher rates to everybody, and thus discourage the consumption of the "curse of Canada." We do not know whether the hotel and saloon keepers have still adhered to their discriminating tariff; but we hope they do. They have a perfect right to regulate their own charges in the way they best see fit; and we should be the last to find fault with them, especially when we deem their new departure for the good of the community.

The discrimination of our Peterborough publicans has been far out-done by their business brethren in Fergus, in the County of Wellington, where it is well known the Dunkin By-law was lately defeated. There the hotel keepers have published a notice wherein they state in detail certain charges which will be made to the "minority," or those who voted for the passage of the Dunkin Bill. These rates are :—

1 horse to stable or shed,	without hay	10c
" " "	with hay	15c
2 horses " "	without hay	15c
" " "	with hay	20c

The same hotel keepers also declare that "parties calling to use sitting room, fire and pump, will be expected to give a fair consideration, or else not be welcome;" also that: "hotel keepers will not feel themselves bound to ordinary charges for meals and bed accommodation to said minority."

Some of the Dunkinites, and not a few anti-Dunkinites in that locality, have expressed their disapprobation of this notice on the part of the Fergus hotel keepers. Even the Guelph Herald, the chief journalistic opponent of the by-law in Wellington, condemns this discriminatory tariff as a something having the appearance of retaliation. Looked at from that light there is of course a baleful glare upon it; but we fancy that is not the right way to view the matter. Men do not usually allow their feelings to interfere with their business, especially when, as in this case, they act, not individually, but in concert, and after evident consultation. The chances are all in favor of the thought that the half-dozen hotel keepers of Fergus well considered their course, and knew what they were doing when they jointly published the notice to which we have referred. Nor is their action strange, if properly thought upon. They keep "houses of entertainment for man and beast," as the phrase ran in the good old days; and it is but right that they should receive reasonable remuneration for the giving of such entertainment. Of late years the proper character of the inn has given place to that of the tap-room. Just as the old legend, "Entertainment for Man and Beast" has given place to "Licensed to sell wine, beer and other spirituous or fermented liquors," so has the bed-room been subordinated to the bar-room, the dining table to the billiard table, and the stables to the bowling alley or room for other games that may be played for liquor, or during the course of which it is the fashion to order the drinks or cigars. Even the largest hotel proprietors look to the bar-room and billiard parlor to supply a considerable portion of their gross receipts. True, a strict observance of the law precludes the connection of the billiard room with the place where liquor is sold, even by so much as a door; but in only very few cases do we know of the law in this matter being enforced. Were it pressed practically on the attention of those hotel-keepers who boast that they pursue an entirely legitimate business, even in this town, there would probably be a pitiful outcry from certain very respectable citizens that they were about to be ruined. The fact is, whether hotel-keepers acknowledge it by word or not, they place greater dependence on the immoral and illegal parts of their trade than on the more respectable minister ations to guests. This is potent to all who take thought of the matter.

No wonder then that these men fight with all their energies for what they have learned to look on as their very living. That they are so complaisant regarding the sale of liquors and common disregard of law is not at all wonderful, considering that they have been so long encouraged by public opinion. But public opinion is changing, and has changed; and the business of keeping public houses must change with it. The action of the Fergus hotel-keepers is merely a sign of the times in which we live, and of the sentiment that is growing up throughout the country. By the revision of their tariff of charges they admit that they cannot afford to accommodate man and beast as former figures unless man swells their bar receipts. In other words, they acknowledge that in the old way profits on sales of liquor are so great that they can afford to throw in the "incidentals" for nothing. So it is; but is it right that it should be so? Public opinion says it is not right, and the hotel-keepers themselves begin to see it in the same of the right. Accordingly they begin to charge directly for the accommodation given. They have no doubt calculated on a business basis, and laid down such charge as will pay them, exclusive of any bar profits. To al alsteiners should fall in with the new departure at once, and encourage the hotel-keepers in every way to continue to do a direct business without liquor instead of as indirect one through liquor. They should particularly patronize those who are ready now or early to dispense entirely with the sale of liquor. Only a willingness to pay remunerative charges to temperance houses will enable such hotels to compete with liquor-selling houses, which cut down or expunge charges for accommodation on the strength of the profit on their sales of beer, whiskey, &c., over the bar. The recognition at all of such a scale of charges as that made by the Fergus hotel-keepers will naturally lead people to enquire why their landlords cannot do a good business by making fresh charges to every customer, and leaving liquor-selling off entirely. Not only the people, but the hotel-keepers themselves will soon be led to see it in this way, and further experiments in the "desires of the public" when they serve.

A correspondent of recently burned Peterborough Alhouse just received an Upton Advocate.

THE DUNKIN ACT.

LAKEFIELD.

The Dunkin Bill has had a particular triumph at Lakefield. The peculiarity of the case in the neighbouring village lies in the fact that the submission of the by-law was petitioned for by the opponents, who thought they could defeat it. Under a mistaken reading of the Act they fancied defeat in a minor municipality just before the submission of the by-law in the County would prevent the vote being taken on the 9th of January. The carrying of the by-law by a majority of twenty-nine is the best proof of the sentiment of the people of Lakefield; and we are most happy to congratulate the chief liquor advocates of that village as Dunkinites in deed, if not in truth. Seeing the aid they have given to the Bill, we are ready to forgive them for the unnecessary trouble they have caused the electors, who will again be called on to vote upon the County by-law on the 9th proximo,—a privilege we feel sure they will avail themselves of none the less heartily that they have already had a chance to make a distinct avowal of their opinion. We only hope that they will see to it that the majority is no smaller, but rather larger, on the second vote so soon to be taken.

ASHBURNHAM.

The vote on the Dunkin By-Law submitted by the liquor dealers and brewers, with a view to defeating the object of the By-law in the county—came off on Monday. The antis were confident of an overwhelming majority, but were disappointed when the poll closed, as their majority was only eight. When it is taken into consideration the immense influence arrayed to defeat the By-law the victory for the temperance people is a complete one, and on the 9th of January will be more complete. On Monday the majority would have been for the By-law had the electors been let alone. There were two open houses all day, where men could be "whiskeyed" and from these more than one of the electors were brought to cast their vote—for what is acknowledged to be "the curse of Canada;" by which the manufacturers and dealers enjoy the profit the feeble pence. The Dunkinites had one honorable opponent whose name cannot be mentioned but with the greatest respect, and that gentlemen is Mr. John Ladgate. Although voting against the By-law, he gave his office to hold Dunkin Committee meetings, he did not interfere with a single man in his employment, and permitted some of them to take his conveyance to draw Dunkin votes to the poll. The Antis labored strenuously to impress on the Conservative electors that it was a Grit movement, because Mr. J. Stratton was President of the Association to promote it, but thanks be to the common sense of the people, not many were thus influenced. The small majority testifies to the soundness of the people at heart if left to follow there own judgement, and as in town the young men, boys and women were all Dunkinites, Prohibitionists cannot therefore be much longer trifled with. The curse of strong drink must be banished from this beautiful and prosperous "Canada of ours" though it cost the sacrifice of every political party now in it. The mothers, sisters, wives, daughters and young men demand it; and will have it, should it come over the funeral piles of all the Grits and Tories in the country. Our young men cannot be made drunkards or the temptation be retained for the aggrandisement of heartless unprincipled political demagogues.

The voting was quiet. The rumour that the Reeve used any influences against the By-Law is contradicted, as well as a rumour that Mr. A. Ingram, the Collector, used threats against those who voted for it. So far as our knowledge of the canvas and vote goes, we know of no substantial ground for the rumour, in regard to either of these gentlemen. Mr. Burnham was especially courteous and fair in all the proceedings.

A MELANCHOLY TRAGEDY.

The people of Bridgesorth and vicinity were pained and astonished on Saturday morning last to learn that Mr. S. S. Kelly, a respected and well to do citizen of Smith had committed suicide while in a state of mental derangement. Mr. Kelly had for a few weeks exhibited some signs of mental disturbance On Friday morning he drove himself to the residence of a son-in-law, and as he was returning home with his daughter exhibited great despondency, and was unwilling to go through the village, fearing that the people wished to take him to the Asylum. His daughter endeavored to persuade him it was not so, but he could not be persuaded to the contrary, and suddenly got out of the buggy with the expressed intention of going another way home Not arriving soon his son went in search of him, but did not find him till next morning. When found he was almost naked, his throat cut, and a gash made in one of his legs, and lifeless. Through the evening he must have heard his friends and neighbors in search of him, but under the delusion, perhaps, that they sought him to take him away, he must have taken his own life for fear. Mr. Kelly was about 67 years of age, in prosperous circumstances, living comfrotably, and no other cause can be assigned for his committing this melancholy act, than that of mental aberration, manifesting itself first by a violent headache, afterwards by a kind of religious despondency, and finally in self destruction. The greatest sympathy is felt for the family.

CANADA PROSPERING.—Yet with the known facts as to the growing prosperity of industrial interests in Hamilton, with the official figures we present showing the increasing exports trade of Canadian manufactures, the journals of the stupid party persist in their efforts to decry Canada before the world as a prostrate country, as the organ of the stupid party persists in spending it abroad that our thriving city is desolate and deserted, because that equally foolish and wicked old man, John A. Macdonald, has no $6,000 a year and the power to again "go through" the money bones of Canadian railway companies—Hamilton Times.

A HALIFAX paper noticing the arrival in that city of Dr. Tupper, says: He looks very feeble and depressed, and seems to be fearing about without any particular settled purpose. The Doctor has had a great deal of trouble in late years, and it is not likely will ever again take an active part in political affairs. The quarrel between his self and Sir John A. Macdonald would appear to have been a wider breach than was at first supposed, as apparently they have studiously avoided each other for several months past. There never was much in common between them—save an inordinate desire for place.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER.—JANUARY 6-13, 1878.

The Evangelical Alliance respectfully commends the following topics for the observance of the week of prayer, January 6-13, 1878:

Sabbath, January 6, Sermons; Christian Union Perfected. Rev. vii. 9, 10.

Monday, January 7, Prayer and Praise: Remembrance of personal and relative mercies; prayer for the divine blessing on past privileges, and for a humble and contrite spirit.

Tuesday, January 8, Prayer for the Church of Christ in all lands; for its deliverance from error; for its increase in faith and holiness, and in power as a witness for the Lord Jesus Christ; for the grace and guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Wednesday, January 9, Prayer for Christian families, for sick and afflicted members; for children at school, and for all youth in our colleges and seminaries of learning; for young men entering upon the active business of life, and for those abroad; for our sons and daughters openly confessing Christ.

Thursday, January 10, Prayer for nations, for rulers, magistrates, and statesmen; for the army and navy; for all benevolent and philanthropic institutions; for religious liberty and the opening of doors "wide and effectual" for publishing the Gospel; and for the reign of righteousness and peace.

Friday, January 11, Prayer for Christian missions to the Jews and Gentiles; for Sunday-schools, and for the divine blessing on all Christian efforts to spread the glad tidings of the Gospel of salvation.

Saturday, January 12, Prayer for the circulation of the Bible; for the observance of the Sabbath; for the removal of intemperance, for the rescue of the fallen, for the safety of those who travel by land and water.

Sabbath, January 13, Sermons: Christian Life. "Let Your Light Shine." Matt. v. 16.

Weekly News Items.

An Agitation has been commenced to procure the amendment of the Income Franchise Act that all who have income votes shall have the privilege of voting for School Trustees.

The laborers on sections 6 and 7 of the Lachine canal struck work the other day because the contractors refused to advance their wages from 90 cents to a dollar. A riot occurred on Tuesday, shots were fired and one man was fatally injured.

The draining of Lake Scugog is now being talked of by the people of Victoria. It covers 50,000 acres of good pasture land.

The Canada Agricultural Insurance Company has gone into liquidation. The action has been precipitated by the failure of the President, Mr. Wm. Angus. They owe insurers for claims $60,000, and other liabilities, amounting to about $50,000 more. The total capital stock of the company was originally $100,000 on which three 10 per cent. of calls have been made. The last two have not been paid and will, it is thought, meet the liabilities of the concern.

The Halifax delegates to the Dominion Board of Trade are instructed to press for the abolition of the Stamp Act and the suspension of the Bankruptcy Act for five years, and to urge that the duties on sugar be levied so as not to interfere with refining in Canada. They will also present the claims of Halifax as the winter port of the Dominion.

A boiler explosion, attended with the most terrible results, occurred last Friday in a large New York candy manufactory. The building was entirely demolished by the explosion and by a fire which it caused, some forty or fifty of the hands, at the lowest estimate, employed in the establishment, perishing. A large number were also seriously injured. The scene after the occurrence was one of the wildest excitement and confusion.

Mr. Joly, the leader of the Local Opposition, in his speech in the Quebec Legislature on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, referred to the occurrences which took place in Montreal last summer in connection with the Orange demonstration, and asked the Government to put itself in communication with the various national societies to see if something could not be done to abolish party processions.

The "Chieftain" is not popular at Ingersoll. At a social held there the other evening in behalf of the English church, a ballot vote was taken between him and the Premier, Mr. Mackenzie receiving 530 votes, and Sir John only 126.

We are glad to observe that a movement has commenced from the outside, to do some measure of justice to the most hard worked and poorly paid public officials in Canada—to refer to the town-ship clerks. Recent changes in the municipal law have added largely to their duties, and yet with few exceptions, their salaries only amount to from $100 to $250 a year. We have as wealthy townships in this county as the township of Cavan, yet the clerk of that municipality receives a salary of $400 a year. It is short sighted economy to grind down an efficient officer's salary to a mere pittance such as a day laborer would scorn to accept.

THE MIDLAND EXTENSION.—We are glad to learn that the work on the extension of the Midland Railway between Waubashene and the terminus at Midland City is progressing with satisfactory rapidity, the rails being laid nearly to Victoria Harbor. In the meantime connection is being kept up with Midland by means of a stage line, established lately through the exertions of Mr. A. White, the popular freight and passenger agent of the Midland Railway.

OUR NEXT GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The name of the Marquis of Normandy is mentioned in connection with the next Governor-Generalship of Canada. He formerly held the position of Governor of Nova Scotia as Lord Mulgrave, and is now Governor of New Zealand.

NEW POSTAL REGULATION.—A conference between the United States Post Office Department and the Canadian office has resulted in a mutual agreement by which "request letters," so called, that is, those bearing on their face a request to be returned to the writer, if not called for in a given time, passing between the two countries will be at once returned to the place from which they were mailed without being held, as formerly, for return through the Dead Letter Office.

Apropos of the recent illness of Pope Pius IX an exchange remarks that there are probably not less than 9,457 columns of papal obituaries in type in the United States. The custom in all large newspaper offices is to keep obituaries of prominent men constantly written up to date, and when their serious illness is reported, to have them put into type, so as to be ready with a "full and particular" account as soon as their death is announced. The N. Y. Herald has in its pigeon holes not less than a thousand of these mortuary manuscripts, so that it can never be be taken at a loss.

We have more than once shown that the Dominion Board of Trade was nothing more than a political organization, the wires of which were pulled by Mr. Thos. White, jr., and a protectionist ring in Montreal. The feeling seems to be pretty current throughout the country, and we read that a meeting of the St. John (N. B.) Board of Trade last week several members declared that it was time to send delegates to the Dominion Board any longer, as the meeting was made simply to serve political party purposes. Two delegates only were finally appointed, but they were both opponents who had no reasonable prospect to be re-elected. Resolutions were moved and were only delegated pro forma.

SAVAGE DEED.—It is probably not an generally known as it ought to be, that sewage or miscellaneous drain, which are a cause of terror to her Majesty's subjects are a common nuisance, and that the owner thereof may be indicted for the same. Several persons have been thus punished, and it is not likely will ever again take an active part in political affairs. The quarrel between his self and Sir John A. Macdonald would appear to have been a wider breach than was at first supposed, as apparently they have studiously avoided each other for several months past. There never was much in common between them—save an inordinate desire for place.

Another Industry that needs no Tariff Increase.

A few days ago our Toronto correspondence furnished us with an item of news to the effect that our enterprising fellow-citizens, Mr. James Turner, had become a shareholder in a new company established in Toronto, for the manufacture of felt hats. The Montreal Gazette furnishes us with the following additional information: "A new company for the manufacture of felt hats, &c., with a capital of $100,000 has been formed in Toronto under the title of the Canada Felt Hat company. The directors are E. K. Greene, Montreal, Thomas Christie, Toronto, and James Turner, Hamilton." Mr. Turner is one of those red-hot Tory protectionists who claim that the country is going to the dogs because the tariff is not high enough. It therefore gives us pleasure to note that in the matter of felt hats, at least, Mr. Turner has sufficient faith in the existing tariff and the future of the country to induce him to invest capital in the manufacture of head gear. If he had not he would not put his money in the enterprise. The fact furnishes another proof that, in spite of what is called the ruinous condition of our industries, even well to-do merchants are not averse to seeking after a share of the shekels that pour so abundantly into the coffers of our Canadian manufacturers. We hope for Mr. Turner's new enterprise every success; we also hope to hear him honestly say, when the next election comes around that Canadian industries are not in so bad a state that he fears to invest money in them, and that he finds the manufacturing even more profitable than the merchantile business.—Hamilton Times.

No Reaction in Quebec East.

Referring to the vigor and variety of the appeals to the East Quebecers in the late election campaign, the Montreal Star (Independent) says:—It is astonishing that these devoted electors managed to come to a level-headed decision at all in the midst of such a bewildering avalanche of words. But they did; and the verdict of these electors is that there is "no reaction in Quebec East." That portion of the public who expected to see the downfall of the Mackenzie government follow close upon the contest just terminated, will have to wait a little longer; there will be no dissolution, no general election. With the cabinet dismembered and a majority of forty-five or fifty at his back in the Commons, Mr. Mackenzie will continue to rule another year.

* * * * * * *

We congratulate Mr. Laurier on his success and hope he will abundantly fulfil the expectations that the country has formed from his ability and disinterested zeal. That he should never have been opposed at all has been our sincere conviction, and notwithstanding the able arguments put forward by those who hold a different interpretation of the theory of representative government, we have seen no reason to alter the opinion we ventured to express on this very important point in constitutional practice. Moreover, except in case of an undoubted revulsion of public feeling, such as must render the re-election of a minister a very improbable contingency, it is unwise to enter into a contest at all. The Opposition can never know when they have beaten the minister out of the field; while one victory suffices to give the Government the advantage definitively. The Opposition wished to precipitate a general election; they have only strengthened the hands of Mr. Mackenzie—perhaps given him a renewed lease of power for another term.

Do not miss the opportunity of hearing Mrs. Bradley at Bradburn's Hall to-night.

CHANCERY SALE

OF

IN THE

TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

No ROBINSON.

Pursuant to an order made herein, bearing date the 15th day of November, 1877, there will be sold with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the Court at Peterborough, on Saturday, 12th day of January next,

at Two o'clock P. M., at the COURT HOUSE in the Town of Peterborough, the following lands and Premises in one parcel, viz:

The East half of Lot Number Eighteen in the Fourth Concession of the Township of Smith, except those portions thereof heretofore conveyed to the trustees of the Westerna Methodist Church, by deed dated 13th of February, 1873,) containing 100 acres more or less.

About 60 acres of this land are cleared and almost entirely clear from stumps, the remainder being wooded, chiefly with hardwood. The land is fine rolling land of good heavy clay soil, well fenced and in a good state of cultivation; sufficiency can be worked on nearly the whole of the cleared portion. There are erected on the premises a part log and part sawn dwelling house, about 20 x 40 feet one storey and a half high, also a good frame barn, cowhouse, stables, and cattle shed, all in good repair. There are two good wells on the premises, also a young orchard covering about two acres. The property is situated on the main travell d road to Peterborough and within from 2 to 3 miles of that town, and is surrounded on three sides by roads. There is a church on the lot and a school house on the next lot. The whole farm is a most desirable and eligible farm.

TERMS OF SALE.

The purchase money to be paid as the time of sale, and the remainder in one month thereafter without interest. Deposit will be required. In other respects the usual terms and conditions of sale as the Court of Chancery. Further particulars can be had on application at the office of Messrs. LOCAL NEWS

Christmas Toys.—Our fancy goods and toy dealers have this year decorated their shops more beautifully than on any previous occasion, and from all appearances are reaping a rich harvest.

Solicited to Stand.—A large number of the ratepayers of No. 2 Ward, we understand, are desirous that Mr. D. Hopkins should consent to go into the Council for 1878. Mr. Hopkins would make a good representative.

Affleck's Lectures.—The Rev. Mr. Affleck's lecture which was to have been delivered last Thursday evening, was owing to some misunderstanding in reference to the rent of the hall, unavoidably postponed.

Personals.—Mr. John McKee, formerly of Smith, but who for a number of years has been living in Kansas, is at present on a visit to his native home. He looks well, a residence of several years in Uncle Sam's domains apparently agreeing with him.....During the week we have had the pleasure of receiving calls from Mr. David Keglick, of the Montreal Gazette, and Mr. Shoebotham, of Ottawa, late teacher in the Collegiate Institute here. These gentlemen being on a holiday visit.

Provincial Sabbath School Convention.—In response to an invitation from the Sunday Schools of this town, the Provincial Sabbath School Association has decided to hold its next annual convention in Peterborough. We cannot but express our admiration at the spirited action our schools have taken in securing this boon to the town, and we trust that they will be supported by the hearty co-operation of the whole Christian community. As the schools have united in securing of denominational distinction in tendering the invitation, so let the churches unite in and secure their efforts to make the convention a success and a lasting blessing to us. The convention will be held next October.

Mr. Youmans' Concert.—Mr. Youmans, favorite Cobourg last Friday evening was a decided success, although the audience was not as large as might have been expected at an entertainment of this character. Between one hundred and fifty and two hundred children took part in the proceedings. They were seated on the stage, the seats being slightly raised one above the other from the front to the rear. The programme was a lengthy one, and was carried out very well considered considering that the class had received only ten lessons from Mr. Youmans' some pieces being executed in a manner creditable to those of mature years—especially worthy of mention was the "Swiss Bell Ringers," by Daddy Linden, of Pont Hope, a little girl of nine years, who, for some time has been under Mr. Youmans' tuition. For one so young to possess an exceptionally fine voice, over which she has good control, and her singing in every way highly captivated and entranced the audience were well concerned. The following interesting feature of the year was the presentation and reading of [illegible] Mr. Youmans' tuition. A CHRISTMAS STORY.

By Eaton Sharp.

'To-morrow's Christmas, ain't it?' I said.

'Why, of course it is,' she answered, and by the way she said it, I inferred that I ought to have known to-morrow was Christmas, and an reflection so I ought. But seriously, I did know it would be Christmas. I heavily wanted to introduce Christmas as the subject of conversation, and now that it was the subject, I hardly knew what to say next. So I compromised by saying:

'I'll take another cup of tea please.'

'Why, your cup isn't empty yet, John,' said my wife; 'What's the matter with you to-day?'

'That's a fact I didn't notice it was full—all right. That's a good sized turkey I got for to-morrow, don't you think so?'

'Yes, I think it is.'

'Don't you think its rather large for us two?'

'Oh, you know cold turkey is—'

'Yes, we had cold turkey for a week after Thanksgiving. I thought it was going to last till Christmas. I was tired of it.'

'Well, why didn't you get a smaller one this time?'

'That's so; I might have done it, might'nt I? I never thought of that.

'Well,' I said, 'this one is pretty large for two, but for three or four now it would be—'

'Oh yes; you want to ask some one to dinner, I know you do.'

'Really, now, I don't.'

'Yes you do; who is it; which of your old cronies: which one?'

'I assure you I never thought—'

'Who is it?'

'Well, you know, Fred Singlemann—'

'Now, see here, John. Old Singlemann boards at one of the best hotels in Detroit, and will get a better dinner than we have to give him.'

'Of course, but you see, my dear, it isn't the dinner alone. On Christmas a man likes a good dinner, of course, but that is not all. I can't help thinking that a man must feel rather lonely eating a Christmas dinner at a hotel. Christmas is a time when our feelings entwine—'

'Oh, nonsense. Old Singlemann has no feelings to entwine, or if he has, why didn't he get married years ago, and then he wouldn't have to be lonely and board out? At his age—'

'Now, there's where you mistake. Singlemann is not old; but never mind, we won't ask him.'

'Who not, pray?'

'I shall not ask him, at least.'

'Well, if you don't, I will.'

'Look nice, you going to a hotel to ask a man to dinner.'

'If my husband won't do it for me, I suppose I must.'

'Oh, if you insist, I'll ask him, of course.'

'Then I insist.'

This was why I wanted the subject of Christmas introduced. I knew Singlemann must in rather kind to escape his splendidly-furnished rooms for one day. Of course every one in this city knows the merchantile house of Demark & Co. Singlemann and I were the Co., and Demark—well, of course, he was De-mark.

Demark and Singlemann had roomed together when they were boys and young men. Then Demark got married, and Singlemann took the rooms he has now.

'Singlemann, old fellow,' I said when we sat alone in the evening room after the store was closed 'Christmas eve—I have a turkey which I want help on to-morrow. Come down to dinner.'

'Too late, my boy; I just promised Demark to go up with him to-morrow. His wife particularly requested it, and so I didn't like to refuse, you know.'

'Oh, of course not. Very nice little woman, Demark's wife is.'

'What,' said Singlemann, so fiercely and sharply that I was quite startled.

'I said Mrs. Demark was rather a fine lady?'

'Certainly I certainly!' said Singlemann, looking somewhat absashed. Then after a pause, he said:

'I didn't exactly catch what you said at first.'

The fire was slowly smouldering in the grate, and the shutters were closed. I poked up the coals and remarked that it looked a little like snow outside.

'I always feel a little queer and nervous on Christmas eve,' said Singlemann, evidently thinking about his abrupt ejaculation a few minutes before, and not heeding what I said; 'you mustn't mind me.'

'What's the matter, Singlemann?' said I.

'Didn't I ever tell you about it?' he said.

'No.'

'If I hadn't acted like a fool,' he replied harshly, speaking more to himself than to me, 'it might have been different, now'

I presumed that it would and so didn't contradict him.

'I thought you knew how near I came to getting married once,' he said, with an attempt at a laugh The laugh wouldn't come and so he took the poker from me and vengefully poked the fire.

'When I used to clerk here, you know Demark and I roomed away out Woodward avenue It was thought to be nearly out in the interior of Michigan then, but its different now. Every morning as I came down the avenue I met a young girl. There were no street cars then, and besides if there had been—well, we practiced economy, you know—that's why we boarded away out there in the country—but that girl—I didn't notice her very much at first, and Demark, he never noticed her at all. We both came down together. Demark was always thinking on business; he was—have a cigar? Listening is dry work; smoke and make it dryer.'

'No by Singlemann, you know I never smoke; go on.'

'I told you I was queer to-night. Did you ever notice how wrapped up Demark is in business? Business will be the conversation over the turkey to-morrow. I tell you young men nowadays—'

'How about that girl.'

'Oh, yes—she always dressed plainly, but you ought to have seen her. I tell you John, Young ladies nowadays think of nothing but dress, and yet with all their silks and feathers—'

'I know; Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like your Woodward avenue belle—in plain clothes.'

He poked the fire for nearly two minutes and I began to fear that I had figuratively put my foot into it and lost my glory.

'I think any one must have fallen in love with her, but I could never get Demark to see it. I never cared for any one before or since. I was completely—but what's the use of talking of that, I meet her every morning. She always looked straight ahead and never seemed to know that she passed the same two fellows every day. Where did she live?

What did she do? One night in December as I came up late from the store I was astonished to see my young lady—I called her mine—standing at a desk in a counting-room. Her hat and cloak were hung on the desk beside her, and she was evidently just ready to leave. The brightest light thrown on her fair face, and it never looked so handsome before. I stood before the window and gazed there in rapt admiration and, I may say, adoration. I tell you, John, I don't believe that people nowadays know what it is—'

'Well, did she count out?'

'Of course she did,' said Singlemann a little angrily, 'and equally of course I followed her at a distance and her white face flitted through the night as she did not even a bit afraid. She came to at last her steps slowly together, drew her cloak around her and walked swiftly to her destination. Demark claims I followed to protect her, but I—I—I followed because I couldn't help it. Demark knew this much—there is no use in shaking me.'

'I beg your pardon,' continued Singlemann, rebounding his grip on my shoulder. 'I don't think you care much about what I am saying, though. What interest can you have—'

'How don't fly off at a tangent in that manner!' means I want to know how it turned out. What did you say to Demark?'

'Nothing that night. You can't wake Demark when he once gets to sleep. Why, one time when we were boarding down on Jefferson avenue a fire broke out about 2 o'clock in the morning and I—'

'Well, what about this girl?'

'Oh, yes; next morning I unfolded my plan to Demark. It was the day before Christmas. I told him all about my discovery of where she was employed. Now, said I, 'she's anxious to get the accounts straightened out before the end of the year.'

'Evidently,' says Demark.

'Well, very likely she'll be there late to-night; now we'll follow her—you on the opposite side of the street and I on the same side she is, and you cross over and speak to her and try to make her take your arm, then she'll scream and I'll rush up and rescue her, and, of course, see her home and get acquainted.'

'Rather an ancient device, I remarked.

'Perhaps it is true,' said Singlemann, in an irritated manner. 'Young men of the present day are up to almost anything, but I never heard of it before; of course, it was silly—I guess I knew that without being told of it but nowadays people think—'

'So they don't; Singlemann go on with what you were saying. Demark consented, of course?'

'No, he didn't, that is, not at first. He got indignant at having all the disgrace of the operation and none of the pleasure, but I explained to him that he didn't care a cent for the girl, while I was madly in love with her, and conjuring him by all the ties of friendship, he at last reluctantly consented. You see, Demark never cared anything about girls, or cards either—he was all business. I have often said to him, jokingly, of course, that I believe that if—'

'Singlemann—go on with that diabolical plot of yours, and never mind Demark. I know him well enough.'

'Of course, you do. Well, all the way down to the store where she worked, Demark was saying what a mean thing it was for two young men to conspire to frighten the life out of a girl on the dark streets of a city. We got there at last, and she was at her desk. Ah! John, when I picture how she stood there—but there's no matter, I thought she would never come out—it seemed ages. I never could have stood it, only it kept all my attention getting Demark to stick to his promise, for he wanted to back out, now that we were on the spot. You know Demark is the very soul of honor. Why, when Best & Barbour failed, you know, we needn't have paid a cent, for they held no—'

'Singlemann do you remember that I know, the whole particulars of that failure.'

'Certainly. That's a fact, I forgot that well, Demark wanted to go home again and hanged me to release him from his promise, but I wouldn't and he stuck to his contract like a man—he always does you know. Well, just as the City Hall bell struck eleven'

'Oh, oh! Singlemann—keep straight now. Why, man, the City Hall was not built then.'

'That's so—I am telling a straight story for all that, clip. Some bell struck eleven. I had my face pressed close against the pane, but where she could not see me, and as the hour was tolled she shut the heavy ledger with a bang that made me start, and I heard her say, "Only an hour till Christmas," and she smiled. John, she looked divinely,—like an angel, only angels don't keep books, excepting the Recording Angel. But just then Demark began begging off again. She came out, and as before walked away.

'Now,' I whispered to Demark, 'remember your promise.'

He crossed the street without a word, and I followed, the girl. Demark acted his part like a man, or a villain, rather. He crossed back again and coming up to her, said:

'Madam, allow me to see you home,' and offered his arm.

My heart beat wildly, but I prepared for a rush on Demark.

She didn't scream—she hurriedly looked up and down the road and saw that apparently she was alone with this man. I could see by the light of the lamp that her face was deadly pale, but in a calm voice (the greatest voice I ever heard) she said:

'You may walk beside me if you will.'

Demark would rather have taken my knock-down than that, and looked exceedingly sheepish as he walked along with her, and I followed behind not knowing what to do, as this was a totally unexpected turn in the affairs.

Thus did the strange trio proceed for about a quarter of a mile, when suddenly a policeman and a lantern loomed up from a doorway he was examining. Like an arrow she sprang from Demark's side and grasped the astonished policeman by the arm with both hands.

'Sir, sir,' she cried, now in the wildest excitement, which showed how great up her fear had been before, 'that man has insulted me, when he thought no one was near—accost him,' and her eyes fairly blazed with scorn as she pointed at Demark.

'Madam,' said my unfortunate friend, 'if you—'

'Don't speak to me, you—you coward,' she replied contemptuously. Then suddenly and without a word she turned and walked rapidly away.

The policeman placed his hand on Demark's shoulder. Demark had been standing there transfixed, with his eyes following the retreating figure of the girl He seemed to wake up and fling the hand of the policeman from his shoulder.

'Come, my man, none of that,' said the officer.

'Keep your hand from me,' cried Demark.

The policeman drew his club and grasped Demark again, and I sprang to the rescue of my friend, but somehow I ran against that club and so, if you want the details of the scuffle you must ask Demark or hunt up that policeman.

Demark saw Christmas morning dawn through the bars of the lock-up.

I had no interview with him, and found him very much depressed. He didn't give a cent, he said, about the arrest, but the meanness of the action was what hurt him. I proposed to see our employer and have him go Demark's bail, so also have the affair hushed up, if possible; but Demark positively forbade any such proceeding, besides, it would inevitably result in the discharge of both of us.

I left the cell as directed as Demark was, and didn't know what to do.

I resolved to do an act of justice, however and accordingly went direct to the residence of the young lady, and rapped at the door—there was no bell.

I had no sooner done so than I remembered that I didn't even know what name to ask for. However, the young lady herself opened the door and put an end to my embarrassment on a thousand other scores.

I told the whole story, putting the blame strictly where it belonged. She never said a word during the recital, but sat there with that straight ahead look in her eyes and I half doubted whether she paid any attention to what I said.

She bowed me out without a word and I went home more depressed than ever. After thinking the matter over I resolved to go to our employer and lay the whole case before him in spite of what Demark had said, and by assuming the whole blame, as of course I ought to do, and accepting my discharge, he might get Demark out and keep him in his employ. It was no fun to lose a good place then, I can tell you, however, I put a change around mentally and went down young myself, who kept some note for an hour yours. I hear he's in San Francisco, and I guess doing first rate. I told Smyth where to hit their

'Never mind though,' said I; 'did your employer get Demark out?'

'As I was saying, I started down to see him when I met Demark himself. Why, how did you get out?' I said quickly.'

'Oh,' said Demark, 'I—I—I—' and he looked down and the remainder was withdrawn.'

'Then,' said Singlemann with a sigh, 'then the girl, said I, 'did you ever know

THE TELEPHONE!
PROF. BELL'S TELEPHONE having attained to such perfection, it is now offered to the public, confident that a trial of its merits will ensure its general adoption.
THE TELEPHONE
Enables any one to speak or converse over a single wire to a distance of 250 miles. The tone of the voice is recognised where friend or acquaintance are speaking
THE TELEPHONE
Has an advantage over the present system of Telegraphy, as any one may listen without being an operator, or in other words, there is no Telegraphic alphabet needed.
THE TELEPHONE
Dispatches messages with greater rapidity than telegraphing—as by telegraphing every letter must be distinctly made, and every word properly spelled—by Telephone each word can at be distinctly spoken, when it is distinctly heard at every moment of utterance.
THE TELEPHONE
Enables the manufacturer to talk with his factory superintendent the main office with the branch office, the house with the store, the country residence with the stables, or any part of the grounds, the mouth of the mine with its remotest workings, or in short any given point with any other point, although many miles apart.
THE TELEPHONE
Is neat and portable, and an ornament to any room or office. The yearly cost to the lessee for a set of Telephones—one at each end of the line is $20 00.
Any information will be given regarding their workings. lines constructed, instruments furnished, on application to.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.
A Triple Crown For Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.
"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS"
The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines were awarded by the Centennial Commission, Philadelphia, the highest honors for Sewing Machines in the market. Not only the Centennial commissioners recognize the W & W. the best Sewing Machine but the Judges of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, Pa., Messrs. Wm. McCulloh, C. Hilton, E. Yeomans, Mrs. Dr. Thomas, Mrs. E. Parker, Jas. Jr., of Peterboro: Mrs. Wm. Duncan and Mrs. J. Wilson of Lakefield, pronounced the new machine the W & W, the best in the World.
CAUTION.
I hereby caution all those having the W & W Sewing Machine of mine, that any person agent or other who may attempt to sell any other machine in my name, I will hold the party responsible for the same. I will thank those who have trade or no knowledge of the W & W, to report to me any attempt of those having the W & W Sewing Machine of mine, to sell any other machine in my name, and I will prosecute to the full extent of the law, any person or persons who may attempt to sell any other machine in my name. Those who have the W & W Sewing Machine of mine, and who may be induced to buy any other machine, will please bear in mind that I will not be responsible for any debts they may contract in my name. Those who have the W & W Sewing Machine of mine, and who may be induced to buy any other machine, will please bear in mind that I will not be responsible for any debts they may contract in my name.

NOTICE.—The Public are hereby cautioned against negotiating for a Promissory Note dated 1st December 1877, for the amount of $12, payable 7 months after date, made by me in favour of Samuel Clancy or bearer, as I will not be responsible for the same, having received no value therefor.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,
FOR
Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.
The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.
Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.
Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.
It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents' worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.
NOTE.—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.
An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye, Scurvy or Chronic Granulated Eye Lids, Sore Eyes, Weak Eyes, Inflamed Eyelids, Films, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.
THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is prescribed to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Ringworm and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.
There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.
The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.
They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn constantly to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.
They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, THROMBOSIS, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, HEART or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.
They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive, and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Those even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

A WONDERFUL REFORM IN FANNING MILLS
Farmers wanting to purchase a First Class Fanning Mill should call on
AND GET ONE OF THEIR
'FARMERS FRIEND."
They are the best and cheapest Fanning Mills in the Market, and clean from 60 to 100 bush. of Wheat, per hour, as fast as one can turn, and does not throw the large grain into the tailings. We have received a large number of Testimonials from different Farmers in the County who have used our Mills. They will speak for themselves:—
Greystock P.O., Otonabee, Mar. 12, 1877.—
MOORE & MINORGAN:
Dear Sirs.—This is to certify that I have given the "Farmers Friend" Mill a fair trial, and have no hesitation in saying that in my opinion it is one of the best Mills now in use for cleaning grain for seed or market.

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 3, 1878.

DUNKINITES, TO THE POLLS!

We would urge the friends of temperance and morality to let nothing prevent them from exercising the holy trust of recording their votes in favor of the Dunkin Act on Wednesday next. It is certain that the self-interest of the opponents of the By-law will cause them to exert themselves to the utmost in rolling up the adverse vote. No obstacle will prevent them from bringing out as many votes as they can influence, by whiskey, fear, cajolery, or even by money, should any of them be sanguine enough to think they can succeed. It therefore becomes the especial duty of the Dunkin Association to see to it that every vote procurable is polled for the By-law; that every facility is offered those who have no ready means of going to and from the polling places; and that no small consideration of ease or indifference shall prevent any proposed supporter of the Act from recording his vote for the honor of his County and good of his country.

Especially would we warn the workers for the act against any slackening of energy on account of an apparent laxity on the part of their opponents. Organization of the minutest possible kind and telling activity must be kept up till the close of the poll heralds a triumphant victory. No pretended dispair on the part of the Licensed Victuallers before the voting will prevent their summoning their full available strength to the polls and what their material views lead them to do must be more than overcome by the moral force of the Dunkinites, to the friends of the Act in Ashburnham especially we would say, "don't be caught by any ruse." It matters not whether the opponents of the Act in the Village vote or refrain from voting, we want to see its friends poll more votes in its favor than were given against it last week. Is this asking an impossibility of them? or better still, cannot the village show a clear majority of the electors to be in favor of the By-law?

It will not do for one municipality to depend for the grand result on the estimate Dunkin majority in other places, nor for any one man to permit the passage of the By-law by his neighbors' votes without the aid of his own. No matter how confident he may be of the result, no man should neglect the moral duty, or rather the proud privilege, of helping to bring about that result. Let no man look to a simple majority, but to the greatness of the majority in favor of the Act. Let each strive to the end that it may be said "Peterborough is the banner Dunkin County of the Province."

ABOLITION OF THE GRAND JURY.

A considerable outcry has time and again been raised against the system of trial by jury, as cases have arisen wherein gross legal and intellectual absurdities have been perpetrated by the "good men and true" chosen to pronounce on the guilt or innocence of their fellow citizens against whom charges of wrong-doing had been brought. Such cases as these might have been cited as merely the exceptions which go to prove the rule had it not been for their alarming frequency, which showed clearly that changes were necessary even in that "bulwark of British liberty," and that a reform might be effected therein beneficial to the commonweal and conducive to the safety of the liege. In Ontario at the present time only about one-quarter the number of cases go before a jury in our courts, the others being tried summarily by the Judge: but the prisoner has the choice of being tried by a panel of his peers if he so desire. This system for the securing of speedy trials introduced by Mr. Sandfield Macdonald, has been found to work admirably, and, as we have already remarked, three-fourths of the commitments are speedily and satisfactorily disposed of by the Judges, to the great saving of time and trouble, and the avoidance of a necessity on the part of a person perhaps innocently accused finding bail or going to prison till the assembling of the next regular court.

Jury reform has of late taken a phase which but a few years ago would have been looked on as revolutionary in the extreme, but which now seems to meet with general favor. This is nothing less than a proposition to entirely abolish the Grand Jury. It is held that it is a practically irresponsible tribunal, composed of men not accustomed to the weighing of evidence, and that in consequence its is apt to be led astray by projecting pity or cumbrance. At first the Grand Jury only examinate evidence which has formerly been prosecuted upon by some Magistrate; and though some of our Justices of the Peace are not just the men to place implicit confidence in where a criminal charge is concerned, the generality of Grand Juries could not with any show of modesty say much of magisterial shortcomings. In any case they can but decide for or against sending the case to trial. If they find a "true bill," then their judgment sustains the commitment; if they find "no bill" the accused escapes trial practically unvindicated, for a suspicion still attaches to him between the conflicting judgment of the Magistrate and the Grand Jury, the former being considered in the better position to consider all the facts of the case. It were perhaps better than that all commitments should go to trial, rather than that the accused should be liberated in a manner just as unsatisfactory as if he had escaped under the Scotch verdict of "Not proven," for that is just about what the finding of "no bill" by a Grand Jury amounts to.

Nor is the Grand Jury a necessity in the prevention of persecution by the sending of persons to trial on trumped-up and frivolous charges, for a more effectual bar to such prosecutions is found in a Crown prosecutor, trained in matters of law and evidence, solely responsible for his own acts, and having a professional and otherwise moral incentive to avoid error. The objection that an individual is more easily approached to be suspected than a body of men is partly answered by the professional position of the County Attorney, but more fully by the fact that his pronouncements would be liable to supervision by the Court and himself promptly impeached for any unrighteous act he might commit. Such a safeguard is impossible of application in the case of a Grand Jury. The temptation of County Attorney's to bring in as many cases as possible to increase their fees, could also be removed by paying them a stated salary. A liberal allowance could be made them from the saving effected by doing away with the Grand Juries, which are estimated to cost each county about a thousand dollars, or the Province over thirty thousand dollars a year.

Of course the prosecuting officers taking the place of Grand Juries would have to be men chosen for their ability and probity. They would soon exercise a beneficial influence on the character of the acting magistracy throughout the Province, as justices would learn to be more careful of the class of cases they based commitments on. In this way a much needed reform would be introduced, by the survival of the pittest among the justices of the Peace, and the commission of only men of ability to take the places of those who would be constrained to step down and out. It seems as though the proposed change is likely to cause less litigation all round.

A CANADIAN NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

One great complaint that has been incessantly made against the people, composing the Dominion of Canada, is that they are lacking in what is called national sentiment. The phrase is perhaps inapt; because it involves an idea properly inapplicable to the condition of Canada as a colony. Those who complain in the way we have mentioned do not intend to convey the impression that Canada has not a strong enough pride in the Empire of which it forms a part—and no mean one neither—nor do they accuse Canadians of a want of devotion to the national interests of Britain. The fault sought, in all kindness we believe, to be pointed out is rather that Canadians do not more sedulously cultivate an aggressiveness which will display to advantage their characteristics as a people. It may be that Canadians have been guilty of supineness in this regard. The writer as a Canadian will not attempt to deny it. But it is always better to err on the safe side if at all; and this we contend, the Canadians have done in this case. The circumstances of the country thus far have been such as to warrant a husbanding of resources, and the careful avoidance of any considerable display of what is so easily misunderstood for nativism. The brief but instructive history of the "Canada First" movement will sufficiently illustrate our meaning, and show the dangers the good sense of Canadians has induced them to avoid.

In a populace made up of so many imported elements, and among a people so young as to have not yet outgrown the distinguishing marks of a greatly divided parentage, it would be worse than folly to try and ignore these marks of English, Irish, Scotch, French, German; and other extraction which display themselves so plainly. Those who come from the old lands cannot root out from their hearts a love for the country of their birth, however strongly their affections and hopes cling to the land of their adoption. The children, and even the children's children of the ever-honored immigrant have a natural affection for the lands of their ancestors, inasmuch as they are lands with long and proud histories, wherein the imagination of youth delights to revel. We can readily understand then the loyalty which even our latest-born citizens bear the Mother Country. And yet that peculiar and paramount love for ones native land, without which we could not respect our immigrant population or look on them as trustworthy citizens, indeed those who are Canadians born to subordinate their pride of descent to an affectionate regard for the future prosperity and greatness of the land of their birth. That very regard however teaches them to avoid a policy which will set up a caste distinction between them and the fellows of their fathers, the ever-welcome immigrants. The latter, if they be industrious and intelligent, are the best friends Canada can have. They help to fill her vacant area and develop her immense natural resources; and instead of looking on them as interlopers, the patriotic Canadian can see in them only friendly rivals whom he is called on to emulate in all honorable deeds and energetic enterprises. This is the true relation between the native Canadian and his imported brother, not only in matters industrial, but also in the social and political sense. If he cannot hold his own in the lively struggle, and honestly earn by superior ability the honors he would grasp, he deserves to lose them. In no case let him cite his Canadian birth as a reason for his preferment upon one who is a Canadian by adoption; for thereby he is not only begging a favour, and thus tacitly acknowledging some superiority in his antagonist but he is actually dishonoring the graves of his grandsires. The Canadians are too nearly a race to descend to such tuition; and have too much natural conceit, erathem for the honor of their name as Canadians to seek to draw undue distinctions in any contest with mental ease, be the from whomsoever he may.

It is with no small degree of satisfaction that we perceive the prominent position being taken in the country by native Canadians. It is no great credit to them truly; and it would be to their shame were they not, brought up in and for the country, able to take the lead in all matters pertaining to its welfare. Time was, and that not long ago, when there was no native Canadian element to take part in the country's concerns; but as the years go on that element increases in numbers and mental power. The same is the case to some extent with the immigrant population, and as the country grows and the prizes it offers become more tempting the greater will be the number attracted to the task of competing for them. Thus both native and immigrant contestants are constantly increasing, the advantage, however, being generally in favor of the native element. This of itself will tend to allay those feelings of jealousy between the old nationalities which we see cropping up now and then in cries against "Scotch ascendancy" and "French domination." Men cannot afford to keep up those old animosities when by so doing they allow all the power and honors to go into the hands of native Canadians while they are nursing their old-world feuds. Therefore the very best way to cultivate a "national sentiment" is for the young Canadians to come manfully to the front, not pleading their nativity, but relying on their ability, and thus prove conclusively to their brethern from beyond the sea that they must forget their old-time differences if they would take a prominent part in the conduct of Canadian affairs.

OPINIONS FROM THREE CITIES.

The Ottawa Citizen is satisfied that the Toronto & Ottawa Railway will yet be constructed, and only regrets that the enterprise has now been indefinitely postponed.

The Montreal Star cannot but think, that the defeat will not be permanent. The two leading Toronto journals, and the great majority of the wholesale merchants, are in favour of the road, and with such support a fresh campaign on its behalf will be organized, and interested opposition be met by very active work in favor of the road.

The Toronto Leader says:—The main advantage consequent upon the building of the road would be seen in the development of the country along the track. Hence we trust that at the coming session of the Local Assembly the Government will be asked for a liberal donation to the line. The members from the various sections of the country influenced by the projected line will, we trust, unite and make a combined effort to obtain the substantial aid of the Government in the matter. In due time this city will no doubt be again asked for a grant, and the next time we have no doubt the vote on Thursday will be reversed.

Lennox and Addington Division Grange Patrons of Husbandry, has passed a resolution expressing regret at the action of the Counties Council in granting a vote on a by-law for the repeal of the Dunkin Act, and pledging the Grange members individually and collectively to do all in their power to aid the temperance organizations in supporting the Dunkin Act.

Several assessment rolls in Simcoe County were overhauled recently before Judge Ardagh, who made an important declaration to which we direct the special attention of Assessors and Municipal Councils. He said "that such descriptions as 'part of the west half of lot 14 in the 2nd Con.,' and such like, were perfectly useless." The frontage of a broken piece of land, together with its distance from one corner of the lot must be given, —otherwise the party would be disfranchised, as the assessment would not be according to law.

In the Quebec West election the government candidate was Mr. Murphy, and the opposition candidate, Mr. Allayn, Q. C. The latter was elected by a majority of 41 though the Conservatives had at the former election carried the constituency by 247 votes, and elected their candidates on two previous occasions by acclamation. A correspondent in last weeks' Review tries to apologise for the close vote the other day by the statement that "both gentlemen are of the same politics." If this be so, why did the Tory roughs on the night of the election celebrate their victory by smashing windows in the houses of prominent Reformers, and at tacking a newspaper office of pronounced Liberal views? Better not try excuses at all.

There was a time when the Mail and its echoes throughout the country were severely facetious at the expense, as they supposed, of Mr. A. McKellar, M. P. P., since appointed Sheriff of Wentworth. He was one of those whom the Mail took delight in "stabbing under the fifth rib", as the proprietor of that delectable sheet put it. If there could be any excuse for these personal attacks when Mr. McKellar was in public life, there can be none now that he has retired from the political arena. Yet, some of the Tory journals seem to have nothing better to fill their columns with than references to "Archie McKellar" and his "fall ploughing." Such sheets surely have a poor opinion of the intelligence of their readers, and particularly of the forbearance of those who belong to the class that engages in "fall ploughing"

DUNKIN IN NORTH MONAGHAN.

The friends of Temperance in this township have been greatly strengthened by the labors of Mr. Knowlton during the past week, when crowded meetings were held at the Town Hall, and at Bailey's School House. Mr. Collins the Reeve occupying the chair on both occasions.

Mr. Knowlton's fame as a Temperance advocate had preceded him and right well indeed did he sustain it. The discourses were delivered in a manner which forcibly showed how earnest the speaker was on a theme so well calculated to arouse the feelings of our common humanity. The demoralizing result of the licensing system was portrayed in a manner which evidently made a deep impression on the audience and which will, we doubt not, produce fruit in due season. At considerable length he referred to the reports calculated respecting the failure of the measure in Prince Edward, Gray and Bruce, combatting their truthfulness, and showing conclusively that such was not the case, that on the whole the prospects were favorable and he considered the "Dunkin Bill"—taken in connection with the "Ontario Act"—by-far the best legislation yet offered for the suppression of intemperance in the Dominion. His tribute to the temperance men of the Queen's Dominion—that the Queen's street liquor business with the regular trade of the county, rather than call it the Queen's traffic. Take for example the desk before him. When the material from which it was made was cut down in the forest, the value was enhanced when sawn into boards—still more so when planed; and so on through each successive step in the manufacture—but not so in the other, every drink taken is bringing the unfortunate votary down—down down—till not unfrequently the gaol, penitentiary or the gallows follows, and written over the tomb is the horrible inscription, "No drunkard shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven." He concluded pathetic and eloquent addresses by asking the electors to weigh the measure well, and hoped the result would be that on the 9th of January, their votes would be recorded in favor of the measure, and that such a majority to be heaped up in its favor not only in this township, but throughout the entire county, as to show our legislators that the good old county of Peterborough was in earnest in a matter of such paramount importance as the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Mr. Dumble, in a few well chosen sentences showed the silliness of the cry raised, that the measure now before them deprived the poor man of his rights; he rather thought it protected him,, as few of that class could earn more than $1.00 per day in 300 days in the year; taking from thu rent, feel and clothing, &c., but $150 remained, which divided amongst an ordinary sized family would only leave 2½cts per meal for each, which he thought did not admit of any cts being passed over the counter for drink. Mr. Dumble strongly advocated the benefits likely to result from the measure and the protection it afforded to the rising generation.

The Rev. Mr. Bennett of Springville in a very practical manner referred to the different classes of persons in favor of and against the measure, expressed the pleasure it had afforded him to hear Mr. K's able advocacy of the measure now before the electors of the county, pointed out how much might depend on a single vote, noticed several instances both civil and ecclesiastical when measures were carried by a majority of one, and hoped that each voter in the municipality would in view of what he had stated, act as if on himself alone depended the victory. He moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Knowlton which was seconded by Mr. Wood, and carried unanimously. Mr. Knowlton suitably acknowledged the kindness of the meeting in so warmly and heartily recognizing his humble efforts in the suppression of a traffic which had produced such fearful results. He thanked them for the very patient and attentive hearing he had received and hoped that their highest anticipations would as in the Town of Peterborough, be more than realised.

Mr. Knowlton we believe has been blamed by some for over warmth in discussing the subject but in view of the injury it had inflicted on himself and society how could he otherwise than feel strongly when it flashed before him the miseries and scandals that blighthed our young country, withering the best affections of the heart degrading natures that were generous to a fault before the level of the brute creation, making earthly pandemoniums of homes which should be happy, dooming their helpless inmates, as Ryan—to life long imprisonment, Williams and many others to the scaffold: giving criminals to our jails, paupers to every community, preventing our prosperity, and every where producing misery. Surely in view of his, and much more that might be stated, to exaggerate its evils would be impossible. Their enormity transcends the force of language. The squalid children, the shattered frame, the quick decay, the delirous agony, the despairing deathbed and the paupers grave, are surely sufficient to arouse natures even less sensitive than Mr. Knowlton's. The proceedings terminated by singing the Doxology and Mr. Bennett pronouncing the Benediction.—Com.

THE PRIVILEGES OF PARLIAMENT.

From the Toronto Tribune.

Among the charges recently formulated against the Government is one which owes its paternity to the Mail, that Ministers have violated the privileges of Parliament by granting an amnesty to O'Donoghue which Parliament had refused. The plea was so utterly childish and contemptible that, when we first saw it urged, we deemed it unworthy the trouble of refutation. But it has been eagerly caught up by the smaller Opposition echoes, whose intellectual pabulum is mainly furnished by the Mail, and represented as a serious violation of constitutional practice, and, least anybody should be deceived by the specious reasons urged for such an absurd consideration, we submit a few remarks to put the question in its proper light before the public.

To begin with, Parliament did not refuse amnesty, and has no right either to refuse or grant it. Amnesty or pardon is the prerogative of the Crown, and parliament, just as the most abject subject of the realm, has simply the power to solicit the Crown,—to petition—in favor of this, that, or the other mitigation of the rigours of legal penalties. When the Home Secretary, in England, or the Minister of Justice, in Canada, is approached with recommendations of juries, suggestions of Judges, and petitions of kind hearted citizens, for mitigation of punishment, he may consult his colleagues—he may go out of his way to obtain extrajudicial opinions from those whom he deems exceptionally "learned in the law"—before he acts upon these petitions, or suggestions; but it is not on record that he has ever consulted parliament, as to whether any culprit should be pardoned or reprieved. The reprieve, the amnesty, the pardon, are purely Executive Acts, and Parliament has no power over them except this—it can censure the Ministry which recommended the exercise, or the withholding, of the Royal clemency. This is the whole extent of its powers and prerogatives in the matter, and if the Mail has taken good ground, then it is evidently the duty of the Opposition to move a vote of censure on the Government for having granted amnesty to O'Donoghue, in the very terms in which they themselves had asked for it, last spring! It is to this ridiculous pass that the logic of the Mail has reduced its party, and we are surprised that the lesser lights of the Opposition press, did not see the absurdity of the assumption and let it pass with discreet silence.

But it is not even true that Parliame a refused amnesty at the bidding of the Government. The truth is, that Parliament refused to pass a vote of want of confidence in amendment to the motion for going into Committee of Supply. By doing so, it did, constructively, refuse to ask, at that time, for O'Donoghue's amnesty, because to have preferred such a request then would have been to turn out the Government. Everyone who knows anything of Parliamentary practice, knows this; and it is enough to excite the warmest indignation to see intelligent journalists addressing intelligent readers, on the evident assumption that those readers are so ignorant as not to know that the vote on Costigan's motion was a purely party vote—neither intended, nor framed, for the purpose of doing him any good, but merely with the design of embarrassing the Government and estranging the Irish vote. The party for whom Mr. Costigan has played cat's paw—O'Donoghue being the nut in the fire—has promoted a little too much on the quietness and the gullibility of the Irish. But the humbug has been exposed, and forms the instigation of all the Queer organs

A GUDE NEW YEAR.

A gude New Year to one an' a',
An' many may ye see;
An' many o' the years to come,
Be happy may ye be!
An' may ye ne'er ha'e cause to mourn,
To sigh or shed a tear;
To speed ye' d, bairn grey ey' ance', a heartfu' gude New Year!

Oh, time flies fast; he wiuna wait, my frien', for you or me;
He works his wonders day by day, and onward still doth flee.
Oh, who can tell when like ane I see nae happy new
Wi' mony cheery, an' merry ha, amither gude New Year?

We 1ove hale-hairit bonn peppy jeep—we ran about the braes;
In yon we sat, beneath the tree, we spent our early days.
We ran about the burnie's side, the spot will aye be dear;
An' times that tend to meet us there will think on many a year.

Now let us hope our years may be as gude as they have been;
And may we ever again enjoy one day anaysom as we've seen.
And let us wish that ane an' a', our friends baith far and near,
May ave enjoy in times to come a hearty gude New Year.

LOCAL NEWS

Fish!—Ladies who love to make good bread, tea-biscuits and cakes, need never fail if they get their flour from Lake Fisher.

Presentation.—Mr. John Cluff, in charge of the weave-room of the Auburn Woollen Mills, was lately presented with a handsome butter-cooler by the employees under him, as a token of their esteem.

Dunkin Act in Apsley.—The voting on the Dunkin Act in the municipality of Burleigh, &c., took place last Friday in Apsley. The By-law was sustained by a majority of 30; the vote being —Mays, 94; Nays, 32.

Presentation to Mr. Galletly.—On Christmas Eve Mr. B. D. Galletly was presented with an address and a purse containing $30 by the congregation of St. Paul's Church, of which he has been for a number of years Precentor.

New Year's Day passed off very quietly there being no attempts whatever going on in town except skating, driving, and the New Year's calls. A game of curling was played on the pond at Whyte's foundry between two picked sides.

Resigned.—Mr. James Scanlon has resigned his position as teacher in the Public School, having accepted a transition from Mr. Geo. A. Cox, as Insurance Agent. Mr. Scanlon made a good teacher, and we hope the Board may be fortunate enough to supply the vacancy with one equally competent to discharge the onerous duties.

Mr. H. Carswell.—Last Thursday we received the following genial card from Mr. H. Carswell, which sufficiently explains itself:—

DEAR SIR,—I have just returned from Boston after a short visit to New York on Monday next. Every day is occupied until March, so I cannot (much as I should like to) visit Peterborough at present. I have received so many invitations from your town, that if you would mention in the locals of my being engaged for the winter, I should be much obliged. Wishing you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. I am, Yours, etc.,

H. CARSWELL.

Musical Society's Concert.—The Peterborough Medical Society's concert last Thursday evening was not nearly so well attended as it should have been, considering the object of the concert and the support which the Society deserves from the citizens who are interested in the advancement of classic music. Mrs. Bradley was well received and we learn that she will again visit this town during the winter and take part in another concert to be given under the same auspices.

Horse Killed.—Last Saturday, Mr. James Bragg, of North Monaghan, lost a valuable horse. While driving through town the front axle of the buggy broke, and the shafts falling on the horse's heels caused him to run away. By some means or other he came in contact with Deane & Sperry's flour ex'press waggon, the shaft of which took him into his breast, causing his sudden death. The loss is considerable, the horse being a fine driving animal and much prized by its owner.

Supper.—Last Friday evening, Mr. George Rowe, of Peasantie & Rogers, entertained the contractors and workmen who had been engaged upon the construction of his handsome brick residence on Macdonald street, to a sumptuous supper. Mr. J. E. Belcher, architect, occupied the chair. After supper a number of toasts were proposed and duly responded to by speeches and songs, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The Firemen's Band was present and enlivened the evening by a number of choice selections.

Young Canadians' Ball.—The seventh annual ball of Young Canadians' L.O.L. No. 1316, was held on New Year's Eve in Bradburn's Hall, when a very pleasant and social time was spent —about 70 to 75 couples being present—and dancing being kept up till long after the "wee sma' hours." All the arrangements were well made, and the committee of management deserve credit for the manner in which everything was carried out. A handsome pair of ladies' French kid buttoned boots, presented by Mr. W. J. Larmour to the best lady waltzer, was, after a very close competition awarded to Miss Martha Franklin.

Social Entertainment.—Last Wednesday evening a social entertainment was given by the choir of the George-street Methodist Church in the Lecture Room or basement of the church. The room was well filled with an appreciative audience, the several pieces being well rendered and were received with applause, and deservedly encored. Miss McMullen's solos were exceedingly well given, and we hope that we shall again have the pleasure of hearing her highly cultured voice at our entertainments. The other solos and duets by Miss McKee, Mrs. Chambers, Mrs. Scobell and Mr. Davis were rendered in their usual pleasing and happy style.

Masonic.—The following is a list of the officers of Corinthian Lodge, No. 261, G.R.C., installed Dec. 27, 1877:—

The Grocery and Provision Store.—Mr. Maxwell Hall, late book-keeper for Boyd, Smith & Co., has purchased the business lately carried on by Mr. Wm. Chrow, in Cox's new block on George street. His stock is all fresh, well assorted and selected with care, and comprises a large variety of mineral groceries, canned fruits, &c., also china, crockery and glassware. Mr. Hall purposes doing a cash business, and as he will buy in the cheapest markets for cash, his customers may rely on receiving first-class goods at low figures. His past connection and present business qualities commend him favorably to the public from whom we hope he may receive a liberal support.

Y.M.C.A. Lecture.—The first series of four lectures under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association of this town, will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Tuesday evening, 15th instant, commencing at 8 o'clock, when Nicholas Flood Davin, author of "The Irishman in Canada" will deliver his popular lecture on "The British House of Commons." As this lecture is very highly spoken of by the press of the Provinces, it is to be hoped that the Association may receive the support of the citizens in their endeavors to relieve their present indebtedness, in asking them for subscriptions, but by giving them value for their money. Admission to all parts of the hall 25 cents.

Worthy of Attention.—Mr. Lake Fisher has determined that with the incoming of the new year he will run his business on a cash basis, dispensing with long-winded account-books, dusty notes, and sad faces each only, except in special cases, where he will give thirty days credits to those who will settle promptly. By this arrangement he promises to give his customers goods from 12 to 15 per cent cheaper than can be had from other dealers who adhere to the credit system. His entire business will henceforth be done upon the principle of buying and selling for cash, and he is confident that he will be liberally patronized by every housekeeper, and Mr. Fisher, besides finding the cash system more satisfactory, should receive a large increase in his business by offering such liberal inducements. Give him a call.

Postponed.—We are directed to say that owing to the multiplicity of entertainments of late, Mr. Youmans has postponed the repetition of his concert, as announced for to-morrow evening. He is now preparing an entertainment on a grand scale, which will be given in a few days. Further particulars next week.

Entrance Examination.—The following is a list of the successful candidates at the Entrance Examination for Dec., 1877:—Edward Blackwell, George Bell, Bruce Brown, George Dawkins, Henry Dumble, F. H. Dumble, V. Eastwood, J. Emmerson, Albert Garnet, Jos. Garnett, C. Glover, J. G. Kindred, W. F. Kingan, R. S. Latimer, Egerton Millburn, John Miller, W. T. Pratt, Albert Stratton, A. B. Venables, J. E. Calnek, Jah. F. Wright, Ella Harley, Sarah J. McKee, Mary Soucie, and Hannah Sutton.

St. John's Choir Presentations.—On New Year's Eve the members of St. John's Church Choir presented their leader, Mr. Joseph McClelland, with an address and a large photograph of the choir, beautifully framed, as a token of their esteem and regard. The photo. reflects great credit upon Mr. Little, in whose gallery the work was executed. Upon the same evening, Mr. McClelland on behalf of the choir and a few friends, presented Miss Nettie Martin and Miss Minnie Pearce each with a purse containing sums of money. Miss Sophia Cook was also the recipient of two books of choice Church Music.

Temperance Mass Meeting.—A grand mass meeting under the auspices of the Blue Ribbon Club, will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Thursday evening of next week, 10th instant, when a farewell address will be delivered by Marvin Knowlton, Esq., who will give a resume of his work during the summer and and fall campaign. Dr. Oronhyatekha, of London, Past Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the Grand Lodge I.O.G.T. of Canada, has also promised to be present and deliver an address in honor of the occasion. The Doctor's well known popularity as a temperance speaker and his excellent abilities as a debater and lecturer, will, we feel sure, draw as large an audience as has ever yet assembled in the Opera House. Tickets 25 cents to all parts of the Hall. Proceeds to be applied towards the campaign fund.

MERE MENTION.

A Happy New Year to all.

What did you get in your stocking.

"The happiest time is now," says the old song.

The backbone of winter is broken, and the days are beginning to lengthen,

The less a man knows, the higher he tries to climb on other people's ladders.

Mrs. Stutt, a Peterborough lady on a visit here, had her pocket picked on Monday night —London Advertiser.

Well, Christmas and New Year's is over, and those who revelled in turkey now go back to salt pork—in other words, they pass from Turkey to Greece.

The Boston Post gives an evidence of understanding double entry:

Dec. 26, to cash	$50 00	By Christmas present	$ 75
		By profit and loss	49 25
Total	$50 00	Total	$50 00

The intelligent compositor is now in Detroit. He set up a congratulation the other day in the News, the signature to which was "Anxious." It appeared in print "A Quiet Ass." Then there was a situation vacant.

The feelings of a man a quarter of a minute late for a train can never be fully imagined, until one has had personal experience.

The road to wealth, where toll-gates are numerous, is sorem lots, thes escaping them.

The sleighing season—four sleighing—is over. Oh, dear!

'Know all men by these presents' this is the first paper published in Peterborough in 1878.

The man who has nothing to do in this world but amuse himself has the hardest job possible.

It is supposed to have been a forlorn bachelor who made the remark, 'Courtship is bliss but matrimony blister.'

The Torch is the name of a new paper just started at St. John N B. It is very appropriately devoted to light literature, and will shed light around.

The economic and philosophical man now waits until his friend has passed the remark, 'Compliments of the season and many returns of the same,' and then merely replies, 'Ditto.'

A man may be as good as a mile, but many a young man would prefer the Miss.

Josh Billings says, 'There is no man who needs so much watching as the one who is always watching some one else.'

Tramps who visit Peterborough will find the jail, comfortable and orgnaized.

A fast man behind a fast horse, with a drunken companion fast asleep on Fast Day, is about the lowest lapse of morals upon which the fast-idious can moralize.

An exchange sarcastically states that 'very few women have a beautiful throat hence her neck ruff is a most necessary ornament.' Rough, is it not?

One Newsboys were so successful on New Years Day with their 'Callenders', that they are 'now sporting sisters of the latest cut.'

People who talk during the performance at theatres are worse than cows on a very tender foot.—Mud.—They may be called the Hi-bred bovines of society.

The curling prospects are encouraging. The aspirant for municipal honors now smiles blandly and broadly; he inquires about your family, kisses the baby, stares at the hired girl, and is your best friend—until the election is over.

One of the compensations of the reporter is that he can never be taken in by a counterfeit one-thousand-dollar bill. Still there are very few people who would not like to occupy a position where they would be subject to that misfortune now and then.

The Christmas offertory in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, amounted to over $60. Vote for whom you choose.

MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS.

Candidates in and about Peterborough.

The nominations for Municipal offices for the year 1878, took place last Monday. The following is a report of the proceedings in both the town and the different municipalites in the County so far as heard from:

Councillors.—Ward No. 1.—W. Charlton, M. Edwards, Isaac Garbutt. Ward No. 2—Patrick Torpey. Ward No. 3—R. Allen, James McCliggott. Ward No. 4—John Shea, re-elected by acclamation.

Stolen Property Recovered.—Some time ago a span of horses with waggon and harness were stolen from Mr. Mason, a farmer residing in the township of Hamilton, back of Cobourg. One of the horses was found at the Carp, where it had been sold, and the rest of the property is being looked after. One of the thieves now beguiles the weary hours away in the Brockville gaol on a charge of sheep stealing, while another is in the city with Mr. Mason, trying the stolen property.—Ottawa Free Press.

An Astonished Irishman.—"Frank Canada!" exclaimed a newly arrived immigrant yesterday. "Why," continued he, "When I left Liverpool a fortnight ago, the weather was colder than it is to-day. We had not seen the sun for a couple of months, and here you have, at the end of December, bright sunshine and April weather. The fellows that got up our English school books ought to be hanged. The Canadians are pictured like Esquimaux, covered with furs from head to heel, but I don't see any of them." If our British friend will wait for a week or two, he may have occasion to revise his judgment with reference to the weather of this "blessed country, you know."

POLITICAL NOTES.

Reform Speeches.—We observe that the speeches delivered during the picnic season by Messrs. Mackenzie, Blake, Cameron, Mills and Huntington, have been collected in pamphlet form. They will be indexed and arranged so as to be convenient for campaign purposes. The price will be $10 per 100 copies Orders should be addressed at once to Mr. G. B. Fetherlo, 45 King-st east Toronto.

More Incomprehensible.—The Tory organs are excessively inconsistent in their wild attempts to make a "drive" against the Reform Government. Here is the Peterborough Review canvassing "another Reform plank gone," because the Local Legislature has not been called together till after Christmas, and also Mr. McKellar's celebrated reference to "fall ploughing" in connection therewith. Then comes the Belleville IntelligencER with an account of the fall ploughing in Hastings only the other day, proving conclusively that in deferring the meeting of the House to the date fixed Mr. Mowat has wisely considered "our agricultural interests." Grand Bro. Boswell completely —albeit unwittingly—takes the ground from under our Peterboro Tory contemporary. Next?.—Lindsay Post.

A Disinterested Opinion.—The Irish Canadian has for years been boasting representative Catholics of all shades of politics who would not have that boon to it; and has thereby inflicted an injury on the Catholic body instead of serving it as it pretends to do. It is, perhaps, the worst enemy of the Catholic body; but that, however, is a question mainly for Catholics themselves to decide.—Post

"Languishing()"—It is stated that the Cobourg woollen mills, like our own now steadiest Stratford woollen mills, have orders enough on hand to keep them busy for months to come. A local paper says: —The grade of goods manufactured is of the medium class of tweeds, and 650 yards are turned out daily. Over 90 hands are continually employed, and about $1,500 per week are paid out for wages." Would our Tory friends please let us know what manufacturing interest really is "languishing?" It isn't boots and shoes, it isn't woollens or stoves, furniture or engine builders, or implement making; really, we would like to know what branch of manufacturing industry it is—If there is any at all. We merely ask for information.—Stratford Beacon.

Orange Incorporation.—A correspondent of the Montreal True Witness thus alludes to the Orange incorporation dodge: "Orange Reformers, like the member for Kingston, have shown the hollowness of the game that is being played by the Conservatives, which is not so much to confer a benefit on the Orange body as to encumber the Government, and make use of it as a cry at the next election. For the many years that the Conservatives were in power in this province, the question of incorporation was never introduced by those who are so loud now in favor of it—but it was not a good card then to play with." The correspondent is right, It is nothing but a political card, like the clap-trap that has been recently uttered about O'Donoghue, concerning whom the grievance-mongers care not a fig while the 'Chief-tain' held the reins, but the moment the Liberals took office a dismal howl is raised! The public now understand the game pretty well.

THE LATE REV. FATHER COYLE

We regret to have to record the death of the Rev. Father Coyle, in Montreal, last Friday. He was for many years parish priest of Emily, and was well-known in Lindsay and other parts of the country. For some months illness and the infirmities of advancing years compelled him to resign his charge and he went to Kingston, whence it was deemed advisable to have him removed to Montreal, where his nephew resides, that he might receive proper care and medical treatment. But this was of no avail. We learn from the Whig that the rev. gentleman was born in Ireland, but pursued his theological studies "in this country, and was ordained a priest in Kingston by the late Bishop Phelan in May, 1847. He was parish priest successively at Winchester and Emily. The last was a very laborious mission, as he had frequently to go sixty and even seventy miles to visit the sick and instruct his people. Still, though very old and apparently feeble, he performed all the duties of the mission without assistance." Our Omemee correspondent writes:—"The remains of the late Father Coyle arrived by the noon train on Tuesday, and were followed by a cortege of about 160 carriages from the station to Downeyville. The interment took place on Wednesday. Father Coyle was revered and respected by all classes in the township."—Post.

Astonishing Success.—It is the duty of every person who has used Boschees' German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample Bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. For sale by J. D. Tully & Co. REPLY.

To Wm. Dixon, Esq., and others:—

Gentlemen:—In reply to the above requisition, I would say that I feel highly gratified for the confidence therein expressed in my capacity to fill the office of Councillor, and will accept the nomination with pleasure, and will endeavor, if elected, to discharge the duties devolving on me to the best of my judgment and ability. I will make it a point to see that the greatest care and economy is exercised in handling the resources of the people, and endeavor to restrict as far as possible the burden of taxation, now pressing heavily on the ratepayers.

I am, gentlemen,

Yours respectfully,

MAGGIE BARR.*

BY A. E. WINFIELD, HAMILTON, ONT.

(From the Scottish American Journal.)

Let Sweden boast o' Jenny Lind,
An' Ireland Carl'ne Hayes;
While ither country's proudly vaunt
Their tyric artiste praises.
We dinna grudge that each should hae
Its satellite, or star,
But prize the ane we lo'e the best,
Our ain wee Maggie Barr.

Her's are the sangs that warm the heart,
An' gar the pulses trill;
Devoid o' music's vaunted art
But sung wi' simple skill.
Gae hear her sing auld "Scotland Yet,"
Wi' a' its "honore three;"
Or "Doon the burn, my Davie lad,
And I will follow thee."

Oh! sweetly sound her wood-notes wild,
O'hills an' heather bell;
An' crystal streamlets dancin' doon
The glens and daisy dell.
An' when she tells her lovelorn tale
O' maiden fair an' shy,
Her pathetic manner wins our hearts
In "Cowdie thraw the spry."

Our bitter angels up abiest,
Wad for puir mortals mare,
Mean list wi' pleasure when she sings
"A forest flyrit hear my prayer."
Or when wi' ancient melodies
(Wi'ten Kerr in the theme)
Which lyrept's dauntless bard sang of old
By Bonnie's bebbit stream.

Awa', ye vain Italian dames
Wha try to gain repitition
By skirlin' oot your tyny throsome trills,
An' flirtin' whitterwhirls.
Ye think nae things gie music charms,
Its harmonies ye ken nane,
Ye canna sing the sangs we lo'e
Like winsome Maggie Barr.

AN ATLANTIC DINNER.

The Contributors to the Atlantic Birthday Dinner to Whittier.

'Mark Twain' was introduced by the chairman and spoke as follows:

MARK TWAIN'S FUNNY SPEECH.

Mr. CHAIRMAN,—This is an occasion peculiarly meet for the digging up of pleasant reminiscences concerning literary folk; therefore I will drop lightly into history myself. Standing here on the shore of the Atlantic and contemplating certain of its biggest literary billows, I am reminded of a thing which happened to me fifteen years ago, when I had just succeeded in stirring up a little Nevadian literary ocean-puddle myself, whose spume flakes were beginning to blow thinly California-inwards. I started on an inspection-tramp through the anesthesia mines of California. I was callow and conceited, and I neglected to try the virtue of my nom de plume. I very soon had an opportunity. I knocked at a miner's lonely log cabin in the foot hills of the Sierras just at nightfall. It was snowing at the time. A jaded, melancholy man of fifty, bare-footed, opened to me. When he heard my nom de plume he looked more dejected than before. He let me in—pretty reluctantly, I thought—and after the customary bacon and beans, black coffee and hot whiskey, I took a pipe. This sorrowful man had not said three words up to this time. Now he spoke up and said in the voice of one who is severely suffering: 'You're the fourth—I'm a going to move.' 'The fourth what?' said I. 'The fourth literary man that's been here in twenty-four hours—I'm a going to move.' You don't tell me,' said I. 'Who were the others?' 'Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Emerson and Mr. Oliver Wendell Holmes—and fetch the lot?'

You can easily believe I was interested. I supplicated—three hot whiskies did the rest—and finally the melancholy miner began. Said he:

They came here just at dark yesterday evening and I let them in, of course. Said they were going to Yo Semite. They were a rough lot—but that's nothing—everybody looks rough that travels afoot. Mr. Emerson was a seedy little bit of a chap—sort of—kind of. Mr. Holmes was as fat as a balloon—he weighed as much as three hundred, and had double chins all the way down to his stomach. Mr. Longfellow was built like a prize-fighter. His hair was cropped and bristly—like as if he had a wig made of hair brushes. His nose lay straight down his face, like a finger with the end joint tilted up. They had been drinking—I could see that. And what queer talk they used! Mr. Holmes inspected the cabin, then he took me by the button-hole, and says he:

"Through the deep caves of thought
I hear a voice that sings:
Build thee more stately mansions,
O my soul!'

Says I, 'I can't afford it, Mr. Holmes, and moreover I don't want to.' Blamed if I liked it pretty well, either, coming from a stranger, that way. However, I started to get out my bacon and beans, when Mr. Emerson came and looked on a while, and then he takes me aside by the button-hole, and says:

"Give me agates for my meat;
Give me emeralds to eat;
From air and oceans bring me foods
From all stone-and fruitolian."

Says I, 'Mr. Emerson, if you'll excuse me, this ain't no hotel.' You see it sort of riled me—I warn't used to the ways of literary swells. But I went on a swearing over my work, and next comes Mr. Longfellow and button-holes me and interrupts me. Says he:

"Honor be to Mudiekewis!
You shall hear how Pau Puk Kewis—"

But I broke in, and said I, 'Begging your pardon, Mr. Longfellow, if you'll be so kind as to hold your yawp for about five minutes and let me get this grub ready, you'll do me proud.' Well, sir, after they'd filled up I set out the jag. Mr. Holmes looked at it, and then he fires up all of a sudden and yells:

"Flesh out a stream of blood-red wine!
For I would drink to other days."

By George, I was getting kind of worked up. I don't deny it, I was getting kind of worked up. I turned to Mr. Holmes, and says I, 'Looky here, my fat friend, I'm a running this shanty, and if the court knows herself, you'll take whiskey straight, or you'll go dry.' Them's the very words I said to him. Now, I didn't want to scare such famous literary people, but you see they kind of forced me. There ain't nothing unreasonable 'bout me; I don't mind a passel of guests a-tread'n on my tail three or four times, but when it comes to standing on it it's different, and if the court knows herself, you'll take whiskey straight or you'll go dry. Well, between drinks they'd swell around the cabin and and strike attitudes and spout. Says Mr. Longfellow:

"This is the forest primeval."

Says Mr. Emerson:

"Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world."

Says I, 'O, blackguard the premises as much as you want to—it don't cost you a cent.' Well they went on drinking, and pretty soon they got out a greasy old deck and went to playing cut-throat euchre at ten cents a corner—on trust. I began to notice some pretty suspicious things. Mr. Emerson dealt, looked at his hand, shook his head, says—

"I am the doubter of the doubt"— and calmly bunched the hands and went to shuffle for a new lay-out. Says he—

"They reckon ill who leave me out;
They know not well the subtle ways
I keep. I pass, and deal again."

Hang'd if he didn't go a heap and do it, too! O, he was a cool one! Well, in about a minute, things were running pretty tight, but all of a sudden I seen by Mr. Emerson's eye that he judged he had me. He had already corralled two tricks and each of the others one. So now he kind of lifts a little in his chair, and says—

"I tire of riches and noise—
Too long the game is played"

—and down he fetched a right bower. Mr. Longfellow smiles as sweet as pie and says:

"Thanks, thanks to them, my worthy friend.
For the lesson them has taught I"

—and flung my cards if he didn't down with another right bower! Well, sir, up jumps Holmes, a war-whooping as usual, and says:

"God bids them if the tempest swings
The pine against the palm!"

—and I wish I may go to grass if he didn't sweep down with another right bower! Emerson claps the hand on his bowie, Longfellow takes for his revolver, and I don't rather a buck. [illegible] going to be a fight, and the monstrous Holmes rose up, wabbling his double chins, and says he: "Infidel, gentlemen; the first man that draws I'll lay down on him and smother him!" All quiet on the Potomac, you bet you!

Then they without they had been more company—and Mr. Emerson, coming at me and says:

"A worker would present all
That this proud nursery could breed!"

He was a whetting his bowie on his boots—so I let it pass. Well, sir, next they took it into their heads that they would like some music; so they made me stand up and sing 'When Johnny comes marching home till I dropped—of thirteen minutes past four this morning. That's what I have been through, my friend. When I woke at seven, they were leaving, thank goodness, and Mr. Longfellow had my only boots on, and his own under his arm. Says I, 'Hold on, there, Evangeline, what are you going to do with them?' He says:—"Going to make tracks with 'em; because—

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us
Foot prints on the sands of Time."

As I said, Mr. Twain, you are the fourth in twenty four hours—and I'm going to move—I ain't suited to a literary atmosphere.'

'I said to him myself, 'Why, my dear sir, those foot-sore and footsore sloggers to whom we and the world pay loving reverence and homage; these were impostors.'

The miner investigated me with a calm eye for a while, then said he: 'Ah, impostors were they? Are you? I did not possess the subject, and since then I haven't travelled on my nose de plume enough to hurt. Such was the rebukeishness I'd the moved to contribute, Mr. Chairman. In my enthusiasm I may have exaggerated the details a little, but you will easily forgive me that fault, since I believe it is the first time I ever deflected from perpendicular fact on an occasion like this.

FAMILY HATTERS.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.—To cure inflammatory rheumatism take half an ounce of pulverized saltpetre, and put in half a pint of sweet oil; bathe the parts affected, and a sound cure will be speedily effected.

TAN SKIN.—Almond and glycerine ice will speedily remove the roughness of the skin, both on face and hands. It will also render it smooth, white and pliant, and an occasional use will ward off further attacks of the cold.

QUESTIONISTS.—Light, air and cleanliness are the three greatest disinfectants known to medical men. With these and no medicine, it is said that small-pox has been most successfully treated both in Europe and here.

A NICE CUSTARD.—Scald a quart of milk and pour it hot on broken eggs. Take five eggs, throw out the yolks of two, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt, and add a little vanilla. Set it to steam in a close covered vessel for six minutes, then set it by for until wanted for use.

POMADE.—A capital pomade may be made thus:—Dissolve thoroughly over a slow fire two ounces of white wax and half an ounce of palm oil, with a flask of the best olive oil. Stir it till nearly cold; then add one ounce of castor oil and about three pennyworth of bergamot, or any other perfume you please.

DANDRUFF.—To remove dandruff, take a thimbleful of powdered refined borax (can be had at any druggist's or chandler's shop); let it dissolve in a teacupful of water; first brush the head well, then wet a brush and apply it to the hair and apply it to the head. Do this every day for a week, and twice a week after for two or three times, and you will effectually remove the dandruff.

RESTORING THE COLOR TO LEAVES.—Leaves may be restored to its original whiteness by first tracing it slightly, then folding it and sewing into a clean linen bag, which is placed for twenty-four hours in pure olive oil. Afterwards the bag is to be boiled in a solution of soap and water for fifteen minutes, then well rinsed in lukewarm water, and finally dipped into water containing a slight proportion of starch. The leaf is then to be taken from the bag and stretched on pins to dry.

CARE OF THE EYES.—Sooner or later our eyesight must become impaired. When beginning to wear glasses, use them as short a time as possible, only in decided light, or on minute objects, and then change the strain to distant or larger objects. By a judicious attention to these two points the age of the sight will be retarded many years. And, as sending is one of the most helpful faculties, we cannot be too careful of the eyesight, and should study how we may best husband its powers.

CLEANING ENGRAVINGS.—Put the engraving on a smooth board, cover it thinly with common salt finely powdered; squeeze lemon juice upon the salt so as to dissolve a considerable portion of it; elevate one end of the board so that it may take an angle of about 45 or 50 degrees with the horizon. Pour on the engravings boiling water, from a tea-kettle, until the salt and lemon juice be washed off; the engraving will then be perfectly clean and free from stains. It must be dried on the board, or on some smooth surface, gradually. If dried by the fire or sun, it will be tinged with a yellow color.

BEAUTIFIERS.—Next to frequent bathing, there is no beautifier like a good walk in the pure air, out of doors. I mean. We are acquainted with a person who is in the habit of slowly ambling up and down through heated rooms in order, as she says, to help digestion, and if imagination has anything to do with it, possibly her stomach is benefitted by that dead march, with shoulders bowed together as she would not think of walking if she were out of doors. Every woman ought to go out into the fresh air at least every pleasant day. If she can spend only a very brief time in the long run, and she will return from her daily stroll with a fresher cheek and a brighter eye and something to think o as she resumes her interrupted work. If her duties are so connected that she cannot spend the time to take all elaborate toilet, let her go out in any dress that is fit to be worn in the house. If she lives in the country, she will not encounter the curious gaze of fashionably attired promenaders, and in the city the quiet streets and parks remote from business centres are the places where few people are to observe; and there it would be most pleasant and profitable for her to go. Let her eschew the horse-cars as much as possible, and dispose of her surplus change in some other way.

KEEP ACCOUNTS.—If no accounts have been kept, a beginning of a better system should be made now. At the close of the year make an inventory of every article, and value them, and also put down the debts owing and due. This will show how one stands at the close of the year. By keeping strict account of one's business, it is not only known what goes out and what comes in, but by noting every expenditure and income, we can readily find where we gain or loose; foolish or needless spendings are thought over a second time and this naturally leads to avoiding them in the future.

CHEMISTRY OF THE CARBON IN PLANTS.—It has long been known that the green parts of plants are able in sunlight to decompose carbon acid and absorb the carbon. To decide the question whether plants can take up carbon in any other way than through their leaves, J. W. Moll undertook a series of experiments, which led to the following results:—Leaves and parts of leaves kept continually in a place free from carbonic acid never form any perceptible quantity of starch, even if in immediate contact, by other unchanged parts of the plant, with an atmosphere much richer in carbonic acid than the air. Hence the excess of carbonic acid that is at the disposal of any portion you choose of a plant, never causes the production of a perceptible quantity of starch in it but one part of leaf united to it, if the leaf in other in an sphere free from carbonic acid. The destruction of starch in a leaf in open air is not completely hastened when any other part of the same plant is in a vessel containing carbonic acid into the atmospheric air. The entirely cool at the contact of the leaves of the plant in the cool neither causes the formation of starch in a leaf nurtured from carbonic acid nor perceptibly hastens it in those in the open air.

CENTENNIAL LAURELS.

A Triple Crown for Wheeler and Wilson's Silent Lock-Stitch Sewing Machines.

"THREE MEDALS & THREE DIPLOMAS!"

The Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines were presented with [illegible] H. Knight, C. W. Gregory, Fred Pagan and L. D. F. Perez, Centennial Judges of Sewing Machines at Philadelphia in 1876, to be the best Sewing Machines in the market. Not only the Centennial Commissioners pronounced the W. & W. the best Sewing Machine but also the Citizens Committee of Philadelphia, Hon. W. W. Johnston, Wm. McCulloch, J. G. Hutton, R. Tyrone, Miss Dr. Knight, Mrs. W. Patterson, Jr., of Philadelphia; Mrs. Wm. Dickson and Mrs. J. Smith of Ashbourne, and hundreds of others too numerous to mention, pronounce it the best Sewing Machine, and recommend all their friends to call and get it, and not be humbugged by W. & W. "it is a perfect Rob Com."

CAUTION.

I hereby caution all those having the W. & W. Sewing Machine and have been using the Shuttle Machine to be careful in any other Sewing Machine to have anything to do with the W. & W., as there are a great many agents who pretend to be and remain all classes of Sewing Machines, and who have no connection whatever with the W. & W.

I would recommend those having the W. & W. Sewing Machine to call on the proper and only authorized Agent at Peterboro, who will supply them with Needles, Oil, Shuttles, &c., by forwarding a post card. I can also say to those having the W. & W. Sewing Machine that I am the only authorized Agent in Peterboro for the sale of the Machine, and that I am not connected with any other Sewing Machine Company in the world, and I am confining myself to the W. & W. Sewing Machine alone, and I am confident that I can give satisfaction to all purchasers of the W. & W. Sewing Machine.

A. McDONALD,
Agent for W. & W. Sewing Machine.

REPLY.

To Wm. Dixon, Esq., and others:—

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to the above requisition, I would say that I feel highly gratified for the confidence therein expressed in my capacity to fill the office of Councillor, and will accept the nomination with pleasure, and will endeavor, if elected, to discharge the duties devolving on me to the best of my judgment and ability. I will make it a point to see that the greatest care and economy is exercised in husbanding the resources of the people, and endeavor to remove as far as possible the burden of taxation, now pressing heavily on the ratepayers.

I am, gentlemen,
Yours respectively,

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, Bible House, New York City. 49-52.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

There is no one medicine in the world that will so successfully relieve pain and cure diseases as the Magnetic Liniment, (nothing like magnetism) used internally and externally. No family should be a moment without it in the house in case of accidents. Large bottles only 25 cts.; full directions for use on each bottle. Go to your druggist and get a bottle—it may be the means of saving your life. Prepared by J. Bower & Co., Perth. For sale in Peterborough at Dr. Taylor's Drug Store. 46-1y

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes. "Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost special effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Indubitable Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Films, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rheumans and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a c

CHANCERY SALE OF FARM LANDS IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

By ROBINSON.

Pursuant to an order made herein, bearing date the 14th day of November, 1877, there will be sold with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the Court at Peterborough, on Saturday, 19th day of January next, at Two o'clock P.M., at the COURT HOUSE in the Town of Peterborough, the following lands and Premises in one parcel, viz:

The East half of Lot Number Eighteen in the Fourth Concession of the Township of Smith, containing by admeasurement one hundred acres more or less.

About 80 acres of this land are cleared and almost entirely clear from stumps, the remainder being wood, chiefly with hard wood. The land is fine rolling land of good heavy clay soil, well fenced and in a good state of cultivation; there is also two log houses and nearly two acres of the cleared portion. There are erected on the premises a part log and part stripe dwelling house, 18 ft 6 in by 30 feet and a half, with a good frame barn, outhouses, stables, and other buildings. There are two good wells on the premises, also a young orchard covering about two acres. The property is situated on the main travelled road in Peterborough and within from 3 to 4 miles of that town, and is surrounded on two sides by good roads. There is a church on the lot and a school house on the next lot. The whole farm is a most desirable and complete farm.

TERMS OF SALE.

Ten per cent of the purchase money is to be paid at the time of sale, and that remainder in the usual month thereafter without interest, unless the sale is reserved but in case of default the interest to commence from the time of the Court of Chancery. Further particulars can be had on application at the office of the undersigned, Peterborough.

I GIVE HIM AS A DOLLAR.

Oh, do not cry, my little dear wife,
The wealth of compost does neighbor,
But bid me still be glad of heart,
And cheerfully follow my labor.
You must know, the last of those little debts
That have been our lingering sorrow
Is paid this night! So we'll both go forth
And shake hands with the world to-morrow
Oh, the creditor is but a thrice-fined dog
With the debtors' scraps on his collar,
While I'm a king and you're a queen,
For we owe no man a dollar.

Our neighbor you saw in his couch to-day,
With his wife and his flaunting dampster,
While we sat down at our cornelian board,
To a crust and a cup of water;
I saw that a tear-drop stood in your eye,
Though you tried your best to conceal it;
I knew that the contrast reached your heart,
And you could not help but feel it.
But knowing now that our county tare
Has freed my neck from the collar,
You'll join my laugh and help me shout
That I owe no man a dollar!

The neighbor whose chimney has dotted your eyes,
In fact, is a wretched debtor;
I pity him oft from my very heart,
And I wish that his lot were better;
Why, the man is the veriest slave alive;
For his destitute wife and daughter
Will live in style though ruin should come—
So he goes like a lamb to the slaughter.
But he feels it the tighter every day—
That terrible debtor's collar!
Oh, what would he give if he could say with us,
That he owed no man a dollar!

You seem amazed—but I'll tell you more
Within two hours I met him,
Sneaking away with a frightened air
As if a fiend had beset him;
Yet he fled from a very worth man,
Whom I met with the greatest pleasure—
Whom I called by name, and forced to stop,
Though he said he was not at leisure,
He held my hand each! so I held him fast!
Till he freed my neck from the collar;
Then I shook his hand as I proudly said,
"Now I owe no man a dollar!"

Ah! now you smile, for you feel the force
Of the truths I've been repeating,
I knew that a downright honest heart
In that genuine breast was beating!
To-morrow I'll rise with a giant's strength
To follow my daily labor;
But ere we sleep let us humbly pray
For our wretched next door neighbor;
And we'll pray for the time when all shall be free
From the weight of the debtor's collar—
When the poorest will lift his voice and cry,
"Now I owe no man a dollar!"

"THE IRISHMAN IN CANADA."

Extracts Referring to the County of Peterborough.

The following extracts from Nicholas Flood Davin's New Book, "The Irishman in Canada" in reference to the County of Peterborough, will we think be read with interest by many of our readers, as it treats of the early settlement of the Town and County, and gives incidents, many of which will still be remembered by the old settlers in this vicinity.

Sixty years ago the County of Peterborough was an unbroken forest. In the Autumn of 1818 a few pioneers found their way into the Township of Smith. The next year another explor ing party started for a region where most of them had drawn land and returned well pleased with what they saw.

Where there are now busy factories and well-lighted streets and all the life and wealth of Peterborough, prior to 1825 there were only one or two families. The most sanguine settlers were in despair. But during the Autumn of that year, the Honourable Peter Robinson, after whom Peterborough is named, conducted a large emigration from the South of Ireland. In the May of 1825, the hill of Cove, now known as Queenstown, was a scene of heart-rending grief. Bitter tears were shed. Bitter cries went up to Heaven. At first Cove appeared like a vast fair. More than four thousand persons had crowded from the country into it. Half the number were bound for a distant land which lay beyond the vast and dangerous ocean. The other half had come to look their last on daughters and brothers and sons. Gay ribbons were flying from the head-dress of the women. The men tall, stalwart fellows, the women with the glow of health and the beauty for which their country is renowned sauntered about, talking, buying articles for the voyage, and with them the old people, the grey-headed, wrinkled fathers, the mothers with a countenance in which the lines of tenderness contended against the furrows of care. The black ships are lying in that harbour which is among the most beautiful of the works of God. Monkstown shines white against the hill and on the heights opposite, which overlook the road leading from Queenstown to Cork, the furze were already yellow with blossom. The terraced curves of the harbour circle on either side of the harbour's mouth, beyond which the Atlantic beats into foam against the rocky bases of the green hills. No wonder men find it hard to leave such a country. It is like a lover tearing himself away from the women he has loved and loves. In that hour of grief and madness and tears, her eye seems brighter, her smile sweeter than ever, and her sobs accentuate with fatal charm every beauteous outline. The hour comes. The bells sound. The boats put off to the ships. Anchor is weighed. Those left behind pass over the low wall which fringes the long straggling hill commanding the view the ward. The emigrants press to the side of the ships. They wave their handkerchiefs, and as the ships move away, as well from the shore rises like a concert that is indescribable and beggars comparison. Some faint, others rush madly down to the water's edge. None turn homewards. Seaward they strain their eyes until the ships have become specks and disappeared.

On board the vessels, grief and sickness prostrate most. But one emigrant sits in the bow. He watches the waves rise between him and his beloved country. When the last shadowy outline is gone, to an old harp, an heirloom of his family, which may have sounded in the halls of Tara, and with his forefathers' prowess of song not wholly degraded, he pours forth in words a farewell to his country, in which he mourns over her misery and dilates on her tender beauty.

Late in June the vessels arrived at Quebec. The passengers, 2,024 souls, were immediately forwarded to Kingston. Those they remained five entire weeks. The weather was extremely hot, and many suffered in consequence. Some among them, Mr. Robinson, myself, proceeded to Smith's Falls, at Perth, and from there sailed and paddled a wonderful way up the Otonabee. On the 11th of August he embarked for Peterborough on board a Durham boat and landed there the next day at Otonabee. The remainder of the settlers were brought up in the same manner, we best making a trip each week. They were next taken from Cobourg to Smith at the head of the Otonabee River. The route lay through a country very thinly inhabited. The twelve miles of road from Lake Ontario to the Rice Lake were hardly passable. The Otonabee River is in many places very rapid, and this year the water was much lower than usual. The first thing Mr. Robinson had to do was to repair the road and make it fit to bear loaded waggons. In ten days so much progress was made that provisions and baggage could be sent over it with ease. Three large boats were transported on wheels to Rice Lake. A boat was built for the special purpose of being able to ascend the rapids of the Otonabee. The ague and fever attacked old and new settlers alike. The first party Mr. Peter Robinson ascended the river with, consisted of twenty men of the country, hired as axemen, and thirty of the healthiest settlers, not one of whom escaped falling ill and two of whom died. The immigrants, while waiting to be "located" on their lands sheltered themselves from the heat by constructing rude huts or wigwams built of slabs, bark, the branches of trees, sods and the like. The emigration was under the auspices of the Government, and Government rations were given out to the poor settlers, one pound of pork and one of flour for each person over fourteen years of age, half a pound of each to children between five and eleven years, a pound of meat and a pound of flour to every four children under five years of age. The provisions were brought from Cobourg or other places equally happily situated, and the rations were given out for a period of eighteen months. It is easy to see that persons with a large family of young children would have more food than they required. The excess of rations provided some with the luxury of whiskey.

The immigrants accompanied by guides went out in groups to examine the land and fix on the portions allotted them. To each family of five persons was given one hundred acres. Each grown up son also got a hundred acres. Contracts were made by Mr. Robinson with older settlers to erect shanties at the rate of ten dollars each. Roads were extemporised through the forest. Teams of oxen and horses were purchased for transporting the settlers with their effects to the spot where with axe and spade they were to dig the foundations of a civilized community. Before the close of autumn the vast immigration had distributed itself into homes, each family being supplied with a cow, an axe, an auger, a hand saw, a hammer, one hundred nails, two gimlets, three hoes, one kettle, one frying pan, one iron pot, five bushels of seed potatoes, and eight quarts of Indian corn.

But there were many trials yet in store for these poor settlers. Fever and ague which had assailed them on their landing in the country, pursued them to the bush. During the passage to Quebec fifteen of them had died. Before the spring of 1826 had well begun eighty-seven more laid their bones in the earth they had come to till. Scarcely a family escaped the scourge. Entire households shook for months so that they could not hand each other a glass of water. In a single day eleven funerals of immigrants saddened the streets of Kingston. In the remoter settlements, away from medical aid, the most loathsome devices of a desperate quackery were resorted to, and miseries untold and indescribable were endured. The people were perishing continually as though some offended God had discharged his arrows on a guilty race. But as the land was cleared and the soil became drier, liability to this depressing and afflicting disease diminished. At the present day this region is eminently healthy.

In the Newcastle district six hundred and twenty-one men, five hundred and twelve women, seven hundred and forty five children; in all eighteen hundred and seventy-eight were settled; in that of Bathurst a total of fifty-five; in Montreal, twenty-six; Kingston, two.

We need not be surprised that the immigrants were regarded with critical distrust by the older inhabitants. Were one to believe their slanderers, we should write that, while their rations lasted, they acted like many a young gentleman who inherits a small patrimony; that they put forth no exertions. They found it difficult to face the new order of things, and to gird themselves to work and exacting toil. But calumnies of this sort are abundant, where there is the least difference in the circumstances of sections of humanity, placed side by side. The ordinary human heart unaccustomed to generous impulses controlled by the egotism which would be amusing, were it not contemptible, is the narrow factory of misrepresentation. It is a solace to petty characters, to try and make themselves our superior in some small way to other persons. What, however, are the facts? From the third report of the Emigration Committee of the British Parliament, 1827, we learn that there were sixty lots in Douro, on which 245½ acres were cleared in 1826; 6,261 bushels of potatoes grown; 2,177 bushels of turnips; 1,777 bushels of Indian corn; that 80½ bushels of wheat had been sown. 1,159 lbs. of maple sugar were made by these settlers in Douro; 111 acres purchased by themselves, 18 sown and 23 bags. In the Township of Smith we find like results: 34 locations; 213½ acres cleared; 4,806 bushels of potatoes, 1,150 bushels of turnips, 637 bushels of Indian corn, grown; 40½ bushels of wheat sown; 860 lbs. maple sugar produced. Purchased by the emigrants, 6 oxen, 7 cows, 21 hogs. In Otonabee, again we find 51 locations: 186 acres cleared; produced 10,500 bushels of potatoes, 4,250 of turnips, 1,365 of Indian corn; 1,419 lbs. of maple sugar. 36 bushels of wheat were sown, and 4 oxen, 13 cows, and 11 hogs were bought. In Emily, of which we have already said enough, the figures are as follows:—Locations, 143; acres cleared, 351½. Produce; potatoes 22,2000 bushels, turnips 1,700, Indian corn 32, 442; maple sugar 3,280 lbs.; sown, 44½ bushels wheat; bought, 6 oxen, 10 cows, 47 hogs. For Ennismore, the figures are equally eloquent. Locations 47; acres cleared 125; produce 6,800 bushels of potatoes, 2600 of turnips, 70½ of Indian corn; 1,339 lbs. of maple sugar; sown, 44½ bushels of wheat; bought 6 oxen, 9 cows, 16 hogs. Asphodel: Locations 30; acres cleared, 153; produce, 3,150 bushels potatoes, 1,350 of turnips, 1,779 of Indian corn, 1,256 lbs. of maple sugar; sown, 21

Boys, who have been fighting nature and trying to like the taste of tobacco smoke, who hide the thing from their mothers, and are preparing for themselves a needless item of expense and trouble through life—resolve to drop it at once and forever. You do not need to smoke. The good is small at the best. There are some evils. Why increase artificially the number of your wants. Throw away that cigarette, and kiss your mother, or any one else whom it is proper for you to kiss, with a clean mouth and a sweet breath.

Men, who held woman's hands in yours before the clergymen, who vowed to love, cherish and protect them, to keep them in sickness and in health, who spend your evenings and your earnings in good part, in corner groceries and clubs—more or less reputable—who come home at late hours, with gruff words and repellant looks, to wife and children—resolve to go back to the old times of love, and hope, and found endearment, and never again to leave these hearts hungry for the words of affection and confidence, such as you used to speak.

Girls, whose precocious talk and thoughts are of dress, or beaux, of "impressions" to be made, of style, or friends' flirtations, who are women in manners while children in understanding and in years—resolve to drop the suicidal folly, and to substitute for such employments good and solid books, pure and useful acquirements, and the acquisitions that benefit you, as women, and fit you for the duties of life. The manners of a ballet dancer and the form of a milliner's lay-figure are a poor capital with which to begin life in an honest man's home.

THE DUNKIN BY-LAW.

From what information we can learn as we go to press, we believe the Dunkin By-Law has been carried in the County by over 500 of a majority.

A PLEA FOR DIRECT TAXATION.

One of the most ready bug-bears with frothy speakers (and we are going to include writers,) both in political and commercial matters, is the cry of "Direct Taxation." It would seem from the manner in which it is flung at the heads of the devoted electors, and the energy with which it is reiterated, that Direct Taxation is the very worst evil that could possibly happen a country. So popular indeed has the cry become that it is generally accepted, without question; and there is no doubt whatever that very many actually believe that a direct tax is about the worst conceivable evil that could be attached to an earthly state of existence. This being the case, it requires some courage to combat an idea so fondly preconceived, and so firmly clung to as an indisputable point. Yet when people begin to examine the terrifying cry, and try to attach some reasonable meaning to it they soon find that it vanishes into nothingness in the light, like any other unreal bob-goblin that scares the too credulous. For even while the frenzy is upon these who tremble at a direct, tax, they are subject to such taxation, and seem to pay it from habit, and with as little thought as they evince in their outcry against it in the abstract.

For reasons of example and comparison, let us compare the indirect taxes levied for the raising of Dominion and Provincial revenues with the direct assessments for county and township purposes. The principal revenue of the Dominion arises from a general import duty of 17½ per cent. In calculating the effect of this on the whole capital of the country, we must consider not only the impost itself, but also the interest on the sums absorbed in Customs, buildings and by the payment of salaries to an army of officials, the locking up of a certain amount of money by the necessity of holding goods in bond for long periods, and the greatly inferior quality of the goods sent through the Customs for sale at first-class prices to the consumers. Through all these causes there is a tax of nearly fifty per cent on the true value, which might be almost entirely done away with. Municipal taxation on the other hand is principally levied directly on a valuation of the property within the district over which jurisdiction extends. It is always a very small percentage on the assessment, and even including the cost of education, partly defrayed by a direct, and partly by an indirect tax, the proportion is instructively small when we compare township taxes, and the incidental burdens of their collection with the enormous amount held fast by fiscal burdens, among which the largest item is the cost of the transfer of a small portion to the public chest. So heavy a charge on capital has a depressing influence on all industries; for there must be a decrease of labor with every curtailment of the capital used in its employment. Productive labor is what the country looks to for the insuring of its prosperity; and the employment of capital in any other way than in aiding production is a mere waste. The simple transfer of money will not add to its amount. The protection of any industry only leads to the encouragement of capitalists to put their money into it at the expense of some other industry, perhaps more permanently productive. Nor is the producing population helped in the least by such a transfer of capital. They are rather injured because of the change; and the country suffers with them. The increased protective duty only adds to the popular burden, and presses most heavily on the very producers who should be as free as possible from all discouragements. An instance is found in the farmers of the United States, who complain that they work only for taxes, and have nothing over for themselves.

We have shown that an indirect tax more than doubles itself in incidentals. Would it not be better, then, to adopt the plan of direct taxation, such as it has been decried. The Dominion expends in round numbers forty millions of dollars annually. Divested of the cost of maintaining departments and officials for its collection, this could be reduced. But retaining the figure, there can be little doubt that the people would be less burdened in paying a direct percentage of their means to make it up. Consumers would not only save on the prices of all commodities; they would get the best articles for their money where they now get the inferior. A mine of capital would be released for employment in productive enterprises, and industry would be re-quickened in every branch that employment could be found for the non-producing officials who would be discharged on the change taking place. With a lessening of taxes and a cheapening of the necessaries of life immigration would be encouraged, and foreign capital would flow in for the employment in a country where a return was so certain. The agricultural, mineral and manufacturing resources of the Dominion would be developed simultaneously, and prove an aid and an incentive to each other, while the shipping interest could not fail to prosper, because of the certain extension of the carrying trade.

A direct tax for the Dominion could be collected very cheaply by the employment for the work of the same persons who collected the municipal taxes. It might even be left to each township to collect a certain percentage to pay to the county, including what the counties should contribute to the Province, and what each Province in turn should pay to the Dominion. By such an arrangement the township collector might do the work at a moderate increase of salary, on account of the increased responsibilities rather than increase of work. In this way the people would each and all know at a glance what they were contributing to the public institutions; whereas, now, they cannot by any possibility tell how much of their outlay really goes to the necessary administration of their affairs. So that in spite of the horror in which it is so generally held, Direct Taxation is not such a terrible thing; but is rather to be preferred to heavy fines on business transactions.

AN APPEAL CASE AFFECTING ASSESSORS.

Another and important step has been taken in the Court of Appeal toward a decision of the Lincoln election case, which has kept that constituency unrepresented in the Ontario Legislature for two sessions. Mr. Charles Rykert after being declared elected was unseated for corrupt practices, and a scrutiny of votes gave Mr. Sylvister Neelon, the petitioner, a majority of votes, in spite of the theft of documents from the Registrar's Court. Mr. Rykert then asked leave to file new lists of objections, and to attack the entire vote in the municipalities on the contention that the voters' lists were invalidated because of the omission of a description of the property on which each voter qualified and whereby he might be identified and his qualification be known to the officer holding the poll. This is a point of such importance, that Judge Ardagh, in a recent examination of assessment rolls in the County of Simcoe, alluded to the omission of an exact description of the assessed property as an invalidating of the assessment and a disfranchising of the party whose property was not fully described in the roll. He even pointed out the insufficiency of such a description as "part of the west half of lot 14 in the 2nd con.," and held that to make the assessment legal and the vote good the frontage of the broken parcel and its distance from one corner of the lot should be given. The great need of a minute and unmistakeable description will be readily perceived; but it does seem rather hard that an assessment should be rendered illegal and a ratepayer to a sufficient amount to entitle him to a vote be disfranchised through no fault of his, but simply because of an omission on the part of the assessor. This is the view Chief Justice Moss, in delivering judgment in the case, seems to have taken. He held primarily that the right of franchise is dependent on the fact of their interest in real property to a certain amount, and that the insertion of a description does not essentially affect that right. In the Lincoln election the votes to which wholesale objection was sought to be taken were received at the polls, and the best proof of their being based on good qualification is their standing the test of the scrutiny. The descriptions in the voter's lists in Lincoln were the same as those given in the assessment rolls, and the Chief Justice declared that even if he thought the Statute made it essential to the validity of a vote that the list should contain some description of the real property, he should be of opinion that the transcript of the assessment roll should be accepted as sufficient, as the Clerk has only the roll to guide him in preparing the lists. He concluded that the votes on which the appeal was made were valid. The decision of the learned Chief Justice was concurred in by Justice Burton in a short written judgment, and Justice Patterson and Morrison also verbally expressed their assent.

It is to be hoped that this judgment will have the effect of drawing the litigation on the question as to whether the seat in the Legislature for Lincoln should be occupied by Mr. Neelon or a new election called for the constituency. While it is desirable that the county should be represented, it is well that all legal means should be taken to test the several points involved in the Election Law as it now stands on the Statute Book. Lincoln's disadvantage is the country's gain, in the elucidation of the law. The decision of the Chief Justice though unfavorable to the contention of the respondent regarding insufficient descriptions of real property in the voter's lists does not render it less imperative on the part of assessors that they pay particular attention to the corresponding part of their rolls, on which the lists entirely depend. On whoever the expense of ascertaining the frontage of broken portions of lots may devolve, it is plainly the duty of the assessor to define the limits of such parcels in his roll. A production of deeds and leases will materially assist in framing such description; and as an examination of these documents may lead to a Registry office search, it might be well to have it determined whether the person assessed may be forced to produce an accurate description of lands for which he is assessed, or pay for the finding of such a description, or whether the expense when such is necessary shall be borne by the municipality. The township and the individual are both interested in a proper description in the roll; but still there is a possibility of a case arising like that we have supposed.

Says the N. Y. Sentinel:—So long as the duty upon a large proportion of foreign goods is virtually prohibitive it matters little what the United States may do in the way of advertising its manufactures or raw products. The Centennial Exhibition did little towards creating a demand for American goods, when it might have done much; and it is of small moment whether this country has an adequate representation or not at the French Exhibition, unless American citizens are prepared to deal with other countries according to civilized methods. Some day the farmers of the West and the planters of the South will perceive that the burden of the tariff rests upon their shoulders. In the meantime the country struggles along painfully, vainly endeavoring to create trade without employing with its primary requirements.

THE ELECTION

RESULT

We find not including [illegible] the latest Tory shouter; but on the Conservative parrot of this town has echoed the cry of the other party papers, in a measly characteristic way, we deem it proper to speak of the complete repetition the story has met with. The London Free Press, a short time ago published what purported to be an extract from a United States Congressional report wherein it was stated that Dr. Young of the Department of Statistics "had been improperly interested with Brown, Canadian commissioner"; and comments were made by which Mr. Brown was accused of spending money to buy the support and influence of Dr. Young in the Reciprocity negotiations. It turns out, however, that the quotation published by the Free Press, was taken from an American newspaper, and that the report alluded to did not contain any such language, or what could be so construed. This could not but be known to the person who wrote the article in the Review, yet he had the unfairness to say the "did not know whether there were good grounds for the assumption," which he pretends to consider a natural one. Something is also attempted to be made of "the passion into which Mr. Brown flew, when the charge of being 'improperly interested' was made against him." There seems to be no idea in the mind of the wiseacre, of the possibility of a righteous indignation. It was but natural that Mr. Brown should warmly repel the baseless charge. He very promptly met it, by telegraphing to the Free Press on the very day the slander first appeared, asking a withdrawal, or promising a suit for criminal libel. Against such action on the part of Mr. Brown, the Review need say little, for not very long ago it narrowly escaped such a prosecution for a slander against the same person. We happen to know that preliminaries were taken toward the entering of such a suit; but presume the insignificance of the publication of the libel in that case was the cause of proceedings not being pressed. In the present instance such is not likely to be the case, unless, indeed, the Free Press makes a proper amends, which, to its no small discredit, it has not yet done. Had it gracefully retracted its accusations when it found on good and sufficient authority that there was no foundation for them, its course would have been quite excusable, as a not unnatural mistake, though proceeding on insufficient data. The worst charge that could in such case be brought against it would be one of allowing prejudice to overcome judgment. As it is however, the defiant attitude assumed makes it appear that it still possesses some belief in the accusations it has made against Mr. Brown, or at least wishes to encourage a belief in the minds of the people that there is something in the charge made. This being the case, we cannot see that the accused has any other alternative than to institute proceedings. If this be the position in which the primary offender is placed, how much more despicable is that of the gossip that takes up the story after its denial has been published, and after the basis on which it pretended to rest is utterly false? The propensity to speak ill of a political opponent has become so great with certain journals that nothing but condign punishment would seem to arrest the policy of slander that prevails with them, and disgraces the press and the politics of the country. Actions for criminal libel in a few more instances would do no harm in restraining reckless journalism, and inducing a purer era in our politics.

ON DIT that Mr. Chief Justice Moss will soon receive the honor of Knighthood.

IT is stated on good authority that Lord Dufferin will not leave Canada until October next.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.—The Globe says:—"The Dominion Parliament will, it is understood, meet for the despatch of business about the seventh of February. Last year it met on the eight of the same month, and was prorogued on the twenty-seventh of April.

IN a letter referring to the Legislative session, the Lindsay Post's Toronto correspondent says:—

"Last session there were several scandals from an Opposition point of view to be investigated, and of course the Opposition made the most of them. The most important of these was the one growing out of certain incidents in the management of the Central Prison, and there can be no doubt that some reputations were damaged by the revelations that were made. The Government, however, was not implicated in any way, and as steps were promptly taken to reorganise the staff so as to make it more efficient we are not likely to hear any more complaints—much to the regret, I have no doubt, of the member for East Peterboro, who will be sadly in want of a subject this session on which to air his melodramatic and somewhat maudlin eloquence."

A few days ago an old man named Kendrick, well-known in Lindsay, was brought to Bobcaygeon in a waggon by Mr. Macdonald, from the Scotch line. He applied to the authorities, and wished the Corporation to take charge of Kendrick, who was sick, old, and infirm. The Corporation did not do so, and Kendrick was conveyed to an outhouse at Mr. Gaskin's hotel. Mr. Crabtree was then applied to, as the man seemed ill and unable to prepare anything, and Mr. Crabtree accordingly visited Kendrick, and suspecting that he was quite able to pay for his own maintenance, ordered the constable to search him. Upon this Kendrick said he would give up to Mr. Crabtree what money he possessed to be taken care of, and he accordingly produced a pocket containing twenty British sovereigns and $33 in bills, Mr. Crabtree, finding the man very dirty, ordered a fresh suit of clothes to be obtained for him, and had him thoroughly cleaned. Kendrick says he wishes to go up to Minden, where he has friends on the French line, Kendrick is the man who was charged with stabbing Alex. MacCarthy some years ago.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

(By Telegraph to the Examiner.)

The Third Session of the Third Parliament of the Province of Ontario opened yesterday afternoon at 1 p. m., when the following speech was delivered from the Throne:—

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

I am glad to meet you again for the despatch of business in connection with the good of the Province, and with the legislation which the public needs require.

I congratulate you on the abundant harvest with which our Province has been favoured, and on the improvement in business which has followed.

I am glad to know that amongst the industries to which this improvement has extended is our lumber trade. Home consumption having become more active, though the foreign trade has not improved to the same extent. The hopefulness and financial strength of the capitalists concerned in lumbering operations are indicated by the fact which, I have the satisfaction of stating, that notwithstanding the depression the revenue from our woods and forests during the year has been equal to what had been expected, and is not less significant circumstance is the high prices obtained at public auction for the new limits which, in consequence of the advance of settlement, it was found necessary during the year to place under license.

I am happy to state also that the revenue from the sale of public lands, and from other sources, has been equal to what had been anticipated.

I took occasion during the summer to visit some of the colonization roads and other public works in our new districts, for which appropriations have been made last year, and I am glad to notice that the expenditure on these improvements has been useful, both in giving needed employment to settlers, and intending settlers, and also in affording valuable facilities for the future operations of the inhabitants. It is gratifying to know that the outlying districts of the Province continue to attract an energetic and hardy population, largely from the older settlements. The number of persons and quantity of land located last year have been greatly in excess of the year previous.

It has been occasion for regret that hitherto the provision in this Province for the care of the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the insane, has never been fully adequate to the necessities of these unfortunate classes of our people, but I confidently anticipate that before the close of the present year we shall, with the completion of new structures, and the additions to the older buildings, now under way, be enabled to abreast, but fairly in advance of the demands so urgently made upon this branch of our provincial institutions. My official visit to the various insane asylums confirmed me very strongly in the belief that their accommodation could not, with reason or safety, be longer delayed; and I feel certain that such further appropriations as may be needed will have your cordial consent.

The subject of railway facilities has engaged the attention of the Legislature for several years, and the Province has year by year contributed largely, both from capital and revenue, to encourage and assist useful railway enterprises in view of the extensive system of railways thus already assisted, and in view of the increasing demands upon our revenue in various forms, you will probably be of opinion that special caution has become necessary in dealing with new projects, which cannot be carried out without public aid.

The immigration to the Province during the year just ended has been about equal to that of the previous year, and has consisted chiefly of the classes which are always needed; a few large capitalists who have invested their money in the Province at a good interest; some being tenants; farmers with means who have purchased and settled on farms; and most of the other immigrants of the year being farm labourers, for whom steady and remunerative employment was promptly obtained.

I have to congratulate you that under the amendment made to the law last session, the deficiencies of the normal schools in supplying public schools with trained teachers, have been successfully overcome by the establishment of a model school in nearly every county. I rejoice that an efficient and economical mode has been secured by means of these local institutions, for providing trained teachers in their several localities throughout the Province; as it is not to be doubted that upon the combined efficiency, and improvement of our educational agencies, the material progress of our people, no less than their well-being and happiness mainly depend.

I am happy to know that the recent act passed to secure a complete system of vital statistics is working efficiently; so much improvement has already taken place, that the returns from cities and towns already in accuracy and fulness approaches very near the English standard, while the returns from the rural districts are not far behind those from the cities. I anticipate with satisfaction and confidence further, and continued improvement in this interesting department of the public service.

Our people are giving constant increasing attention to the means of suppressing intemperance. I am glad to believe that the laws recently passed for the purpose, have aided in this good work, having in most place been enforced with vigor and success.

The general subject of the public health and the means of maintaining and promoting it, are exciting a general interest in all civilized countries, and I commend the matter to a share of your attention.

It gives me great satisfaction to issue the necessary proclamation for bringing into force at the close of the year, the revised Statutes of Ontario, the final report of the learned Commissioners, whom, during the recess I appointed to incorporate into the work previously reported, the public general statute of last session will be laid before you, their recommendation of a confirmatory Act will no doubt receive your attention. Though unnecessary and unimportant changes in the body of statute law, thus consolidated and revised are to be guarded against, still it is neither desirable nor possible to avoid making from time to time the additions and improvements which experience may suggest or the growing needs of the Province demand.

Amongst the measures on important subjects to be submitted to you during the present session, will probably be bills to provide for offenders against Provincial and Municipal Laws being put to hard labor when necessary outside the gaol limits; to place on a more satisfactory footing the relations of landlords and tenants; in certain cases to provide a convenient machinery for winding up Joint Stock Companies which have proved abortive or have completed the purposes of their incorporation, and to regulate the civil service of the Province.

A special case has been settled and transmitted to the Privy Council in England for the decision, of the long contested question of the legal validity of the award between Ontario and Quebec, and the matter has reached a stage which justifies the expectation that the argument and adjudication will take place within a few weeks.

There has been another unexpected delay in procuring a settlement of the important subject of the Boundaries between Ontario and the adjoining territory of the Dominion, the absence from America of the distinguished gentleman selected as third arbitrator, having made a settlement during the year impossible the delay has been made use of to collect further facts and documents from the public archives in London and Paris as well as from the records in possession of the Hudson Bay Company, and from various public libraries in Europe and America. The result of these and other investigations has been embodied in an important supplement to the papers already printed for the use of the arbitrator, copies will be laid before you, and the three arbitrators are believed to be now ready to enter on the arbitration as soon as may suit the arrangements of the two governments.

I have given directions that the accounts of the receipts and expenditure for last year shall be laid before you on the earliest day practicable.

The estimates for the present year have been prepared, and will be submitted to you, and I trust that they will be found to have been so prepared as to manifest a due regard to economy, whilst, at the same time, providing for the most pressing needs of the country, and for the efficiency of the public service in its various departments.

May your deliberations be characterised by wisdom and patriotism, and may they result in advancing the prosperity and happiness of the people.

THE EASTERN WAR.

AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

JANUARY, 7th.—The anti-war agitation in England is on the increase, and there are rumours of a split in the Cabinet, Earl Beaconsfield threatening to retire unless Lord Carnarvon resigns. The latter's resignation would probably be followed by that of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Cross. The Premier is said to be in favour of resisting, even to the extremity of war, the determination of Russia to settle with Turkey alone; but, although there is some talk of a public meeting to endorse Lord Beaconsfield's stand, the feeling in this direction is merely sectional and it is more than doubtful if the war policy would be sustained by the nation at large. Russia has communicated to the Powers the nature of her reply to Turkey, but there seems to be some probability that the latter will postpone any definite reply until the meeting of the British Parliament.

OPERATIONS AT THE SEAT OF WAR.

Operations in various districts at the seat of war have once more become lively, and several engagements are reported. The Russians have captured Sofia, but details of the occupation are wanting. Troops are constantly passing through Gabtz into the Dobrudscha—an indication of serious operations against the Quadrilateral, and the Russians will further strengthen their position on the Danube by occupying Sulina. The Turks have been defeated in an attack on the Russians at Bogova, and have in turn routed a Russian detachment in the neighborhood of Erzeroum.

A GENERAL ELECTION IS IMMINENT IN ENGLAND.

JANUARY, 8th.—The rumours as to the probability of a general election in England are gaining ground, and much activity is said to prevail among Conservative election agents. The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian reports a report that the Earl of Carnarvon has resigned.

Speaking of England's recent communication and of the negotiations respecting peace conditions, the Berlin Post says:—"Europe is not in a state to dictate to the right of Europe to make peace by the plenipotentiaries of the peace conference (now between the belligerents. The utmost secrecy is observed by Russia regarding her terms of peace, not even the Commander-in-Chief, it is said, being in possession of the full conditions. It seems to be admitted, both in London and at St. Petersburg, that the possibility of an armistice are on the decrease, though the Porte has informed England of its readiness to enter into negotiations with Russia, but has intimated that it did not think that negotiations between the commanders, as proposed by Russia, were suitable, and suggested communications through special plenipotentiaries. There are, however, difficulties in the way of the successful adoption of this scheme. According to a Vienna special, England has informed Russia that while she has no objections to the conclusion of an armistice in the manner proposed by Russia, she cannot allow a new European programme to be drawn up without her sanction. It is also reported on a Roumian authority that, Austria and Germany having declared against opening the Dardanelles to Russian vessels only, Russia has decided not to open the question.

THE CRISIS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

The Ministerial crisis which was threatened at Constantinople has been averted, and all the Ministers retain their portfolios Preparations are being made to resist the Russian advance south of the Balkans, although the report of Eschethy's passage of the Shipka Pass is contradicted by a telegram from the spot stating that the weather had become exceedingly mild, and that a two hours' cannonade had been exchanged with the enemy. Reouf Pasha, Minister of War, holds the supreme command in Roumelia, with Suleiman and Baker Pashas under him, the former in command of an army corps, and the latter of a division.

THE ATTITUDE OF GREECE.

Much uncertainty exists as to the ultimate attitude of Greece, as the Government are awaiting the meeting of the British Parliament before taking any decisive step one way or another. So long, however, as the present Hellenic Ministry remains in power there is little probability of the definite adoption of a warlike policy. The calling out of the second class of the reserves has increased the effectif of the Greek army to 35,000 men.

PETERBOROUGH AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

The scheme of building the Toronto and Ottawa railway being now ended, the people eastward of Toronto have got to take the matter into their own hands and have the road from Peterboro to Ottawa. And on the whole there is no doubt that this road will be the best for all parties. It will serve the Ottawa interest better to get rid of the competition of Toronto, and will serve the interest of Montreal better also. And I am sure it will be better for Peterborough and better for the people of the country between these two points. What we all want is an outlet to the ocean. All our imports come from the east and all our shipments go east. By building the road to Ottawa we secure a route by rail to Montreal and Quebec and purchases can be certainly made as easily and profitably at Montreal as at Toronto. We can afford to leave Toronto alone. Her people have, in my opinion voted most foolishly in rejecting the offer that was made them and they will find that it will not be repeated. Henceforth, when they want the road, they can make it. Our duty and that of the people to the east, consists in getting the road from Peterboro to Ottawa as speedily as possible, and, unless the people of Ottawa are demented, as were lately those of Toronto, they will do all they can to facilitate this work. By abandoning Toronto, some seventy miles of road making will be saved, having only about a hundred and fifty miles to be built if it be an independent line. If, however, it joins the road at Carleton Place, the distance will then only be a hundred and twenty miles. As that part of the road from Peterborough to Norwood will doubtless be used by the Grand Junction railway, this will, or should, effect a saving in the whole cost of construction of at least one hundred thousand dollars. Taking the whole distance from Peterborough to Ottawa, by our independent line at one hundred and fifty miles, the cost of the construction of the road should not exceed three millions of dollars. Taking all the Municipal and Government bonuses at about one million two hundred thousand dollars, and I consider this a fair estimate, there will be considerable less than two thirds of the cost of the road to provide for, and on this financial basis, there cannot be any difficulty in its construction. But should the road stop at Carleton Place, the cost will be reduced by some six hundred thousand dollars, thus having to be providing for a sum not much exceeding one million of dollars. I think this as a fair estimate of the cost of the undertaking and that it ought to encourage all parties to begin and carry through the work at once.

Then assuming this road to be built, and resuming the completion of the Grand Junction to Peterborough, it is not too much to ask to have the Midland road pushed through to Omemee, and then there will be one continuous line of railway from Quebec to Midland City, and then by water to Chicago and other western parts, thus making this in reality the Grand Trunk railway of Canada. Such a road as this would be more advantageous to Peterborough and Ottawa as well as to Montreal, and it is not too much to ask, under these circumstances, that the people of Montreal, and Sir Hugh Allan in particular should contribute liberally to this work. If they consider properly their own interests they will certainly do so. Thus, if the Midland can build a branch road from Omemee to Bobcaygeon, which can easily and cheaply be done, and thence tap the Victoria railway, our railway system will be complete, and Toronto can then look on and be happy.

PETERBOROUGH.

KANSAS.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I will again, with your consent, communicate through the medium of your journal to my friends in your county my opinions of Kansas and its prospects, as I view them. In the first place, we have been blest with more than a bountiful harvest, consequently prices are very low, for in the absence as yet of any railway communications nearer than 70 miles of us,—I am speaking of this county—our farmers have only our local markets to supply, and with such crops as we had the past year, the supply is in excess of the demand. Some even at the above distance prefer to team their produce to the railroad to market. But before another crop is around we expect to hear the "Iron Horse Snorting" through our city. The immigration for the past season has been immense—never exceeded in the annals of Kansas. All seem to be well pleased with the looks of the country. There is an immense quantity of cattle and hogs, especially the latter, fatted for market this fall. A vast number of hogs have died [of a disease known as the hog cholera; dressed pork is now worth only $3.50 per. 100 lbs. Corn is used in this city extensively for fuel. The weather has been very mild with the exception of a cold "snap" in the beginning of November, which lasted but a few days. With this exception it has been more like May than December; no snow as yet, but to day it looks more like winter.

By the way, I see your town and county is greatly agitated about Temperance, and I doubt not but the hotelkeepers are concerned about how they are to live when they are forced to close their bars. So much I would say, take a trip through this Western Country, and learn a lesson; for all through here we have some very fine hotels, all prospering and doing well, and such a thing as liquor is not to be found amongst the premises; in fact it is not part of their trade to sell liquor. In these trouble some and boundary [illegible] of a house, and are not [illegible] by drunkards. But still there is plenty of liquor sold; but it is solely in saloons whose business is to do nothing but sell liquor, entirely different here from hotel keeping. But I venture to say there is more liquor drink in the "County of Peterborough, than in half of Kansas," which looks very bad for the temperance principles of your county. Hoping you have all enjoyed a Merry Christmas, and a Happy New Year, and thanking you for your indulgence, I remain yours, &c.,

GEO. W. DEFRIES.

Beloit, Kansas, Dec. 28 1877.

TEMPERANCE WORK IN THE COUNTY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—As there is much interest at present taken in regard to the Dunkin Bill it might not be amiss for me to give you a brief account of the meetings that have been held so far, and I have great pleasure in saying also that at all of the meetings there has been a feeling manifested which give unmistakable signs that our people are becoming educated in the right direction. Mr. Knowlton who is conducting the campaign is meeting with good success all through the County and will at the close of the present week have gone over the principal part of the same Meetings have been held in the following places, Ashburnham, Monaghan, Lakefield, Young's Point, Ennismore, Warsaw, Grant's Church South Dummer, Norwood and Selwyn. At several of these places the Halls proved too small for the audiences assembled, and at all there were larger meetings than could have been expected when we take into consideration the extreme bad roads. D. W. Dumble Esq., has attended several of the meetings and is doing yeoman's service in the campaign. As Secretary of the Dunkin Bill Association for the county he has and is devoting much of his time to help to carry the measure. James Stration, Esq., the President, has worked very hard, and deserves, as I feel sure he receives, the gratitude of both town and county for the work he has done. In fact there are many whose names could be mentioned who are whole workers and are working well as will be proven beyond a doubt on the 9th.

I cannot close however without just mentioning Lakefield and the magnificent work they have and are doing. This village has placed itself high up in the temperance ranks, all moral and Christian thinking people. Their vote on the 22nd will do much in carrying the By-law on the 9th in the county. As the voting will have commenced before another issue of you valuable paper, let me urge upon your readers the necessity of united action at this time. Never before in the history of your county have you as an Electorate had a chance to throw the responsibility where it rightly belongs.

As the law now stands we are all to a certain degree responsible for the evils arising from the traffic, but if we by our votes say no license or in other words no bar rooms, even though it be sold, we place the responsibility where it justly belongs on the seller and drinker. Then let me ask all who have the interest of their fellow men at heart and who are desirous of seeing a higher state of morals in society to record their votes on the 9th in favor of the Dunkin Bill.

It is a duty I feel we owe to our children, and one that as fathers, we should be most willing to grant. If we leave them wealth it may take wings and fly, but if we leave them an example of sobriety, by closing up these places that can do us no good, and are often doing, us and ours harm, we show by our acts which are stronger than language that we have their future welfare at heart.

Then let us, even though it does cost us a little sacrifice, be willing to go forward and do our duty. Trusting you will find space for this in your valuable paper; and that on the 9th of January such a majority will be given for the Bill that all will be able to say that Peterboro' Town and County, both think more of the happiness of their homes and the advancement of moral principles among their people, than they do the gratifying of a depraved appetite for the money realized from the licensing of a traffic which seldom, if ever does any good, but often causes wretchedness and death.

I am sir, your obedient servant,

AN ELECTOR.

The above communication was received last week too late for insertion. We might also add that all the meetings held during the campaign, without almost an exception, have been well attended—a great deal of enthusiasm and earnestness in the cause of temperance being manifested—ED. EXAMINER.

LOCAL NEWS

Remember the Mass Meeting in the Opera House this evening.

Literary Association.—The meeting of the Peterborough Literary Association will be resumed on Tuesday next the 15th instant.

Personal.—Mr. Harry McNeil, an old Peterborough boy, who for a number of years has been residing in Michigan, is at present here on a visit.

Gunsmith.—The name of Miss Hettie Bunn, of Bridgenorth, was omitted by mistake from the list of names published in last week's EXAMINER who passed the late entrance examination.

East Peterboro Agricultural Society.—The annual meeting of the East Riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society will be held in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Wednesday next, 16th instant, commencing at one o'clock.

Sudden Death.—On Sunday afternoon last, about 4.30 p.m., while Mrs. Rule, wife of Mr. George Rule, of North Monaghan, was out in the yard for a few minutes, she suddenly dropped dead. The cause of death is said to be from heart disease.

The Band.—At the first regular meeting of the Peterborough Fire Brigade Band, this year the following officers were elected for the year 1878:—President, A. D. Browne; Secretary, J. Fraser; Assistant-Secretary, James Billington; Treasurer, E. McCabe.

County Council.—The first session of the new County Council will commence on Tuesday, 22nd instant, at two o'clock p.m., when all parties having accounts or claims against the County are required to present them on or before the first day of the session, in order that they may be approved.

Obituary.—It becomes our painful duty this week to record the death of an old, well known, and universally respected citizen—the Rev. J. M. Rogers, whose death took place at his residence, yesterday morning, at the age of 70 years. There will be a funeral service at his Church this afternoon at two o'clock.

Bad for the Fruit Trees.—The mild weather of the present month is likely to prove very bad for the fruit trees. In some of our exchanges it is noted that the trees have put forth large buds, and that leaves have formed on berry bushes. The result will probably be that next year's fruits crop will be a failure.

Our Almanac.—Owing to the unusually large amount of job work with which we have of late been favored, we have been compelled reluctantly to delay the issue of our almanac for a few weeks. As there are a few who have not yet sent in the "copy" of their advertisements, we would ask them to do so as soon as possible.

A Model.—Here is a model for composers of rules on the "beautiful." Its chief merit is its brevity:—

Soft and light
Pure and white!
On the ground
Not a sound!
Now we know
It is snow!

Bazaar.—The ladies of St. Lukes Church purpose holding a sale of fancy and useful articles in aid of the building fund, on Monday and Tuesday, the 4th and 5th of March, 1878. They earnestly entreat the hearty co-operation of all the friends of the Church, both in town and country, in their good work. Further particulars announced in due time.

Vick's Monthly.—Mr. James Vick seedsman, of Rochester, has issued the first number of his illustrated monthly magazine, and a beautiful little volume it is—worthy of the good taste which always characterizes Mr. Vick's productions. It contains 32 pages, with any quantity of bright and readable matter about horticulture and kindred subjects. Every lover of flowers ought to have it on his table.

The Order To Pensioners.—Blank forms have been supplied to her Majesty's pensioners in Canada to be filled up by the pensioner, who is to state in it his name, regiment discharged from, rate of pension, place of residence, and number of house in the street. It is presumed by some that this definite information is desired in case of a great war, when the able-bodied pensioners will be called home on garrison duty.

"The British House of Commons."—Don't fail to attend Nicholas Flood Davin's popular lecture on "The British House of Commons" next Tuesday evening, in Bradburn's Hall, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. The Association deserves the support of all well thinking citizens, and we trust they will receive tangible proofs next Tuesday evening, in the shape of a bumper house. The lecture is very highly spoken of.

A Cold Snap.—New Year's day ushered in a change of weather, the warm pleasant days being succeeded by a sudden descent of the mercury, which marked very near zero on Wednesday. In the Eastern provinces and in some parts of the States there were heavy snow storms, the intercolonial being blocked for several hours. The snow wave has reached this section once more, and the air is merry with the jingling of sleigh bells.

Keene Grange.—At the last regular meeting of Keene Grange the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Donald A. McFarlane, Master; David Moore, Overseer; Peter McNeil, Lecturer; W. W. Miller, Steward; P. J. McFarlane; Assistant Steward; Joseph R. Taylor, Chaplain; D. P. McFarlane, Secretary; W. J. Millar, Treasurer; James Lang, Gate Keeper; Mrs. D. Moore, Ceres; Miss Elizabeth Lang, Pomona; Mrs. A. McFarlane, Flora: Miss Mary Ann McInnyre, Lady Assistant Steward.

Masquerade Carnival.—A grand masquer ade skating carnival will be held on the Ashburnham Skating Rink, on Friday evening, 18th instant. The management are putting forth every effort to make necessary arrangements for the comfort of both masqueraders and the audience, and are providing ample seating accommodation. No skaters, unless those in costume, will be allowed on the ice until nine o'clock, when the ice will be open to all. As this is the first skating carnival in this town for two years, we fully expect a large variety of costumes and characters.

A Suitable Motto.—If our mayor can so clock hands hang together as eleven, and it valuable record—"Time was exacting and flatted yawned till her mouth felt large enough for a horse collar, and yet the young man had evinced no symptoms of speedy departure. "I've been working on a motto to-day," she faintly said, as she held her eyes open with her fingers "don't you want to see it?" He said he did. She brought out the article and passed it to him for inspection. He held it up to the light and read the cheerful sentence, "There's no place like home." The young man guessed he'd be going.

Butter and Eggs.—It is full time that some arrangement was made by our municipal authorities for a thorough inspection of articles offered for sale on our market, especially butter and eggs. Every house-holder knows to his cost that it is a frequent occurrence for a most villainous compound to be sold as first dairy butter on our market, while fresh and stale eggs are mixed in about the ratio of two-thirds good to one-third bad. These compodities command a very high price in our market, and it is desirable that an end be put to the fraudulent tricks practised by some of the dealers. The above remarks are copied from a St. Catharines paper, but they are just as applicable to Peterborough, as to the place for which they were written.

The Telephone.—The expected exhibition to be given by Mr. W. J. Fowler in the Opera House, on Monday evening on the workings of the Telephone, was a grand failure; about 10 or 15 were present, and after waiting for about an hour left disgusted with it. The gentleman in charge apparently did not understand the workings of it.—In reply to the question, "Is the telephone a failure?" Mr. H. P. Dwight, of the Montreal Telegraph Company, Toronto, says that a number of improvements are being patented, which are calculated to overcome defects in the present telephone, and that the improved instruments will give results far more satisfactory than any which have heretofore been reached. These present on Monday evening think improvements necessary before another attempt to ex exhibition is made.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The January monthly meeting of the School Board, was held last Tuesday evening in the school room. Present—The Chairman, James Stevenson, Esq., and Messrs. Edwards, Robertson, Loch, Shaw, Eccles, McClelland, Richardson, Dunsmore and Pentland.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Mr. Johnston, teacher in the Auburn School, asking to have his salary increased.

From Miss Clara Gamble, asking to be appointed to the first vacancy in the Public School.

From James Scullar, tendering his resignation as teacher.

From Thomas B. Braden, asking to be appointed to the situation rendered vacant by Mr. Scullar's resignation.

From J. George Hodgins, stating that the sum of $425 ($200 as Institute grant for last half of 1877, and $50 as Meaver grant,) had been certified to by the Educational Department as payable to the County Treasurer, and that the sum would be remitted as soon as approved by the Executive Committee.

DISPOSALS.

The accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. McClelland stated that Laidlaw & Co's account ($287.40) for the furnace in 3rd Ward School had come before the Building Committee but he had thought it best to send it before the Board. The furnace was guaranteed for one year, and was placed in the school until the 1st of March on trial.

Miss Gamble's and Mr. Johnston's communications were received and referred to the Committee on appointments.

In disposing of Mr. Scullar's resignation and Mr. Braden's application.

Mr. Dennistoun stated he had heard that Mr. Scullar intended resigning, and that the Principal proposed supplying the place with a teacher of penmanship.

The Principal said that the gentleman alluded to by Mr. Dennistoun was not in Boston, and consequently could not be engaged. Mr. Braden holds a second class Provincial certificate, and was, he believed a good teacher. Mr. John Braden would be placed in charge of penmanship and book-keeping, and had agreed to spend his summer holidays at the Commercial College Belleville to make himself more thorough in these branches.

Mr. Dennistoun—Would you recommend Mr. Thos. Braden as a teacher.

The Principal.—I would from what I have seen of his work, and from his success in other places.

Mr. Edwards thought teachers were required to give two months notice before resigning, except in extreme cases.

Mr. Dennistoun was of opinion that it was better to let Mr. Scullar go now. We had a competent man to take his place, and as Mr. Scullar was bettering himself financially we should oblige him if we could when we were not injuring the schools. Mr. Scullar was willing to give the two months notice if required, but preferred to be relieved at once.

Mr. McClelland was on the Board when Mr. Braden taught before. His then had charge of the room his brother now had, and had given it up to go into the insurance business. He had given every satisfaction then, and would surely do so now when in charge of a lower room. Mr Scullar would give two months notice if required, but he thought this was not desirable. Mr. Scullar has been a good teacher and did good work, but we felt satisfied that Mr. Braden could be engaged to fill his place with every confidence. He would therefore move, seconded by Mr. Robertson.—That Mr. Scullar's resignation be received, and that Mr. Thomas B. Braden be engaged to fill his place. He thought the motion requiring two months notice should be rescinded.

Mr. Dennistoun.—We had better hire our teachers by the day.

The motion was carried.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

The following report from the Principal was then read:—

To the Chairman and Board of Education:—

Gentlemen,—Your Schools opened yesterday, the 7th instant with the following attendance, which is large considering the exceptionally cold weather.

Collegiate Institute	141
Central Public School	455
South Ward	143
West Ward	106
Auburn	60
Total	905

The attendants at the Institute may be classified thus:—residents 89; Non-residents, 52.

I find in your Public Schools a large number of children whose parents pay rates for the support of the Separate School. Is it your pleasure that these be allowed to attend your schools free? It is in your power to impose a fee, or require the parents to be rated for the support of the Public Schools.

The sum of $100 asked for the purchase of a reference library and School apparatus has not yet been granted by the Finance Committe, so that the maps and tablets requisite for the equipment of the West Ward School are still to be supplied.

Your obedient Servant,
J. FRITH JEFFERS.

On motion the report was received.

COLLECTION OF FEES.

Moved by Mr. Shaw, seconded by Mr. Pentland,—That the secretary of this Board be requested to visit the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools on the first Monday of each month after the opening of the School for the purpose of collecting the fees from the pupils and report to the Board at each evening meeting.

The Chairman stated that a large number of these belonging to the Auburn School were supporters of the Separate School, although sending their children to the Auburn School. They were thus giving their money to the support of the Separate School and being educated at the expense of our Public Schools.

The Principal stated that he had brought the matter before the Board in order to have some definite understanding, as he had been asked about this matter on several occasions. In Windsor, Stratford and Lindsay the Separate School Board was affiliating with the Public School Board and placing both schools under the same government. Prominent supporters of the Separate School here had suggested a like action of the schools in this town, and he thought it might be worthy of the attention of this Board.

Mr. Shaw said he thought supporters of the Separate School should be treated as non-residents, as they gave nothing to the support of the Common Schools. If supporters of the Separate Schools wished to affiliate with this Board let them approach the Board in a proper manner, and any proposition they had to make let it be made through the Chairman or Secretary.

Messrs. Richardson and Edwards were also in favor of treating them as outsiders.

The Secretary asked for information in regard to his collecting the fees.

The Chairman said before the schools were free the teachers collected the fees and paid them over to the Secretary on the first of every month.

In amendment to Mr. Shaw's motion, Mr. Dennistoun moved, seconded by Mr. Richardson.—That the following words be added thereto: "And that the children whose parents or guardians, as the case may be, are supporters of the Separate School and who have withdrawn from the payment of taxes in support of the Public schools be required to pay fees as non-residents, in the Public Schools."

Mr. Shaw declined to have anything tacked to his motion, and asked to have the amendment put as a separate motion.

The amendment on being put was declared carried.

REPORT FROM MR. BELCHER.

The following report from Mr. Belcher, architect of the 3rd Ward School, was read:

PETERBOROUGH, Dec. 24, 1877.

To the Chairman of the Building Committee of the 3rd Ward School Houses:—

Sir,—I have this day carefully surveyed the 3rd Ward School House, erected by Mr. Wellington J. Rumbaugh, and hereby certify that he has faithfully performed his contract, and most satisfactorily the works therein, in conformity with the plans and specifications. I therefore recommend the acceptance of the building by the Trustees, and I would call your attention to the fact that the building has been completed within the contract price, without any "extras." Yours, etc.,

JOHN E. BELCHER.

REPORT OF THE BUILDING COMMITTEE.

Mr. McClelland, Chairman of the Building Committee requested as follows:

Your committee beg to report the completion of the Park-street School. The building is of a plain and substantial character, and is calculated to supply an element of accommodation much needed.

Acting upon the recommendation of the architect, your committee have taken possession of the building, and in duty so desire to express their satisfaction with the manner in which the work has been performed by the contractor.

And it is gratifying to your committee to find the work has been completed within the contract price, and without any claims, and that the whole work completed, including furniture, fence, sheds, &c., within the estimated cost, namely, $4,000.

The following are the items of expenditure by committee therewith:

Contract	$3,950 00
Furnace	287 00
Furniture, &c	235.00
Painting, Shade, &c	245 07
J. R. Belcher's account	139 50
Bricks	5 00
Carting	6 00
Cleaning, &c	13 00
Total	$4,880 57

Mr. McClelland explained that besides this there would have to be a well sunk, and no pump put in, and as this could be done afterwards, he asked to have the committee discharged.

In answer to a question as to the working of the fences, Mr. McClelland stated that he believed the Hunter Rotell wire fence right if the janitor appeared to understand it, and although it had not given satisfaction the first day, it was owing to some of the older children turning off the fence. He had instructed the janitor to put a lock on the door leading to the fence, and in future he was satisfied it would give satisfaction.

Moved by Mr. Dennistoun, seconded by Mr. Robertson,—That the report of the Building Committee be received, and that the committee be discharged.

MATTERS OF FINANCE.

Mr. Shaw, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, said the committee were unable to report in writing to-night. As to the grant of $200 for a library of reference, he might say that while the committee thought very favorably of it, still they wished before recommending the grant to go into matters of finance minutely, to see how our resources were, and avoid adding ourselves with too much debt. There were supplies—maps, tablets, &c.,—wanted at once for the 3rd Ward School, which would have to be procured.

STATIONERY SUPPLIES.

Mr. Shaw read a statement from the Principal showing the amount of stationery procured during the year, and the amount used, as follows:—

	Amt supplied.	Amt used.
Paper	30 Reams	29 Reams
Pens	48 Boxes	40 Boxes
Cloth	50 Boxes	50 Boxes
Pencils	60 Gross	35 Boxes
Pen Holders	6 Gross	250

STATIONERY REQUIRED FOR 1878.

20 Reams of 13 lb. Foolscap Paper.
5 Boxes Gillott's Pens—"303."
" " " "
20 " "Mitchell's" "G."
60 " Crayons Chalk.
" " Slate Pencils.

Moved by Mr. Shaw, seconded by Mr. McClelland,—That the above statement be received, and that the Finance Committee be instructed to take the necessary steps to procure the stationery, &c. required for the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools for the year 1878, by tender.—Carried.

WOOD WANTED.

Moved by Mr. Loch, seconded by Mr. Robertson,—That the Property Committee be empowered to contract for a supply of wood for the Schools.—Carried.

MR. HIND'S SALARY.

Mr. McClelland moved for a re-consideration of the payment of the balance of Mr. Hind's salary.

Mr. Dennistoun stated that this matter had been up several times before and had been lost. It required a majority of the whole Board to carry it.

A vote was taken and the motion declared lost, the following five members voting for it:—Messrs. McClelland, Loch, Edmison, Pentland and Robertson.

COLLECTION OF BOUND SCHOOL TAX.

On motion of Mr. Edmison, Mr. Wm. Cummings was appointed Collector of Common School Section No. 11, joined to the town for school purposes, and that he receive ten per cent. commission for collection; also, that the Chairman and Secretary give him his warrant of appointment.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Mr. Eccles gave notice that he would move at the next meeting to rescind a resolution at present on our books, requiring teachers to give two months notice when wishing to resign.

The Board then adjourned.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Results of the Voting in Town, County and Neighboring Municipalities.

The election of representatives for the various municipalities throughout the Province took place on Monday last, and were in most instances closely contested. The interest manifested in town was not near as keen as that of last year—and all but three of the old councillors who sought re-election have again been returned. In No. 1 Ward Mr. J. R. Ormond takes the place of Ms. D. Haggart, retired, and we believe he will prove himself a good ride and will throw a clean record at the end of his term. In No. 4 Ward two new men have been elected—Messrs Carlisle and Denne. We regret Mr. Dumble's defeat, which was chiefly due to his being a non-resident and not having made a canvas of the Ward. During his term of office he at all times took an independent and straight forward stand upon all questions coming up for discussion, and was not afraid to speak his mind, openly and boldly. The following is the state of the poll in the different wards at the close, and also the result of the voting in the other neighboring municipalities:—

IN THE TOWN.

The election of School Trustees took place yesterday, and with the exception of the Second Ward were quite interesting and no one took place. The retiring Trustees were:—in the First Ward, Mr. M. Richardson; Second Ward, Mr. D. Pentland; Third Ward, Dr. G. Burnham; Fourth Ward, Mr. C. Richardson.

In the First Ward, Mr. Robert Romaine takes the place of Mr. Robertson; in the Second Ward a keen contest took place between Mr. Pentland and Mr. E. W. Ernest, resulting in Mr. Ernest's election by a majority of 14 votes; in the Third Ward, Mr. D. W. Dumble takes the place of Dr. Burnham; and in the Fourth Ward Mr. John Cook takes the place of Mr. Richardson.

ASHBURNHAM.

In Ashburnham all three who sought a seat on the School Trustees, Mr. H. Calcutt and Mr. A. Ingram being re-elected by acclamation. John Burnham, Esq., was elected in the stead of Stewart Wright, who resigned.

Thousands of People

Are now carelessly allowing themselves to drift through the preliminary symptoms of consumption, under the fatal delusion that they are troubled with nothing but a "slight cold." How necessary is it, then, that a cold should be cured for from its incipiency, and every exertion used to get rid of it. "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers" will stop the hacking cough in a few minutes, and by their influence on the bronchial and pulmonary organs all fears of dangerous results will soon be dissipated—but they must be taken in time. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents per box.

Loss of Appetite in Horses.

Horses lose their appetite from various causes but most frequently by the approach of some disease, this circumstance ought not to be overlooked by those who own horses, but should be immediately attend to as by so doing the disease may be checked, and the life of the horse saved. To do which we are positive there is nothing equal to 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;' it purifies the blood, corrects all derangements of the digestive organs, and as a necessary consequence the appetite is restored, the skin becomes soft, and the coat assumes a curl and shining appearance. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Hens' Meat.

When the telegraph announced the discovery by Prof. Hall that our neighboring planet had two satellites, and the despatch was read next morning at ten thousand American breakfast tables, what think you was the effect upon the hearers? Some colloquy similar to the following was given to money: "Hare has two moons, hey! Pass the the hash, Kitty. Strange, isn't it, that astronomers never saw them before. Another chop, please. I wonder what they'll discover next? These corn cakes are excellent. What's the latest from Europe? We have become so accustomed to startling discoveries and announcements, that we take them as a matter of course. Even truth must appear in flaming colors to make herself seen. The virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets have been tested in ten thousand households, whose inmates will tell you that they consider the discovery and introduction of these remedies of far greater importance to the world than the moons of Mars.

A WOMAN'S HAND.

Only a little, soft, white thing,
Made for wearing the costly ring;
Made for flirting the shiny fan
As only the belle of the season can;
Made for the stolen pressure or kiss
(Long Branch fashions) resting in bliss.
Or merely the touch of fingers white,
Like sea-art down on the beach that night;
Made for a "prize" for the highest bid
(And under the rose a short life's bid)
A thing which the basest miner sun
Has taught his ardent beams to shun.
Lost feeble or tax its beauty spoil,
And make it too near a hand of toil.
Instead of only a dainty thing,
Meant for ease and the diamond ring.

Only a sunburned toil-fit thing
To which the hearts of the needy cling;
To which they turn who have learned the worth
Of a woman's heart on this weary earth;
Made for healing for mending o'er
The hearts of those who are tried and sore.
Made for honest work each day,
For driving the shadows of life away;
For holding the "empty matter" to all
Who, failing not thirsty, seem our call;
Made for leading the blind to;
For blessing which many rest upon;
Made to be won by a loyal heart.
Who in its labor will bear a part;
Made to be clasped by a loyal hand,
Which closes with the best in all the land.
Worth—oh! double its weight in gold,
This useful hand that can never grow old!

A NEW-YEAR'S GIFT.

Major Carleton and Elsie Beresford.

It was New-Year's eve. All the world was supposed to be merry, though why we old folks should be expected to rejoice at the death of another year—perhaps a very good old year, too—is a mystery to me. We can understand why young hearts should be glad because the future to them is full of bright hopes and crowded by fancy's fairest dreams; but, alas! for us, no new year can bring us what the old years have brought; our dreams, our hopes, our longings all, lie buried under the autumn leaves of the years that are gone, and we can but wait for our last new year, sitting with weary hands folded, and smiling how unselfishly at the joy of others. Elsie Beresford was happy that New Year's eve, though why she should be so it would be hard to tell, for Elsie had not, after the general ideas of life, a very easy time of it. She had no known relation in the world but an old aunt with whom she lived in one of the watering places in England, whose end and aim in life was whist and tea.

Mrs. Beresford was not young, though she tried to be so, and "poor dear Captain Beresford," as she termed her late husband, might thank his stars that he slept peacefully at the bottom of the sea, for had he not died that peaceful death I am morally certain he would, by the time I write of, have been fretted into putting an end to his misery by a mild dose of prussic acid.

This was the old lady with whom Elsie, joyous and quiet as a child, came to live when her gentle mother died. She was now 21, little of figure, fair of face, with a certain quick, joyous movement when pleased, which she always strove to conquer in the presence of her aunt, who hated "noise," but alas! Elsie could not quite help being young, so she often got into trouble. This New-Year's eve, however, Mrs. Beresford was going to hold an evening reception, and in preparation for it she kept Elsie standing an hour behind her chair, arranging the flowers in her hair—caps being considered to old!

'Take out that again child, it makes me look 50 at least. Here is a lily. The poor, dear Captain used to say I became white.' Elsie placed the flower as becomingly as possible in the wig of fair hair which always adorned her aunt's head. Mrs. Beresford surveyed the effect.

'Hum, very good; but still it might be better. Put in that spray of heath. Not so good. There, child, have you no taste, can't you say if it is becoming?'

'If you like it, aunt, it is very pretty.'

'If I like it! Stupid girl, you never can give me a hint; why, even Jemima, the housemaid, has more idea of what suits me. There, give me that ivy wreath and ring for Jemima. Stop, what did you do with Major Carleton's note? Ah, here it is. Charming man, Major Carleton! He is quite struck with me, I assure you. Don't you think so, Elsie?'

Elsie's cheeks became rose color as with a quick movement she turned away.

Mrs. Beresford was too much occupied with herself and her note to notice that she received no reply.

'Delighted to accept your invitation,' she read. 'So like him, the dear man! Ah!' holding up her hands in an affected way, 'I do believe he is the most charming man in Oxentown! You shall be well cared for, child, when we marry; and, oh, my stars! won't Mrs. Dundee open her eyes, and Mrs. Dunsford tare her hair! Oh, I know how they have set traps to catch him; but whose house does he most frequent, whose company does he most affect? why mine to be sure. Ring the bell, child. Should I put just one touch more rouge on my cheeks?'

'Oh, no, auntie!' cried Elsie, in a horrified tone, regarding the withered, rouged old face, which might have looked so different.

'Very well, you need not shriek at me like that. I suppose you are jealous because you have an aunt who steals the gentleman's hearts instead of you. Ha, ha, ha; never mind, Elsie, you shall have my old white moreen antique to make down for yourself; I cannot wear it any longer, it is getting so shabby. Besides, when I marry——. Come in, Jemima,' Enter Jemima with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

'If you please, mem, Major Carleton's compliments, and——'

'How delicious!' cried Mrs. Beresford, rushing forward, and seizing the bouquet. 'How charming! I shall die with delight! When did it come, Jemima?'

'Just this minute, mem, but——'

'So thoughtful of him! That will do, Jemima. Now, before you go, tell me if I look well this evening?'

'Oh, lovely, mem.'

'This lily, does it suit me, or shall I have in this ivy wreath?' continued Mrs. Beresford, turning round and round before her mirror.

'The lily looks grand, mem; I am sure everyone will be wondering, you look so beautiful.' Mrs. Beresford smiled graciously, and put her hand in her purse.

'There is a shilling for you, Jemima, and mind you don't spend it on dress. Now, you may go, and you, too, Elsie, you don't look nice this evening, but it does not matter—you won't be seen.'

Then, glad to escape, Elsie ran down stairs stopping to survey herself one moment in a mirror by the drawing-room door. A girlish figure in a half satined white muslin, no ribbon or bow by way of decoration, only an antique cross, which had been her mother's, hung round her neck; a fair, rounded face, with deep, grey eyes, and a little mouth which broke into smiles, showing a row of pearly teeth, as she stood critically regarding herself.

'Well, you are a silly girl, Elsie,' she said giving her cheek an admonitory pat; 'who cares what you look like?' Well, Jemima! to that worthy as she came down stairs.

'I did not like to say anything to your aunt Miss, when she seemed so pleased with them flowers, but they was for you. Mum, and this note too.' And Jemima dived into the depths of a capacious pocket.

'Quick, quick, Jemima,' cried Elsie, standing with flushed and heated breath.

'On my honor, I can't find it.'

'Can't find it! Nonsense! You must find it!'

'That's all very fine, Miss Elsie, but if I can't I can't, and that's an end on't.'

'Jemima I shall——'

'Ho, you won't, Miss—there's the bell, and missus will be down in no time, and it will be the better after all this bib-bub.'

Elsie, with a heightened color, hurried into the drawing-room, and, pressing aside the flowers, read the following note, together with a bright little laugh. Yes, she was very happy. The world was bright for her! No one ever thought of making such bright things to the orphan girl but only one—the thought of whom made her smile again. Such a bright, loving smile! Then she clasped her hands again, and drew a deep breath. It is so sweet to be loved when one is young.

Mrs. Beresford entered, sweeping her long train behind her with an air of entire satisfaction, and carrying the bouquet, not daring to put it too near her nose, in case of hurting in the least the delicate (?) tint on her cheeks.

'This is such a love of a dress, Elsie,' she said, turning to look at herself, first in one mirror, and then in another; 'I am sure I shall create quite a sensation to-night; don't you think so?'

Elsie's eyes were full of tears of shame as she listened to and watched the heartless old woman. Yet that very heartlessness and vanity were the good angels of the orphan girl, for Mrs. Beresford never took the slightest notice of her niece till she grew into womanhood.

But she was now growing too big to be quite passed over; so she was allowed to wear white muslin and come into the drawing room.

'Don't stand before the fire, child; you keep the heat from the room, besides burning your face; but that does not matter, as no one will notice you. Here comes some friends. My dear Mrs. Dundee! how delighted I am to see you!'

Elsie moved into a corner, taking some work and sat down quietly to watch the proceedings. Very few people took any notice of her, and her gray eyes became sorrowful as she looked at the gay throng and listened to the heartless chatter. 'Delighted,' 'Charmed,' 'Most beautiful,' 'Lovely,' 'Exquisite,' she heard echoed by her aunt on every side. When the whist tables were brought out, and the evening's amusement began.

'My dear Mrs. Dunsford, you really must give me my revenge to-night. You are such a scandalous good player, no one has a chance of beating you. Ah! Major Carleton. How are you this evening? Late, but, like the sun, always welcome.'

'If I am the sun, Mrs. Beresford, yours is the garden I delight to shine upon.'

'Ah, how lovely! What a beautiful speech! You shall have a cup of tea for that; I shall make you one myself.'

'By no means, Mrs. Beresford. Do not let me take you away from the charming party you have just made up. Your neice, I daresay'—stopping to look round.

'To be sure. Elsie, come and give Major Carleton a cup of tea. A thousand, thousand thanks for the magnificent flowers you sent, Major. You see they quite adorn my poor little rooms.'

Murmuring something about 'pleasure' the Major followed Elsie to a side table, and stood watching her as she poured out the cup of tea. She felt his eyes were upon her, and her little hands trembled as she held it to him, saying:—

'It was very kind of you to send the flowers and you must not think it strange of aunt to imagine they were meant for her.'

'I intend to thing only what will please you this evening, Miss Beresford.'

Then, sitting down by her, he looked into her gray eyes, with a half smile.

'You are not particularly happy this evening. I saw you when I came in gazing about you with a most sorrowful expression.'

Elsie did not dare to look at the gray-bearded, smiling face before her; nor did she need to look to know what it was like. The poise on the dark head just streaked with grey—for the Major was forty—the kindly look in the brown eyes—nay, every tone of his voice—she knew by heart.

'Why were you sad?' he asked again. 'You are not afraid to tell me, surely?'

Elsie looked up with a quick movement.

'No; I would not fear to tell you anything. I was only thinking what a hollow mockery all this is—how unlike the true, full life one hopes to live when one is young! How these people who are calling each other by the most endearing terms, will cut each other to pieces to-morrow, and perhaps a year hence will pass each other on the street, as though they had never met. It all seems so dreadful, I wonder if I shall ever grow like them!'

'Heaven forbid!' cried the Major, putting down his cup. 'Please God, you shall live for something better than that. Then, bending eagerly forward, he was about to speak, when Mrs. Beresford appeared at his elbow.

'Ah! you have finished, I see. Now, dear Major, do have a rubber.'

'Thank you, Mrs. Beresford; if you will excuse me——'

'Now, don't be so cruel, when I had set my heart on a rubber with you. There's a dear fellow, now, do come.'

The Major looked around for Elsie, but she had vanished; so, with the best grace he could, he conducted Mrs. Beresford back to the card-table.

That evening Elsie appeared no more; but she got her letter from Jemima, and sat long into the night reading and re-reading the words, which said so much and yet so little.

'My dear Miss Beresford,—Will you accept these few flowers from me, I shall be with you this evening; but, knowing how seldom I can speak to you alone, I have a request to make. I shall call on the morning of New-Year's day, and, should you not wish to see me, you have only to say so. Your aunt, I know is a late riser, and so I choose an early hour—say, half past nine.—Believe me, ever your most sincerely,

DOUGLAS CARLETON."

At half-past nine on that New-Year's morning Elsie stood waiting—for what? For that new life which, to a girl's heart is the best the world can give.

'Elsie,' said the Major, and his deep voice trembled, 'you know I am no longer young, and my fortune is but small, but if a true and deep affection can compensate you for the lack of outward things you have my admiration and fondest love.'

Then Elsie held out her little hands saying, 'Take me, and love me, for you are all the world to me.'

Shall I tell you of how the Major loved this orphan girl—of how tenderly he used to call her his 'New-Year's gift'—of the rage of Mrs. Beresford, and how she swore she would have the Major up for breach of promise—of how she calmed down, and, after the wedding, always talked of 'My nephew the Major, you know—charming man!'—and of how she went on giving card-parties and being young, until one day she found she was old, and died? No; I shall leave these things to the imagination, and make my bow, wishing you all a happy New Year.

CHARACTERISTIC.

The following appeared in the late number of the Bobcaygeon Independent, Its purpose will be evident to all, and its peculiar pointedness to many of our readers:—

Sir,—I always make it a point to say a few of words on every subject which crops out in the papers. The people expect it of me, and I always answer their expectations with alacrity. So, about Exemptions from Taxation. My opinions of the subject, unlike those of hold an other subjects, are quite fixed. I hold it to be the worst of sacrilege for the tax collector to put his finger on the property of the Church. We are, I know, living in times when abominations prevail, when women have invaded the Christian pulpits, when Dissenters are not struck dead by lightning when leading evangelical carry their piety into the Insolvent Court, and good men, like Isaac Garbett, of Snuith, shed tears of insensibility in public meetings over the sorrows of successful fraud. But, Sir, I have yet to learn that the fatalomatic enlightenment of the age and its greed of gold will lead to the sacred treasures of the church being defiled by the touch of tax-man. My hair stands on end when I think of the enormity of the proposal. Tax Post Offices, Town Halls, Public Buildings of all kinds, as much as you like, nay, even Schools, if you insist on it, but in the name of Heaven don't touch the Church or the incomes of persons. To do so would be sacrilege and sin. Let us examine this question. The earliest records we possess of any Church are those of Egypt. The Egyptians wrote in 'hieroglyphics' and a beetle or scarabeeus was the representative of fertility, and for this reason the scarabeeus, being of no use, is safe locked in hammock, and encases itself to the wing, and so becomes fertilised and reproductive of its species. Therefore, when the Egyptians wished to denote the Church they painted a scarabeeus, because the Church is fertilised by Nature, and Nature is everywhere and Everything, symbolising that the Church Everywhere should be fertilised by Everything, not of course, literally, by rolling itself in horse-muck, but allegorically by the contributions of all the people and of everyone in the deserving wealth. This then being the very earliest records of a Church, and I am Church being free from tax, can Christ and Cæsarians be worse than Pagan Egypt and keep legal notes on the stipends of their Clergy? That is the question! He who taxes me or my Church commits sacrilege. That is my view of the subject, and I take it that mine is morally, spiritual and unassailable. As Christ Himself said Render unto Cæsar unto Cæsar, Render unto God unto God, and I consider Cæsar privileges, unless he proves himself emperor, of that you see, don't think it worth considering.

LUKE FISHER.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.

Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balmanic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Excelsior Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts, NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye known or chronic, Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST, or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, and very effective; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS, PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD or long standing, and when prevents CONSUMPTION. Some over-rated as they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Up with the birds in the early morning—
The dewdrop glows like a precious gem;
Beautiful tints in the skies are dawning,
But she's never a moment to look at them.
The men are wanting their breakfast early:
She must not linger, she must not wait;
For words that are sharp and looks that are surly
Are what men give when meals are late.

Oh! glorious colours the clouds are turning.
If she would not look over hill and trees;
But here are the dishes, and here is the churning—
These things always must yield to these.
The world is filled with the wine of beauty,
If she could but pause and drink it in;
But pleasure, she says, must wait for duty—
Neglected work is committed sin.

The day grows hot, and her hands grow weary.
Oh! for an hour to cool her head,
Out with the birds in the winds so cheery!
But she must get dinner and bake the bread:
The busy men in the hay field working,
If they saw her sitting—with hand,
Would think her lazy and call it shirking,
And she never could make them understand.
They do not know that the heart within her
Hungers for beauty and things sublime;
They only know that they want their dinner—
Plenty of it—and just "on time."
And after the sweeping and churning and baking,
And dinner dishes are all put by,
She sits and sews, though her head is aching,
Till time for supper and "chores" draw nigh.

Her boys at school must look like others.
She says, as she patches their frocks and hose;
For the world is quick to censure mothers
For the least neglect of children's clothes.
Her husband comes from the field of labour;
He gives no praise to his weary wife;
She's done no more than has her neighbour.
'Tis the lot of all in country life.

But after the strife and weary tussle
With life is done, and she lies at rest,
The nation's brain and heart and muscle—
Her sons and daughters—shall call her blest.
And I think the sweetest joys of heaven.
The rarest bliss of eternal life.
And the fairest crown of all will be given
Unto the way-worn farmer's wife.

"THE LUMBERER IN CANADA."

Extracts Referring to the County of Peterborough.

Oddly enough, in the Colonial Advocate, of December 5th, 1826, William Lyon Mackenzie attacked the loyalty and patriotism of the immigrants! The Man, who ten years afterwards, was to head an abortive rebellion, who had published a series of biographies in pamphlet form, extolling the genius of Irishmen, who was proud of his descent from a remote Irish ancestor, assailed these helpless strangers in their most vulnerable point. The men whose sons are now the lords of smiling farms in the richest part of the Dominion, had an ardent desire to go to the United States. The $30,000 which had been expended in bringing them out and settling them was thrown into the sea. Worse, it was a bounty paid out by Canadian Councillors to recruit in Ireland soldiers for the United States. What baseness is there to which low ambition and factious opposition will not descend! The charge was at once refuted. Two communications were published in a London paper, one from Mr. Thomas Orton, of the Land Register Office of Port Hope, the other from Mr. James Fitzgibbon, better known as Colonel Fitzgibbon, a heroic noble character, to whom we shall have again to refer. Fitzgibbon pointed out that it would not have been surprising, if many of the settlers, skilled mechanics, and other strangers to forest life, who could find employment and good wages everywhere between the settlement and New York, had spread themselves abroad. As a fact, they had not done so. Nor, concluded the gallant fellow, had they since their arrival, done aught for which he or any other countryman of theirs need blush.

Meanwhile, Peterborough began to rise. The few immigrants who had remained on the plains, built themselves little dwellings. They plied a trade, they turned their hands to what they might. John Boates started that sure and sinister mark of modern civilization a tavern. Adjoining it was a log house, in which Capt. Armstrong lived. Captain Armstrong was engaged in distributing rations to the settlers. John Sullivan put up a log house, on the south-west corner of George and Charlotte Streets, and he too kept a tavern. William Oakely started a bakery, and made the staff of life, while Boates and Sullivan dispensed a perilous solace which would not be too harshly described as the fluid of death. There are ruined children, heart-broken widows, who would not think me harsh if I called it the instrument of hell. The next house was on the south side of King Street, where Timothy O'Connor lived. East of O'Connor's another was built, by James Hurley, in the winter of 1826. Mr. Stewart opened a small store; gave credit; charged the bar of soap, or the half pound of candles, or the ounce of tea, or the quarter-pound of tobacco, to "the woman with the red cloak," the "man with the iron grey beard," the "girl with the mole on her cheek." Need we wonder he was bought out! James Bailey, a north of Ireland man, in 1826, built his house, and kept a tavern. In 1828, John Crawford, of Port Hope, put up a frame house. And so the town grew. The Irishman became fond of his adopted country, and the grief of his heart stilled, he was at leisure to turn his thoughts to the happy cares of life, and the happier joys of friendship and love. Cupid follows the human family everywhere. All climates agree with him. He discharges his arrows with as much skill in a Canadian winter as in the slumberous, almost voluptuous, atmosphere of the tropics. His song is ever fresh. He falls in with the cadence of the sleigh bells, as well as with the tones of the lute. Under a maple tree he is as much master of the situation as under a palm. And so men fell in love and married, and begot large families, to gladden them with the tender love of parent and child, when the fierce wild heat of the passions could make their veins run with lightning no more, and when all the soft and pleasant appliances of civilization should surround the home of their old age. Were this not so amid the toils and privations of a pioneer life, what a mournful light would steal through the random forest, what a gloom would rest on the amorphous beginnings of early settlements. Even in the heart of capitals, and in the midst of wealth,

"The house were dreary
Life without love does but fade;
Vain it wanders and weary enough."

Love, under favorable circumstances, cannot [illegible] and [illegible] the gloom of [illegible] and [illegible] out of [illegible] and [illegible] will [illegible] and [illegible] poverty softer than down, and infuses into the heart of privation a lyric joy.

In the winter of 1826, His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, visited the town and settlement. Save where the few houses stood, that portion of the town then cleared was disfigured with stumps. The Governor was accompanied by Colonel Talbot, the Hon. John Beverley Robinson, the Attorney General, and others. The Viceregal party were entertained by Captain Babridge. He held a rude levee at which a large number of settlers attended. Various addresses were presented. One, from the Magistrates, dwelt on the good conduct of the immigrants who had given ground to hope that they would prove a valuable acquisition to the Province. A deputation from the colony of Smith, came with a verbal address. The chosen spokesman broke down, as raw orators will. But he had presence of mind enough to turn round to Mr. Jacob Bromwell and say: "Speak it you sir." The difficulties, occasional distress, the want of a mill were dwelt on: "Saving your presence, sir," said Bromwell, "I have to get up at night to chew corn for the children." They were promised assistance. Patrick Berragan, a school-teacher, presented an address on behalf of the Irish Roman Catholics. The Irish immigrants expressed their gratitude to their "gracious good King, and to his His Majesty's worthy, good and humane Government," for all that had been done, "and," said the address very characteristically, "we hope yet intend to do for us." They were equally alive to what Mr. Peter Robinson had done for them, and equally mindful of the future, so far as he was concerned. "We are fully sensible that his fine and humane feelings will not permit him to leave anything undone that may forward our welfare." They were satisfied with the doctor and officers placed over them. "Please your Excellency," the address proceeds, still characteristically, and not without some humour; "we agree very well, and are pleased with the proceedings of the old settlers amongst us, as it is the interest of us all to do the same. And should an enemy ever have the presumption to invade this portion of His Majesty's dominions, your Excellency will find that we, when called upon to face and expel the common foe will, to a man, follow our brave commanders; not an Irish soul will stay behind." The deplored "the want of a clergyman to administer to us the comforts of our Holy Religion." They also said they wanted good schoolmasters to instruct their children.

The next day the Governor drove out to Ennismore. Mud Lake was crossed on the ice. The party put up at the shanty of Mr. Eugene McCarthy, the father of Mr. Jeremiah McCarthy who was Reeve of Ennismore. Equally loyal addresses were forwarded from various townships to Earl Bathurst, Colonial Secretary.

The vice-regal visit here fruit. A grist mill containing two run of stones, was completed in 1827, and was at once offered for sale by the Government. Mr. John Hall and Mr. Moore Lee became the purchasers. A bridge was built across the Otonabee. Henceforth the prosperity of the town and the success of the settlement were assured.

In 1832 the cholera visited this continent and penetrated to Peterborough. Out of a population of five hundred, twenty-three persons died of this disease In 1833 the lawyers began to arrive. Stafford Kirkpatrick "put out his shingle" in 1834. In the year 1832 a couple of small steamers were placed on Rice Lake. About the same time the great work was conceived of rendering navigable the chain of waters from the Bay of Quinte to Lake Simcoe.

In the civic, legal, and militia affairs of the district the names which occur most frequently are, as we might expect Irish. In 1847 the immigrants arriving from Ireland brought with them a fever of a malignant type. In 1860 the Prince of Wales was received magnificently in Peterborough. A pavilion was erected on the Court House Green for the presentation of addresses. In front of the pavilion, seats had been fixed for one thousand children. The rising ground of the Court House Park would have afforded easy standing room for thirty thousand people. But whether thirty thousand or only fifteen thousand availed themselves of it is left uncertain by contemporary accounts. In any case the splendour, the arches, the population, all indicate what progress had been made as far back as seventeen years ago. Schools had long been opened and ministers of the various forms of Christianity established in Peterborough. I need not tell the reader what Peterborough with its 5,000 inhabitants, its stores, factories, mills, newspapers, railway and telegraph accommodation, its well laid out and well-lit streets is to day. Nor is it necessary to describe the country with its prosperous townships. The greater part of all this wealth and prosperity and usefulness to the Dominion is due to Irish heads and hands.

A remarkably able business man, whose history has already been written in one of our own periodicals, is William Cluxton. Born at Dundalk, County Louth, in 1819, he lost his father when he was only six years' old, and his mother before he had passed his twelfth year. On her death the orphaned family was scattered, and he went to reside with an uncle who carried on a business at Cootehill, County Cavan. His uncle soon urged him to emigrate to Canada. He found himself among friends three miles from the small village of Peterborough of that time. Here he soon discovered that nature did not intend him for farming. With his friends' consent he sought and obtained a very humble situation in the employment of the late John Hall, the father of Judge Hall, also deceased, who was then the leading merchant in the village. He was soon promoted, and in 1836 we find him in Port Hope in charge of an establishment belonging to the late John Crawford. He next went to Peterboro' to take into charge of a branch of Mr. Crawford's business. In 1842, he set up business on his own account. Why particularize? His history is the history of thousands. In 1865, he retired from the dry-goods business with an ample fortune. One of the branches, established at Lindsay, he sold to a clerk, now in new men of the wealthiest and best business men in that town. To his own sons and no other clerk he sold the Peterborough establishment. His gross and profits transactions are so large that he has as yet been unable to extricate himself from those branches of speculation. For the last twenty years he has moved the principal part of the grain along the whole line of railway from Lindsay to the front. His transactions it is said, have amounted to half a million annually.

In 1852, he became manager of the Peterboro' branch of the Commercial Bank of Canada, a position he held for eight years. He has been President of the Midland Railway Company; of the Little Lake Cemetery Company; of the Port hope and Peterboro' Gravel Road Company; he is still President of the Lake Huron and Quebec Railway Company. He has been both in the Town and County Council. He is a magistrate of several years' standing.

After hours, whether clerk or manager, instead of chatting in bar parlours, he devoted himself to the cultivation of letters and music, in which last humanising art he became a proficient. He was thus fitting himself for the responsibilities of the future. He was returned to Parliament, in 1867, for West Peterborough.

HARD TIMES IN AUSTRALIA.

A BAD PROSPECT FOR EMIGRANTS—THE COUNTRY NOT AS IT IS REPRESENTED—LIFE OF THE AVERAGE SETTLER.

A young man, who left Ontario for Australia a year ago, sends a dreary account of the condition of those immigrants who left Western Ontario for Australia last year. He says:—Parties desirous of settling on lands in those colonies may still find what is called very good land open for selection by going into the interior a few hundred miles. But when he has located he may choose his burial place, for he is pretty sure to remain there as long as he lives, whether as a matter of choice or not. Men who go there without considerable means, and who are consequently unable to purchase land, are very likely to remain as servants of others, and their families will "follow suit," for the lands are held by the Government as a source of revenue, and not to afford homes for the people. The great cry of the capitalists is for cheap labour. Oh! give them cheap labour and they will be happy. They advertise mechanics' wages at from ten to twelve shillings per day, and laborers wages at from seven to eight shillings per day, and yet there are hundreds of hungry men walking the streets of their cities and the country roads who cannot get employment. I have seen first-class mechanics working for twelve shillings per week and laborers for seven shillings per week to keep themselves and their wives and children from starving, and yet the Legislature of New South Wales has lately voted a large sum of money to assist immigration, and will send agents abroad who will represent the Colony in a light which the true state of things will not warrant, so as to fill their country with people whom they know must labor for almost nothing. Yes, and to fill their streets with fallen women. The lands are fast falling back into the hands of the squatters who now fence their "runs," and therefore do not require shepherds, as formerly. The principal lines of railway that have afforded employment to such numbers for years past will soon be completed. The public lands are beyond the reach of men without considerable means, and the mines, excepting in Queensland, where but few white men are able to work or to stand the climate, are pretty nearly worked out and deserted. Yet if any man still wishes to try his fortunes there let him take pass Majority for the Bill, 918.

A HINT TO OUR M. P. P's.

During and after every session of the Ontario Legislature we hear complaints from members of illness contracted through close attendance on the sittings of the House, in an ill-ventilated and gas-heated chamber. In fact the death of not a few of the leading men of the Province has been traced to the practices prevailing among Parliamentarians of doing most of their work in the House after night, when, if they are not sleeping they should be comparatively free from mental strain, and especially free from such a deliterious atmosphere as pervades the Legislative Chamber at Toronto under its Gariah Gas. It is a wonder that the members of that body have so long suffered themselves to be led to the slaughter when there seems so little necessity for it. The evening sitting of the House could with great advantage be done away with altogether. All the work done after six and up to the latest hour to which the sitting can be protracted could be gone through within a few hours of the morning, much more expeditiously, with far greater comfort, and with less strain upon the health of members. The sitting of Committees could easily be transferred from the early and best hours of the day to the evening. However difficult the duties of any committee may be its meeting is not like the coming together of the whole Legislative body into one Chamber ; nor are the sittings of Committees usually long. It would be a vast relief—indeed a positive boon—to members could they instead of sweltering in the House o' nights, devote the evening hours to comparative rest or recreation. They would then be ready to go back refreshed and invigorated to the duties of the following day, at whatever hour in the morning might be set for their assembling. There would be some possibility then of getting much-required sleep, of which there is but small chance under the present absurd custom of having the heavy sitting in the evening.

The only objection to substituting a morning for an evening sitting of the Legislature will come from those legal gentlemen of Toronto who occupy seats in the House, and who desire at the same time to attend to their professional duties during the day, leaving their public functions to be exercised in the evening, after the men are worn out and comparatively useless. For their conveniences the natural order of things is turned topsy-turvy, and the members from the country seem to submit to it as a matter of course. For there own sakes, as well as for the good of these very hard-working Torontonians, and for the facilitating and improvement of public business, the majority should insist on their rights in this matter, and pass a measure whereby justice may be done them.

THE SITUATION IN THE STATES.

The prospect of a speedy re-assembling of Congress is again attracting the attention of the people of the United States upon the President and his opponents. Rumours have for some time been afloat of a virtual abandonment on the part of the Administration of the struggle for the control of the New York Custom House Nominations. This action is said to be in consequence of a desire to secure unitied action in opposition to the scheme for the remonetization of silver, which, as at present proposed, would not only interfere seriously with business at home, but also strike a heavy blow at the credit of the nation abroad. Good authorities in Washington are however persuaded that the meeting of Congress will only be the signal of the re-commencement of the storm with unabated and even increased fury. The President, they claim, has gone too far to retract, and Conkling is too implacable to be appeased. It is even rumored that the President's greatest opponent is in favor of an investigation into the Legality of Hayes' claim to Presidential chair. If the tone of the leading Democratic papers, however, can be trusted as an idex of the Sentiment of the party for which they assume to speak, the support the "implacable" will secure from that quarter will be even smaller than on the late vote for the retention of Cirnal and Ashburn in office. Should an investigation of the kind in question be proceeded with it is not improbable that the Democratic leaders would in accumulative evidence to throw contempt upon the Republican party, and thus destroy its chances at the next election; but this they would present further is very problematical indeed, and what the utterances of their most trusted organs by no means sustain.

On the whole President Hayes, if he stands firm apparently has little to fear. The day is gone when a dissatisfied Republican majority in the senate can punish the chief Magistrate as it wills

The Democrats are too strong to admit the possibility of the treatment President Johnson received being repeated in the case of Hayes. That party must soon rule both branches of the Legislature. The Southern policy of the present administration accords so well with the past traditions of this party that it is unreasonable to suppose it will, for the sake of a paltry revenge on a former opponent, repudiate its record. The necessity for civil service reform has too long been forced upon the attention of moderate men of all parties, to allow of anything but favour at their hands. It may be true that the President has not always taken the most prudent or the most effective way of carrying out his scheme, but his intentions are evidently good, and there seems little doubt that the mass of the people are on this point in sympathy with him. In the East the dangers at present menacing the currency of the country, and with it the national credit, must rally a strong support in favour of an officer whose views on their silver question are well known to be served beyond dispute. The West with its growing influence and its vast silver mines has already caused no small alarm by the action of a large majority of its representatives in this matter, and the feeling seems to be gaining ground that if her demands are once conceded, if the wishes of the silver men once prevail, a contest may ensue of which the passage of the Bland Silver Bill would be but the first act.

With these influences in his favour there seems a probability that the President with judicious management may yet be fairly successful in his government. The time, however, is critical. The ship of state needs a strong arm at the helm and any hesitation may involve consequences the sequel of which it would be difficult to predict.

THE INDEPENDENCE OF PARLIAMENT.

The violation of the Independence of Parliament Act by Speaker Anglin, and the persecution to which he was subjected by the Opposition, has brought forth much fruit, though not so palatable to the Conservatives as they had hoped. It was thought by them that Mr. Anglin's unwitting share in what is shown to have been a very common error under the late Ministry, and continued for a time under this, could be used as a weapon against the Government. The Ministers were the real object of attack over the shoulders of the Speaker, the consequences to whom were no concern of those who prosecuted against time. There can be no doubt that the letter of the Act was violated by Mr. Anglin, as it was by scores of others who received money from government while sitting as members of the House. It was the continuance of an old evil, one that had been shamelessly carried on in the case of Colonel Grey and others ; and it is quite as well that attention was called to it early in the history of a Ministry that has shown itself ready to do all it can to prevent its recurrence, while abstaining as the same time from an absurd severity. It was shown during the debates on the question that many members on both sides of the House were amenable under the Independence of Parliament Act, against none of them was it charged that they had defied the law for mere purposes of gain ; but it was agreed that they had without thought, and as a matter of course become involved in the trouble which loomed over them in the shape of an enormous fine for every day they sat as members of the House. Although it was natural that the greater number of these victims should be on the Reform side of the House, in no case could it be shown that there support had been brought by contracts with the Government ; for either those implicated were known as friends of their party in shade as well as in sunshine, the contracts were to paltry too sway anyone, and in every instance members were unaware that they were connected in such a way as to be public contractors under the meaning of the Act. This being the position of affairs it became Parliament to temper justice with mercy. It was to this end the Independence of Parliament Amendment Act was passed, both parties agreeing that it was well to remove the penalties from over the heads of those who sat as legal offenders during the then session. Those who complain now of that Act are only condemning there own political friends for agreeing to it. Anyway there were but two alternatives :—to pursue the course that was taken, or to leave open the way for the utter ruin of all those who had violated the Act, however innocently, and however slightly. The one was practicable and answered every purpose that could be gained ; the other would have been unreasonable and more than harsh.

Freed from the penalties to the end of last session, did not liberate these men entirely unless they themselves took the necessary step to prevent a repetition of the uncomfortable circumstances they were placed in This step is their resignation ; and it has been taken by quite a number besides Mr. Currier, Mr. Anglin, Capt. Norris and Mr. Cunningham. But recently a number of Marstime Province members are performing the last act that will free them from the difficulty, and it is probable that more will soon follow, for should they take there seats in the House next session without going through the formality of re-election they will only be inviting a punishment from which they were freed did they but choose to avail themselves of the door of freedom opened to them. Among the members so placed are Sir. John Macdonald, Mr. Rufus Stephenson, and Mr. Mackenzie Bowell. The case of the latter involves a streak of what is called poetic justice. He it was that moved for Mr. Anglin's decapitation without even a hearing or a trial. Fancy his feelings, then, when he found himself in precisely a similar position to that of the Speaker. We notice that at the so called workingmen's demonstration to Sir John Macdonald, in Toronto the other evening, Mr. Bowell declared his intention of braving it out and returning to the House next session without asking re-election. This is merely tempting his fate, for surely it cannot be that he fears defeat should he go back to his constituents for re-election. At any rate it is worthy of notice that the only man who takes this attitude is a Conservative, and the only journals which speak of it glibly for the escape of them implicated are Conservative and strongly implicated one Conservative and strongly partizan at that. We allow our readers to draw their own deductions from this fact.

THE ESQUIMALT SCANDAL.

Judgment has been delivered in the Esquimalt Scandal worked up by the Mail from threats of malice furnished by disappointed and disappointed ones who looked with jealousy on the members of the Central Committee, and coveted their positions. It is pretty generally known who these spiteful backbiters were, and also that they were too cowardly to come forward themselves to prefer the charges. They shrank from the consequence of what they knew were falsehoods ; and in order to shield themselves while working as much mischief as they could, they clothed the political prejudices of the Mail and so used it as a tool and then employed a few more weak tools to give evidence, if such there, disjointed and illogical tales as were told by the witnesses can be dignified by the name of evidence. After all the Mail's preparing the way for the case, after all its painting grotesque evils in glowing colors, after all its eloquence over the assumed wrongs of the people, the result has been a dissolution of its carefully reared fabric into thin air, and the establishment of the utter falsity of the charges made through it, and by it. Justice Patterson says :—

"The clear result of the whole evidence in my judgment is, that neither charge has any support from affirmative proof ; that the charges have not been allowed to be disposed of as simply unproved, but that both have been conclusively rebutted."

The Mail has since the deliverance of the judgment talked very superciliously of it, and tried to rehabilitate the whole case ; but its efforts in that direction are very apt to fall flat before the public, unless indeed the people, Reform and Conservative, take means to express their detestation of the journals and men who are unpatriotic enough to try and make our excellent system of education a thing to be used as a political shuttlecock. The first attempt so to do has been promptly met ; and the next is sure to be also, though in a more vigorous and decided way.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE.

Since the opening of the House the time of members has been principally occupied in the debate upon the address,—nothing of much importance having yet transpired. The member for West Peterborough in his speech, as reported by the Mail, in dealing with the several clauses of the address, refers to the one respecting the present temperance agitation as follows:—

"The temperance question was one that was becoming highly important. He did not think, however, that the country was to be congratulated upon the agitation that of late years had been made on the bill known as the Dunkin Bill. He thought that it was a great misfortune that that measure had ever been permitted to be placed upon the Statutes. Rather than doing good, the bill was doing a great deal of injury to the country. He held that this legislature, at all events, should bring whatever pressure it could to secure from the Dominion Government a bill repealing the Dunkin Act, or amending it so that there might be total prohibition in any particular municipality that might desire it. The advocates of the Dunkin Bill themselves had said that they had no faith in its provisions. They looked upon it simply as a stepping-stone for obtaining finally total prohibition in the land. The question of prohibition was one that should be submitted fairly to the vote of the country. It would be very desirable to secure from the House of Commons a measure submitting the matter to a general vote as to whether there should be prohibition or not. A measure of that kind would be very much in accord with the wishes of the temperance advocates."

COMPARISONS ARE SOMETIMES ODIOUS.

Our contemporary, the Review, lately reflected upon the President of the Temperance Association, because, the By-law had been defeated in Ashburnham by eight votes. It has now been carried in the Town and County by over 1000 majority, yet the same President is well known in the County, and had the Review in opposition. It claims to be the oldest paper in the County, and to represent the wealth of it. Where is its influence since the President of the Blue Ribbon Club and his temperance friends have defeated the Review and its whiskey friends by such a large majority? Echo answers—where ?

It it be true that the workingmen presented a watch to Sir John Macdonald it is a very practical denial of "the chieftain's" cry that the labouring classes are ruined by the low tariff of the present Government. If it be true that the working-men suffer for bread, (as has been told by Tory orators in their attempts to work up the agony) how comes it that they are able to give away gold watches and things of that expensive and luxurious character. And if Sir John did not know he had been lying about the so-called sufferings of the workingman, he would not have had the heart to take from them what he has said is urgently needed by their wives and children. But the greatest mystery of all is to know why the workingmen should admire one who never did anything for them.

LAKEFIELD.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The inhabitants of Lakefield have during the past six weeks or two months passed through some rather exciting times. First, the hotel-keepers and those favoring their calling, had a requisition presented to the clerk requiring him to submit the Dunkin By-law to a vote of the electors hoping to defeat it in the village and thus impede its passage by the County. But in this they were completely foiled, for on the day of polling the By-law was carried by 29 of a majority—thanks to the perseverance and work of the temperance people assisted by Messrs Knowlson, Rumble, Stratton and the Rev. Mr. Willoughby of Peterborough. The Antis defeated in this scheme attempted to elect an Anti-Dunkin Reeve, and by introducing politics defeated Mr. Jno. Hall—a staunch temperance man. To their shame, be it said, some who pretended to befriend him up to the day of polling, not only forsook him but opposed him "tooth and nail" when the designing Antis introduced politics into the contest. Mr. Hall has reason to congratulate himself on the number of votes which were recorded for him especially when we consider the determined opposition against him and the gauntlet that had to be run by his supporters. Although the Antis were successful in electing their candidate for Reeve they have endured a greater defeat in the voting on the County By-law than that of the Village one. The second victory was celebrated by a concert in the P. C. A. Hall after which an oyster supper was served by the ladies to the speakers, the members of the Peterborough Temple Choir and a large number of others—in all over fifty—who spent a very pleasant evening, and separated feeling well satisfied with the part Lakefield took in helping to roll up a majority of nearly 1000 in favor of the Bill. Now that the Bill is passed let us hope the liquor dealers will be compelled to respect the law and that its provisions may be enforced in the very letter.

Yours &c.,
TEMPLAR.

TEMPERANCE IN BELMONT.

Thinking you and some of your readers would like to know how the people of Belmont feel in regard to the passing of the Dunkin Bill in our County, I may just say, that after having gone over the greater part of the Township for the purpose of seeing and talking with the people on the all important question. I feel in justice to them to say that in the County of Peterboro there is no part of it more thoroughly Temperance than they are. The deep interest manifested by the people, who in order to be present at the meetings held through out our Township by Mr. Knowlton, had in many instances to come long distances, which taking into consideration the darkness of those evenings and the roughness of the roads speaks well for them, and not a little for that justly famous temperance speaker. The meetings were well attended, at none of them many having to stand yet all was quiet and orderly. After each meeting any having objections to the Dunkin Bill were invited to make them, Mr. Knowlton has done a good work for us answering as he did all honest objections, in such a way that they go away corrected and in many cases become warm, supporters of the Bill. And if the same can not be said of some others, they at least, having all their objections answered, go away silenced ; while those who were more supporters of the Bill before are now loud in proclaiming its advantages.—Com.

MURDER IN OMEMEE.

A FATAL SLUNG-SHOT BLOW.

The Lindsay Post says :—The death of Charles Hamilton on Saturday last from the effects of a slung-shot blow delivered by Henry Wood on the previous Friday week startled the unusually quiet community of Omemee, and caused the conviction that an unprovoked murder has been committed in their midst, and naturally there was a good deal of excitement. It appears that Hamilton was in Bowman's Hotel on the 28th Dec., where he gave some apples to the crowd. On going out he was struck on the head by one Henry Wood and fell insensible to the floor. From the effects of that blow he never recovered ; and it is supposed Wood must have wielded a slung-shot, as he is reported to have carried that dangerous weapon, and to have exhibited and boasted of its terrible force. Hamilton was in his fifty-ninth year, and has long been a resident of Omemee ; several years ago he lived in Lindsay. He came from a highly respectable Irish family, his father having been a landed proprietor in County Monaghan, but the son did not prosper in this country, and his course was downhill. He was at first a clerk, then for some years a carter, and finally did little or nothing, and led a worthless, drunken, life.

Henry Wood, the other actor in this tragedy, is a young man of about thirty, and has led an irregular, vagrant course of life. He is the son of a Manvers tavern-keeper, and has relations through that township, and in Emily. A year or two ago he went to Maine, and came back minus one arm, which he said he had lost in lumbering. He was with the gypsies last summer, trading horses and carrying on operations for which those people are well known. Latterly, he has been loafing about the village. There is a report that he had threatened to strike Hamilton, but it is not known that there was a quarrel between them, and the murdered man was not of a quarrelsome disposition. When the reports concerning the affair began to circulate Wood decamped on Sunday morning. He has been traced to Lindsay, where it is believed he took the Whitby Railway train for Toronto.

The Post's Omemee correspondent writes : The deceased was born in Ireland and was fifty-nine years of age. He was of high family. He came to this country in 1836, and entered on a business life in the store of Mr. John Knowlson, then of Cavan, now of Lindsay. He joined the volunteers, and was stationed with his company at Bowmanville during the troubles of 1837-38. He thereafter settled in Emily and married Miss Armstrong, daughter of the late David Armstrong. He was always esteemed as a man who has not been known to do a wrong to his neighbour. His remains were escorted to their last resting place on Tuesday by a very large gathering of fellow-citizens. He leaves behind him a widow and a very respectable family.

One daughter of Mr. Hamilton is a teacher in the Lindsay school ; two reside in Bowmanville, where they are highly thought of in the community ; a fourth is at present in Philadelphia, and a fifth remained at home. Mrs. Hamilton was on a visit to her daughter at Bowmanville when her husband was injured.

ARREST OF THE MURDERER.

A despatch from Whitby says :—Chief Constable Bryan, of this town, succeeded in arresting Henry Wood, charged with the murder of Charles Hamilton at Omemee, Ontario, who, it is alleged, died on Saturday last from the effects of a blow with a slung-shot in the hands of the said Henry Wood, on the 28th of December. Constable Bryan, having heard of Wood's jumping from a freight train near Whitby station going east, immediately pursued him down the railway track, and succeeded in overtaking the prisoner near Oshawa station. When Wood saw Bryan he bolted for a side street, but the Chief succeeded in grasping Wood by one arm, and then applied the nippers, and brought him before Dr. Gunn, J. P., and had him remanded to gaol.

TAXES IN DUMMER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir, I observe in your issue of the 3rd instant a statement of County and Township rates paid by the People of Monaghan, as shown by H. Collins, Reeve. I find by contrast, that Dummer pays $318—more township, rates in two years than Monaghan does in six; viz from '72 till '77 inclusive or in other words Stony Dummer, with at least one third its Lands uninhabited and uninhabitable, pays over three times as much Township rates each year, as the highly favoured and wealthy people of Monaghan. As for our County rates, they are certainly very satisfactory to at least one or two as I observe by reference to the County Auditors reports, that Dummer has not payed any County, Debenture, nor School Assessment rates in the usual way since the 26th March 1874.—The payments made since that date have all been transfers from Non Resident Collections, up till December 1877. Our Reeve, as Finance Chairman of the County, during the last three years has evidently been winking at this, if nothing more, and we are gravely told by him, that we have payed no Interest, nor can we be compelled by the County to pay one cent on the Balance due, amounting to $3,610, less Non Resident Collections, $1,460. Now, Mr. Editor, somebody, has the use of our money at a cheap rate of Interest. Will the Reeve of this County submit to allow their Townships to pay Bank discount and renewals to discharge County liabilities while Municipal officials traffic with the peoples money as will. I judge not.—A word to the wise is, sufficient.—Look this matter up for yourselves Reeves of '78, by so doing you will the more clearly discover the right men, on whom to confer your highest honor. Meantime I have the honor to be your obedient servant.

KEENE.

DISTRICT L. O. L.—At the annual meeting of Otonabee District Loyal Orange Lodge held in the Orange Hall Keene on Tuesday 8th instant, the following brethern were elected and duly installed as office bearers for the ensuing year :—Bro D. A. McFarlane, Dist Master (re-elected) Bro Donald McIntyre Junr, Deputy Dist-Master Bro William Christie, Dist-Chaplain. Bro James McIntyre, Dist-Secretary. Bro William Moore, Dist-Treasurer, (re-elected) Bro John Moncrief, Dist-Dir. of Cer.

GRAND CONCERT.—The entertainment given in the Town Hall on Thursday evening 10th instant under the auspices of Presbyterian Sabbath School was a decided success in every respect. Despite the rain which kept pouring down all evening about 460 persons were present making this one of the best patronized entertainments ever given in the village of Keene, and no doubt had the evening been fine the Hall would not be able to accomodate all who wished to be present. This was the first concert given by the young people, of this School but judging from the success with which it was attended it will not be the last. The programme was gone through in a manner that reflected credit upon the participants. It consisted of eighteen pieces and being varied to suit all tastes was listened to with attention. When all was done well it is difficult to particularize and I will for this time lay that matter aside. The proceeds amounted to something in the neighborhood of $70 which is to be invested in a library for the School. I hope and trust the day is not far distant when our young Presbyterian friends will favor a Keene audience to another such excellent entertainment. —Com.

ACCIDENT.—We are sorry to learn that Mr. Alfred Fife, third son of Thomas Fife Esq., broke his leg while skidding logs in the woods, on the 7th instant.

DEATH OF THE KING OF ITALY.

A cable telegram from Borne announces the death in that city at 2.30 p. m. on the 9th, of King Victor Emmanuel II. of Italy, from pleurisy. The deceased monarch, who was formerly King of Sardinia, was born at Turin on March 14, 1820, and was consequently nearly 57 years of age. In his youth he was a very gallant soldier, having particularly distinguished himself at the disastrous battle of Novara in 1849. He ascended the throne of Sardinia on the abdication of his father Charles in the same year. In the war of Italian independence in 1859 he led his troops in person, and won admiration for his skill and gallantry at the battle of Palestro and on other occasions. The result of this war placed him upon the throne of Italy, the consolidation of which pas perfected by the annexation of the Papal territory in 1870. The deceased king was one of the ablest of European rulers, though his personal character was not of a high order.

It is reported that a month's truce will be proclaimed by the Spanish authorities in Cuba, and that the insurgent leaders will be invited to enter into negotiations for peace.

REMEMBER THIS.—Now is the time of year for Pneumonia, Lung Fever, Coughs, and fatal results of predisposition to Consumption and other Throat and Lung Disease. BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP has been used in this neighborhood for the past two or three years without a single failure to cure. If you have not used this medicine yourself, go to your Druggist, J. D. Tully & Co., and ask them of its wonderful success among his customers. Three doses will relieve the worst case. If you have no faith in any medicine, just buy a Sample Bottle of BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for 10 cents and try it. Regular size bottle 75 cents Don't neglect a cough to save 75 cents.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.—It is the duty of every person who has used BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the GERMAN SYRUP cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample Bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. For sale by J. D. Tully & Co., George Street Peterborough. 52-eaw

DUNKIN CONVICTIONS.—Says the Napanee Beaver: Within the past week Mayor Williams has signalized the last hours of his official existence by dealing out justice to a batch of offenders against the Dunkin by-law or the license act. At any rate the parties mentioned below had been selling liquor without license, and being convicted were fined, all and singular, as follows : Charles Shields, Centerville, two cases $30 in each case ; Thomas Kidd, Centerville, $25 ; John Kingsbury, Clark's Mills, of the hole-in-the-wall saloon, $50: H. Dunn, Clark's Mills, $40; Wm Shaw, Clark's Mills, $25; Joseph Sprouls, Clark's Mills, $25; W. H. Dunn, Adolphustown, $25.

Debility and Nervous Headache.

Chronic, sick or nervous headache is generally dependent on, or accompanied by, impaired digestion, by which the circulation and nutrition of the brain are deranged, and the nervous centres vitiated. The PERUVIAN SYRUP, by restoring the digestive powers, lays the axe at the root of the tree ; the brain is duly nourished, the nervous systems cease, and the headache disappears. Sold by all druggists.

Did You Ever Think

That what is termed a common cold, when systematically neglected, often leads to that most fatal and distressing disease, consumption ; but when attended to at once is generally easy of cure. If you are troubled with a cold or cough, "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers" will be found most effectious in removing it. They give immediate relief, and generally effect a cure when used in time. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents a box.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers, in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full direction for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 130 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 3-26

Horse Medicines.

It is gratifying to know that there is at least one which has stood the test and proved itself worthy the confidence reposed in it ; we know of no other article which has proved so generally successful, or given such universal satisfaction ; we are confident there is more of it used than all others combined, and that it will ultimately supersede all others there can be no doubt. It is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." We advise all who require anything of the kind to give it a trial—we know they will be satisfied with the result. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

An Alpine Avalanche.

In the summer of 1594, a party of tourists, while visiting the Alps, climed, with great difficulty, to an elevated and snow-covered plateau in order to obtain a better view of Swiss scenery and contract the beauty and richness of summer below with the blankness and sterility of mid-winter around and above them. In play they rolled the moist snow into large balls, they brought it over the edge of the plateau. In falling it struck softer snow, which immediately gave way, and soon an avalanche was tearing down the mountain side, burying and destroying every thing in its course. So the handful of snow becomes the irresistable avalanche, so the hacking cough with pain in the head and Catarrh if neglected, speedily develops into that dread destroyer, Consumption. In the early stages Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will effect a cure, though if the blood be tainted or impoverished it must be purified and enriched by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and the liver and bowels kept active by his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Many who have been given up to die by their friends have been restored to health and strength over their remedies. 51-f, 4-4in Ont., Bruce, Mayo etc. 1877.

DR. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y. :

Dear Sir,—I was troubled with [illegible] three years with a [illegible] and was given up by my physicians to die. I was induced to try your Golden Medical Discovery, and before I had taken one bottle I found relief, and after using six bottles I was entirely cured. I have since recommended it to many others, with the same results. Yours truly, MRS. E. A. HOLLOWAY. Sold by all druggists.

LOCAL NEWS

County Council.—The January session of the County Council will commence next Tuesday.

High School Trustees.—Messrs. Geo. A. Cox and James Stevenson have been re-appointed High School Trustees by the Town Council.

Driving Without Bells.—We direct the attention of our police to the practice of driving without bells, and hope that the law on this subject may be fully and strictly carried out, so as to prevent accidents.

Public Meeting.—A Public Meeting testified for Friday evening by the Finance Committee to ascertain the views of the Ratepayers on the question of remunerating the Mayor for past services. Let all attend.

Special Sermon.—On Sabbath evening next at 6.30, the Rev. E. Roberts will preach in the Bible Christian Church, a sermon to "Reasonable Men." Those who attend no church regularly especially invited.

Temperance Soiree.—The annual soiree in connection with the anniversary of Friendship Temple, I. O. G. T., will be held in the Good Templars Hall, on Monday evening next, when a very pleasant evening is anticipated.

Personal.—Mr. John Flavelle formerly of Peterborough, and son of Mr. Flavelle of this town, has been elected a member of the Town Council of Lindsay. Lindsay has now two Peterborough "Boys" in her Town Council Appointment as Teacher.—We are pleased to learn that Mr. James Delaney, son of our respected townsman, Mr. J. A. Delaney, late teacher in the Cunningham School has received the appointment of teacher in Midland City School at a salary of $475.

Questions of the Day.—In compliance with a request from the electors of the neighborhood, Mr. John Bertram will deliver an address upon "The public questions of the day," on Thursday the 24th instant, in the Temperance Hall, 4th concession of Smith, at 7.30 p. m.

Much Obliged.—Our Carrier Boys desire to return their hearty thanks for the way in which their "Happy New Year" was received, and the kind responses given to it, and hope that during the present year they will continue to merit the kind acknowledgments.

Mr Youmans's Entertainment.—Remember that Mr. Youmans, grand costume concerts,—"Festival of the Rose" and "Songs of Nations," will come off on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. Musical, dramatic, serio-comic and sensational. See bills and programmes.

Interesting to Teachers.—The Ontario Government has issued an Order-in-Council requiring public school inspectors hereafter appointed to be honor graduates of some university, and to have had five years' experience in practical teaching in addition to holding a first class provincial certificate.

Presentation.—We observe from a correspondence in the Lindsay Warder, that at the examination of the pupils in School Section No. 10, Emily, held on 31st ultimo, the teacher, Mr. John S. Dobbin, son of J. Dobbin Esq., of Monaghan, was presented with an address and several valuable books. Mr. Dobbin replied in an appropriate manner.

R. C. S. T.—On Wednesday last the election for Trustees for the Roman Catholic Separate School took place in the various wards, resultings as follows:—First Ward—Thomas Cahill and John Corkery. Second Ward—Thomas Dolan and D. J. Lynch. Third Ward—Cornelius McGrath and D. Leahy. Fourth Ward—John C. Sullivan and Jas. O'Connell.

Anniversary Services.—On Sunday and Monday next, the anniversary services in connection with the Charlotte Street Methodist Church will be held. On sunday sermons will be preached both morning and evening by the Rev. Chas. Fish, and on the Monday following the anniversary tea will be held, at which addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Fish and others, and choice music by the choir.

Change of Business.—By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that Mr. James Bailey, formerly of Bailey Bros., has purchased the business lately carried on by Mr. Goodsell, on the corner of Mackenzie and Reid streets, where he promises to keep every requisite usually found in a first-class grocery store. The residents in that neighborhood will no doubt appreciate Mr. Bailey's efforts, by liberally patronizing him.

A Nice Constable.—The Lindsay Post says:—An Omemee constable came to Lindsay a few days ago after Wood, the man who struck down Hamilton with the stump shot. He found his man, but in place of taking him in custody, both got on a spree and were for two days loafing about the bar rooms. The minion of the law returned home and said he could not find Wood. Steps have been taken to have this man dismissed from office."

Branch No. 6, I. C. B. U.—At the regular monthly meeting of branch No. 6, I. C. B. U., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Thos. Doris; 1st Vice-President, Wm. Ball; 2nd Vice-President, G. McNamara; Recording Secretary, Jas. Coughlin; Corresponding Secretary, F. Farren; Financial Secretary, John Dugnan; Treasurer, Wm. Rudkins; Inside Tyler, John Theobald; Outside Tyler, John Hayes; Trustees, R. Sheehy and J. Callaghan.

Fees from the School.—We are informed by the Secretary-Treasurer, W. A. Morrow Esq., that the amount of fees collected for the month of January in the Collegiate Institute amounts to about $160, and the fees received from the non-resident pupils in the Public Schools amounts to $10.60. Non-resident pupils in the Collegiate Institute having to pay $1.00 per. month, and those in the Public Schools 20 cents; resident pupils in the Institute paying 50 cents per month.

Norwood School Trustees.—On Wednesday, the annual meeting of the ratepayers of Norwood School Section took place. Fourteen candidates were proposed, but the good sense of the ratepayers prevailing, six Trustees were chosen without the trouble of resorting to a poll. Those selected are Messrs. Thos. Armstrong, J. E. Pearce, Hiram Reynolds, (former Trustee) James Fixsey, James Jotcham and James Patterson,—three from the Village and three from that portion of the School Section not within its limits.

Cronkhyatekha.—Owing to the severity of the weather, the addresses advertised to be given by Dr. Cronkhyatekha of London, Ont., and Mr. Knowlton on Thursday evening last, had to be postponed indefinately, as the Doctor could not remain over one night. He is a fine specimen of the aborigines of the country, and stands in the foremost ranks of Temperance advocates in the world. We regret that the people of Peterborough did not have an opportunity of hearing him, but at some more convenient time he may favor us at some of our temperance gatherings.

Clergymens' Association.—At a meeting held on the 7th inst in the St. Andrews' Manse, attended or approved by all the Protestant Ministers of the town, who formed themselves into an association for mutual conference, counsel and aid; the following resolutions were passed, which we are requested to publish.

Resolved:—1st, That this association disapproves of Sabbath funerals, and except in cases of real necessity, declines to attend them.

2nd, That this association, disapproves of the custom that has obtained of announcing lectures, and lectures of a secular nature from the pulpit on the Lords day, and resolve to discontinue the practice.

Counterfeit Quarter Dollars.—The Hamilton Times of a recent date has the following paragraph, which is worthy the attention of our business men and others who may perhaps have like coins presented to them for acceptance:—

"We were this morning shown a counterfeit twenty-five cent piece as well executed that it would pass any where unless inspected. It was carefully plated with pure silver and would bear a number of tests. During the forenoon of the present day the gentleman of the coin called to see us, and showed a number of other counterfeits, of the same genuine stamp. He informed us that the genuine article, $10 pieces, were being manufactured in Montreal, and that the dies for the 25 cent pieces were in the hands of the police there, but that the coin was not yet in circulation. He also showed us a counterfeit 50 cent piece, but it had the 'ring' and the appearance of the genuine article. We are glad to know that the counterfeits known as well as they are."

The accounts were referred to the Finance Committee with the exception of Mr. Rowe's.

A $10,000 MISTAKE.

Moved by Councillor SMITH, seconded by Councillor ROUNTREE,—That the salaries of Mr. Rowe and Mr. McGrath, as assessors, be paid.

In amendment, moved by Councillor DUMBLE, seconded by Councillor MCBAIN,—That the Assessors' salaries be not paid until this Council know whether the town will suffer in consequence of a mistake of $10,000 in the assessment of the Dickson estate.

In moving the amendment Councillor DUMBLE said there was an error in the assessment roll amounting to $10,000, owing to the carelessness of one of the assessors. A former mistake of one of these same men had cost the town $1,000. This case was but a piece of gross carelessness, and if they were allowed to go scot free on the first occasion, he was not prepared to allow a repetition again. If the Dickson Estate was willing to overlook the mistake and not to take advantage of it, then pay them their salaries, but if not make them make good the loss.

Councillor SMITH concurred with Councillor Dumble as to the carelessness and the consequences, but he thought they should be paid now and if we sustained any loss through their blunders, look to them for it, as they were both responsible men.

APPOINTING HIGH SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

Moved by Councillor DUMBLE, seconded by Councillor HAGGART,—That James Stevenson and George A. Cox be appointed members of the Board of High School Trustees.

Moved in amendment by Councillor MCBAIN,—That Wm. Clarkson and James Stevenson be appointed High School Trustees. He thought that as there was a great deal of talk and dissatisfaction with the action of the Board that a change should be made.

Councillor RUTHERFORD called on Mr. Stevenson who was present to express his intentions, if re-elected, as to the High School.

Mr. STEVENSON said he and some others had tried to raise the fees on outsiders attending the High School to $2.00 a month but were beaten. In the Common School they of course could "not place any fees to residents but had levied 50 cents per month on outsiders. Efforts were being made to cause the High School to be self-sustaining. During the past two or three years the Government had given very little to the support of this School, as it was not for attendance but for the amount of work accomplished that the grant was now given. This year the school was in a much better standing and would receive about $6,000 from the Government.

There being no seconder to the amendment, the original motion was declared carried.

THE FIRE BY-LAW.

Councillor DUMBLE asked for a report of the committee appointed to examine the petition of John Boyd in reference to extending his stables.

The Chairman of the Committee, Councillor Smith, being absent no report was forthcoming, when

Cobourg sets all tramps that apply for assistance to breaking stones, and as a consequence those wandering characters give that town a wide berth when they hear what is in store for them.

—We are always obliged to anyone who contributes an item of local interest. But they should be sent promptly, and need not refer to events which our reporter was known to have personally witnessed.

—Those boys who persist in skating on Spanish-ing's bay and the river on Sundays should send us their ages and parentage in order that we may have no unnecessary trouble in getting up a first-class obituary notice.

—We can't say that the world is growing better, but have been repeatedly assured by prominent citizens that it is a good deal harder now to get trusted for a pound of crackers than it used to be to steal a barrel of pork.

—I'm waiting 'in the Parlour, love, upon a handsome seat; I'm waiting here till you come down, your own true love to greet. Don't be too long a-fixin' up; for if I may make bold, I ain't a-going to wait here long, a-fixin' in the cold.

JAPONETTE.

By her who in this month is born
No game-save gurnets should be worn:
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship and fidelity.

Council should direct Mr. Johnston, Building Inspector, to have the building torn down, even if the town had to pay the costs. If we have By-laws let them be respected.

Councillor HAGGART willingly seconded the motion, and concurred in what Mr. Dumble had said. They had fought long year with Mr. R. N. Reddy about the erection of a few boards that had no comparison with the building on Water street. The Council had no authority to allow any one to break the By-law. Mr. Johnston was not to blame, as the Council had taken the matter out of his hands and appointed a committee.

Councillor PATERSON said Mr. Dumble's motion was out of order, as the committee was appointed with power to act—in fact it was an insult to the committee. He had examined the place and he thought it a hardship to ask a man to erect a brick building in the midst of old wooden sheds and filth, and any man who could advocate such a course should be in the Asylum. He claimed the action of the committee had lessened the risk rather than increased it.

Councillor RUTHERFORD was not at the meeting of the committee, and was surprised when he saw the building erected. He believed the risk was made greater, and that the committee stepped out of their province.

Councillor MILLER was unfortunately one of the committee, although at the time of his appointment he had objected, as he did not think it necessary to appoint a committee when we had an Inspector and a By-law. The understanding he had was that Mr. Boyd was to take the old rest off, lay the shingles in the new in mortar and brick up the front of the building.

Councillor CAHILL said that although he could not vote for this motion he held that no committee had a right to violate a By-law.

Mr. JOHNSTON said when the committee was appointed with power to act it had relieved him of any responsibility in the matter, as he considered himself a servant of the Council. The building affected him perhaps more than any one else, as all the property he owned was opposite this stable. The risk he considered had been increased.

Councillor MCBAIN—The committee, then, did what you would not have done?

Mr. JOHNSTON—Yes, certainly.

Councillor YELLAND was also opposed to the manner in which the committee had acted.

Councillor SMITH said that while no committee had the power to break the provisions of a By-law or make any change thereto, this committee had given authority to proceed with the erection of this building, it certainly appeared a hardship to compel Mr. Boyd to pull it down.

Councillor DUMBLE said that if this violation was allowed to pass the By-law could never be enforced, as it would establish a precedent for all time to come. Better pay for the building and have it torn down.

Considerable further discussion took place as to the impossibility of strictly carrying out the By-law, in which it was stated that all buildings erected within the fire limits for a number of years with but few exceptions had failed to come up to the requirements of the By-law.

The motion on being put was declared carried, the vote being as follows:—

YEAS.—Councillors Haggart, McBain, Yelland, Hamilton, Rutherford and Dumble.

NAYS.—Councillors Cahill, Smith, Paterson, Rountree and Miller.

REFUND OF BUTCHER'S LICENSES.

Councillor DUMBLE moved, seconded by Councillor MILLER, That as Charles Richardson has during the last month paid to the town the sum of ten dollars for license to sell fresh meat, and the year is nearly expired; therefore, the Treasurer is directed to refund to him one-half of above sum, and that $5 be refunded to Mr. Archambault, being half the amount received from him for a butcher's license.—Carried.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Councillor CAHILL, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, read the following report:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to report, recommending the payment of the following accounts:

E. Romaine	$ 25 50
Lannin Estate	1 00
G. Taylor	10 00
W. Waddell	60 00
Gas. Company	2 00
Bertram & Co	125 00
M. O'Donnell	4 00
J. R. Stratton	6 00
A. Comstock	45 00

The report was on motion adopted.

TAX PETITION.

Robert Duncan's petition to be allowed to pay at present the arrears of taxes due by him without being compelled to pay this year's tax, was referred to the Finance Committee.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE MAYOR.

The MAYOR stated that he had a communication to lay before the Council, and called on Councillor Rutherford to take the Chair. His Worship then retired, when the Clerk read the following communication:

To the members of the Council of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—In consequence of the question of salary to the Mayor having become a matter of discussion outside the Council, which, I believe been drawn into frequent conversations with the ratepayers, and find the impression prevailing that the Mayor does really receive a salary, or ought to. I being the only person interested in the matter, trust you will pardon this brief allusion to it.

Now, as I have served three years as Mayor, and am about entering upon a fourth term, I am convinced that my efforts in the past have not been entirely unproductive of good results, and can only hope they will not be less so in the future.

I have never received either cash or script, not even money to meet my cash disbursements which at times were considerable, neither do I claim anything now, but I do ask you to compare the duties performed by me and their results with those of my predecessors, and whatever your conclusions are will be perfectly satisfactory to me. I remain, gentlemen,

Yours respectfully,
WM. TOOLE.

On motion the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Council adjourned till called together by the Mayor.

DUNKIN IS PETERBOROUGH.

The following taken from the Montreal Witness shows what considered ideas of the opinion taken by the "Antis" of Ashburnham, Lobelield and Apsley, in submitting their By-laws in order to defeat the votes of a large majority of the people of the County:—

The Dunkin Act has been carried in the County of Peterboro by nearly one thousand majority. For municipal purposes, the town is separate from the county, and in the town the Act was some weeks ago carried by more than one hundred majority, so that in the entire county the traffic will soon be under the ban of the law. The town cannot serve as a bar-room for the county. The councillors have finished their defeat in the county and have been trying to prepare against it by raising some legal quibble by which they might fight for the chance to sell in one or two municipalities; but we suppose that they themselves would not give much for their chances of success. In Ashburnham, which is immediately opposite Peterboro on the Otonabee river, and connected by a bridge, they had the by-law submitted by a subservient council, when it was defeated by a majority of eight or nine. In some back townships they had it submitted in a similar manner, and were likewise successful by a very narrow majority. Their hope is that as there is a provison against the submission of the by-law twice to any municipality in one year, they will be permitted to sell in three municipalities. We do not think that their little piece of trickery will avail them much, however. We do not know that even the letter of the law can be twisted to bear their interpretation of it, and certainly the breach of the spirit of it, which is to give the majority in each county the decision in the matter, would be most flagrant. We feel pretty certain, therefore, that the philanthropic project to make Ashburnham a bar-room for all the country centering at Peterboro will be a complete failure, except in the discredit which will be attached to the disgraceful attempt. The priant majority of the villagers will be looked after in spite of themselves.

PETERBOROUGH GAOL.

From the Tenth Annual Report of the Inspector of Asylums and Prisons, promptly laid before Parliament on the first day of the Session we glean the following information concerning Peterborough Gaol for the year ending 30th September last:—

The commitments during the year numbered 128, and of this number of prisoners 101 were males and 39 females; the number of re-committals was 63; and the greatest number confined at any one time was 18, and the smallest number 5: four of the male prisoners were under 16 years of age: 67 were committed for the first time, 25 for the second, 15 for the third, and 29 for more than three times; one was acquitted on trial and discharged; six were in for want of sureties to keep the Peace, one as a witness; one was a debtor; two were of unsound mind. Of the 119 under sentence during the year, 87 were males and 30 were females; one was removed to the Central Prison after commitment; seven to the Central Prison direct; two to the Penitentiary; one to the reformatory; while 101 went to the gaol for detention till the expiration of their term of sentence or payment of fine. Of these 77 were sentenced for less than 30 days, ten from 30 to 60 days, not including last term; nine from 60 days to two months; eight from two to three months; two from three to four months; seven from five to six months; two from nine to twelve months; one from one to two years; two from two to three years; and one for a period to the Provincial Reformatory. On the evening of the 30th September three males and four females remained in the gaol, one being under sentence for less than two months; five from two to four months; and one was held for default of sureties to keep the Peace.

Of the total number of prisoners (128) confined during the year 76 were Canadians, 15 English, 25 Irish, 3 Scotch and one Yankee; 45 were Roman Catholics, 44 Episcopalians, 5 Presbyterians, and 23 Methodists; 35 were married and 74 unmarried; 63 could neither read nor write; 39 were temperate and 21 intemperate.

The classification of offences for which prisoners were committed is as follows:—Abusive and obscene language, 1; accessory, 1; abduction, 1; assault, 1; breach of Peace, 5; breach of By-laws, 2; passing counterfeit money, 1; cruelty to animals, 1; debt, 1; injuring property, 2; drunk and disorderly, 11; house-breaking and robbery, 1; larceny, 15; lunacy, 3; manslaughter, 1; prostitution, 4; receiving stolen goods, 3; selling liquor without license, 4; trespass, 1; vagrancy, 39; offences not enumerated, 45.

The occupations of prisoners were:—Barber, 1; blacksmiths, 2; shoemakers, 5; butchers, 1; cabinet-makers, 3; cigar-maker, 1; farmers, 5; hotel-keeper, 1; labourers, 73; merchant, 1; millers, 2; plumbers and painters, 2; prostitutes, 8; tailors, 1; watch-makers, 1; weavers, 3; no occupation, 23.

During the year there were two deaths in the prison.

No cash revenue was derived from labour of prisoners. The daily cost of rations per head was 13½ cents, and the regulations with respect to dietary were properly observed. The number of cells in the gaol is 18, and there are four distinct wards. The maintainance of twenty prisoners was defrayed by the Province, and that of 110 by the municipalities; the total number of days' custody of Government prisoners numbered 832, and those of the municipal prisoners 2974. The cost of food, clothing and maintenance was $1,138.75, the official salaries amounted to $1,695, and the cost of repairs was $398.81, making a total of $3,627.38. The average cost per prisoner was $20.21, the average for food, clothing, fuel, maintenance and repairs being $11.78, and the average for salaries and wages, $8.42. The amount of salaries is made up as follows:—Gaoler, $599; matron, $160; turnkey, $375; surgeon, $120.

The following is the Inspector's Report:—This Gaol was examined on the 28th of November, when nine prisoners—four males and five females—were in custody. With the exception of two sentenced for larceny, all the prisoners were vagrants or disorderly characters. The Gaol throughout, including the yards, was scrupulously clean. The attention of the Building Committee was called to a few repairs of a trifling nature, which were necessary. The supply of bedding and clothing was reported to be sufficient for the Gaol wants, but one sentenced prisoner was not clothed in the prison garb, which violation of the rules the authorities were instructed to correct. The Gaoler was absent at the time of my visit and no one had been put in his place. The Sheriff was instructed to see that when leave of absence is granted to a Gaol official, a substitute is appointed. At twelve, was called to the rule requiring the matron to be always present when any male official enters the female corridors, which was not the case on the occasion in question. The dietary regulations I found were not strictly complied with, inasmuch as the Gaoler receives nine cents per day per prisoner, for supplying the meat and vegetables, the bread being furnished under contract. Although the pecuniary interest of the Gaoler in the matter is of little or no value, still the violation of the rule prohibiting any official having such interest could not be allowed and, therefore, the Sheriff was instructed to have the furnishing of the whole of the Gaol supplies submitted to public competition.

The books were examined and found to be correctly kept, but not altogether in accordance with instructions. The omissions were pointed out.

The German and Russian courts go into mourning three weeks for Victor Emmanuel. A court circular says that Queen Victoria received the news of Victor Emmanuel's death with deep regret. The deceased was always a friend of England. The Pope, on receiving the news of the death of the King, said:—'I expected it, and had pardoned him; let us pray for the repose of his soul.'

Victor Emmanuel on his death-bed is said to have declared he had always felt an affection for the Pope, and to have expressed his regret if he had personally displeased him. A bill is to be introduced into the Italian Parliament appointing the Pantheon as the burial place of the Royal family.

When the weather gets cold, don't keep your children in the house and bleach them by a coal stove. Wrap them up warm and send them out to roll in the snow. It will bring the rose to their cheek and the winter sun won't tan them. Pure fair, no matter how cold, never hurts any one, if they be kept warm and dry. The danger of our northern winter comes more from the close air of stove-warmed rooms than the furious blasts of the coldest of winter's winds.

PROVED FACTS.—Old saws, like political promises frequently embody falsities instead of fact. For generations back the people have handed down to them the asseveration that 'a green Christmas makes a fat church-yard.' The truth is that since the establishment of a system of vital statistics, the reverse is proved to be the case. The unusually moderate weather incident to the past month has been favorable, as we have observed from the statements made by the Health Department of New York the average deaths for the two weeks ending Dec. 29th, 1877, per cent. less than for the corresponding weeks of 1876. Mild weather means less suffering, less liability to many of the dangerous ailments to which most of us are heir.

AN APPEAL TO VERNON.

O Vernor, O Vernor, O where can you be?
Are you digging up phosphates, or are you at sea?
Are you studying earthquakes—their tunnels and moods?
Are you up in the sky, in high latitudes?

Or perhaps you may be in some carbonized vein
Where bituminous coal doth enlighten your brain;
Or, if your not there, you may be on some shore
Engaged in preparing geological lore!

It isn't unlikely you're in the Nor' West,
The land of prime tubers which Canadas loves best;
Or may be you're pondering new national schemes
Absorbing your prospects, your hopes and your means.

Wherever you are, I'd much like to learn;
Though I am not a prophet, I know you'll return,
But if you're on ocean, in space or on heather,
You'll confer a vast favour by changing the weather

Pray turn out the clerk, who has served long enough,
For during your absence, he's been cutting up rough.
We're sick of the slush, the sleet and the dead,
We're heartily tired of tramping through mud.

Now, can't you please send us a keen frosty spell?
Or a week or so's snow would perhaps do as well,
We sigh for some skating—and then, only think!
They'll elect you a member for life at the rink!

O Vernor, dear Vernor, pray try and arrange,
For a month or two's sleighing by way of a change.

SERVANTGALISM,

By Clara Augusta.

Mrs. Tom Bryce in an unlucky hour quarreled with Bridget, her cook and made of all work.

A very trifling thing, indeed, started the unpleasantness. Bridget had taken a little too much whiskey at the 'illigant' wake given to Mike Maloney's child Peter, and it was altogether owing to the whiskey that Bridget wiped the coffee cups on the tail of her dress, instead of using the towel provided for the purpose. It would all have been well enough if Mrs. Bryce had not happened into the kitchen just in time to witness the performance. She hardly approved of the new style, and made a remark to that effect to Bridget. Bridget requested her to mind her own business. A few more words passed between them, and then Bridget packed her trunk, which was a red silk handkerchief and a carpet-bag, and left the domicile of Bryce for ever.

Mrs. Bryce was in despair, and told Tom so. Tom was an unfeeling fellow, and went on smoking and reading his paper just as if nothing had happened. Mrs. Bryce began to cry, and then of course Tom had to put everything by and cuddle and console her, for they had only been married a year, and life had not turned sour for them.

'Advertise, darling,' said Tom; 'just as easy as can be. There'll be flocks of 'em come, and you can take your pick.'

So Mrs. Bryce advertised.

She mentioned two o'clock p.m. as the hour when she would give audience. At two o'clock the tide set in. There were fifteen of the 'experienced cooks' in her sitting-room at the same time.

No. 1 was a tall, blonde lady, with six ruffles on her dress, a panier of startling proportions, which rustled ominously with every movement of the wearer, and false hair enough of various shades of red to set up a dealer at wholesale.

'What is your name?' asked Mrs. Bryce.

'Adelina Victoria Editha Marianna Lane, from Halifax,' said the young lady. 'I've lived only in the best families. They always keep a footman where I work, and a girl to do the scrubbing and chamber work. And I never eats with the help. And I has my Wednesday and Sunday afternoons all to myself, and liberty for Henry to come say time and set in the dining-room. And I nearly forgot, ma'am, to ask you what make your pianny was, for I play considerable myself, and I'm particular—I never use none but Chickering's parlor grand.'

'I don't want you,' said Mrs. Brice, shortly, 'You can go.'

Miss Lane looked surprised, but tossed her head loftily, and remarked:

'Yes, I will go with pleasure. People like you would never suit me. I've always been used to Brussels carpets; yours, I see, are in-grain,' and she sailed away.

No. 2. was a short, thick-set Hibernian, with a tongue which ran at both ends. The examination began:

'Can you cook?'

'Cook, is it? Sbure, mam, and haven't I been the cook for his Royal Highness, the Duke of Divonshire? Cook? Ah! it's Mary McNary that can give a body the dhippey and the gout in a month wid her rich gravies and her plum puddings!'

'Can you roast a joint?'

'An' sbure we niver have j'ints in Ireland!

'Can you make pastry?'

'Pastry, is it? An' faith, mam, but yees got me fist there? Niver seed nay in all the born days of me!'

'You can go,' said Mrs. Bryce; and Mary made way for No. 3—Miss Amabel St. Marie, as she called herself.

This young lady announced herself as got obliged to work for a living—not at all. She wanted something to take up her time, and had concluded to live out, if she could secure a place in some respectable family, where she could be treated as a friend and companion.

'Can you cook?'

'I suppose I could,' said Mademoiselle Amabel, 'but I am very particular about my hands—very. I always use glycerine on them at night, and sleep in gloves. I dare say I could cook, but the pots and kettles black one's hands so badly, though I might wear rubber gloves.'

'Can you make beds?'

'Dear me! My side is weak, and George wouldn't like me to lift pillows and bolsters, and things. George is very particular about my lifting!'

'Who is George?'

'My—ah—that is the young man I am engaged to!' simpered Amabel, gleaming at her self in the glass, and bringing down into view another curl on her forehead. 'Dear me! Mrs. Bryce, what a dreadful mirror. I declare it makes me look as dark as an Indian! You must change it if I stay!'

'You won't stay!' said Mrs. Bryce, with energy. 'I want to hire a woman to work and not a parlor ornament. Who comes next?'

A stout Dutch girl presented herself.

'Can you cook?'

'Nix!'

'Eh?'

'Nix!'

'Are you deaf?' in a loud tone.

'Nix!' in a still louder tone.

'What are you here for?'

'Yah!' And here ensued a very expressive pantomime, calculated to make Mrs. Bryce understand that the applicant could do all things except talk English.

Next came a 'respectable colored person.'

This lady could do all the work that would ever be required of anybody, but she was a Methodist, and could not work with any one who was not a Methodist. Mrs. Bryce, unfortunately, was an Episcopalian, and would not consent to change her religion to accommodate Phillis, and the lady of color departed very much scandalized.

All were examined but two, and Mrs. Bryce in despair called up the oldest one. She was a middle-aged woman, and very dignified.

'Before going any further, ma'am,' said she to Mrs. Bryce, 'allow me to enquire who was your grandfather? I am descended from an English earl myself, and I am very particular—very. I never come in families where pedigree is not all right.'

'I am not a horse!' cried Mrs. Bryce, indignantly.

'Certainly not; but of course I should wish to know if your family correspondeth. And it seems to me that I once heard of a man by the name of Bryce that was hung! Any relation of yours, ma'am?'

'Leave this house instantly!' said Mrs. Bryce.

'Not till I get ready!' returned the descendant of the earl.

'Faith and we'll see about that!' cried the other waiting servant, starting up. 'It's mine Maggie Sullivan will get with her hands folded and see a real lady insulted. Take that, ye thafe of the world!' and she gave the lady of pedigree a push that destroyed her equilibrium, and down she came with her feet in the pit-taties and her head in Mrs. Bryce's lap! And before she could fully recover herself, the energetic Miss Maggie had dragged her out of doors and closed the house upon her.

Of course Mrs. Bryce hired Maggie on the spot; and, as luck would have it, Maggie was a treasure, and Maggie's mistress is a very happy and contented woman; for she has secured what not one housekeeper out of a hundred ever manages to secure—good help.

ADVICE TO GIRLS.

No woman can say truthfully that she does not care whether she is pretty or not. Every woman does care. The immutable laws of her being have made physical attractiveness as much a natural glory to her as strength is to a man.

Here I may be told that what I am saying is superfluous, for perfect beauty has no need of art to enhance it, and that those who have been born with head, or, worse, with perfectly uninteresting features, do not want to be told that physical attractiveness is indispensable to them. But it is especially to the plain and to the generally ill-favored that I address these words of advice and warning, and should beauty's self find a few useful hints, I see no reason why she should not avail herself of them! I know that there are people who look well anywhere and any how; no vulgarity, no carelessness of speech, dress, or attitude, seems able to distinguish them; but these rarely gifted persons are but the exceptions that prove the rule; and even in their case what Sir Philip Sidney spake is true—there is that in well chosen surroundings.

"Which doth even beauty beautify.
And most bewitch the captived eye," and Herrick, too, in his 'Poetry of Dress,' seems to have an astute appreciation of how beauty may be beautified. These men lived in the sixteenth century—a time when color in dress was still an understood and valued adjunct, and before he had learned to make our dwellings intolerable to the eye.

An immense number of ill-tempered ugly women are ill-tempered because they are ugly. They do not know it; their friends don't understand and make no allowance; but heavy, indeed, is the burden upon these poor women, and pernicious is its effect on their moral character very often. I have heard it said that ugly women are always bad-tempered; this is an overstatement, but there is a certain degree of truth in the saying, cruel as it is. An ugly child cares nothing for its ugliness, but when it grows older, and perceives that it lacks something which is prized and honored, and is fretted with the deficiency, and neglected through it, and is reminded of it every time it looks in the glass or in another face, the constant disappointment begins very early to embitter the whole nature, and creates a melancholy shyness; and when the desire to attract awakes with years, and the young girl finds her fairer friends preferred before her, the vain endeavors to please by other means disheartens her, and she grows sarcastic, ill-natured, envious of everybody, though half unconsciously; many other faults follow, and she becomes unhappy and morose.

But one chief aim I have in writing these reflections is to prove that no woman need be ugly if she knows her points, and points of attractiveness every woman has. There is manner, there is mind, as well as physique; but while I should advise all women to become as intelligent and clever as they can, whether they be plain or pretty, still I wish more beauty and the study of 'points' were made more an acknowledged and honorable art than it is by all those to whom God has given eyes and an intelligent brain. It is not sin or a folly to long, as every woman longs, to be lovely. She is so constituted, and her beauty 'is a glory to her.'—Mrs. Haweis in the Bazar.

F. W.—POISON.

Woman can't read a boy's nature as men can, and they might as well own it up. The Shibley street mother who yesterday sent her boy to a drug store with a bottle and a sealed note imagined that she was sharper than the serpent's tooth when she wrote to the druggist: "Sent me half a pint ot port wine, and write on the label 'P. W.—Poison." The druggist followed orders, and when the boy got outside he tore off the wrapper and read the label;

'P. W.—poison,' he mused, as he walked along—'wonder what that is? P. W. doesn't stand for bed-bugs, 'cos I know it, and it doesn't mean rats, either. P. W. can't be hair dye, nor scalp-wash, and I'm going to touch my tongue to it.

He touched. It tasted so good that he took a sip, and meeting three or four boys just then, the crowd entered a lumber yard and P. W'd the contents of that bottle till only a gill was left. Then one of the lads ran home after a dipper of water, filled up the bottle, and the Shibley street boy trotted homewards whispering:—

'P. W. means party weak, and if she finds it so she mustn't blame nobody but the druggist.'

AN ECCENTRIC CLERGYMAN.

The Rev. Mr. Scott, of the Cowgate, Edinburgh, was a man of some popularity, but seldom on good terms with his flock for all that. One day as he was preaching on Job, he said—'My brethren, Job, in the first place, was a sorely tried man; Job, in the second place, was an uncommonly patient man; Job, in the third place, never preached in the Cowgate; fourthly, and lastly, if Job had preached here, od help his patience.' Another occasion found him equally vexed by the noise made by some of the congregation entering the church after the usual time. After he had borne it, as he thought, quite long enough, he got up in the pulpit and cried—'Oh that I could hear the pennies birlin' in the plate at the door wi' half the noise ye mark wi' yer cheapin' shoon! Oh that Paul had been here wi' a long wooden ladle! for ye coppers are strangers in a far country; and for yer silver and gold—let us pray!' Once, at a wedding, a tough fowl was placed before him to be carved. 'This is an ancient hen,' says he, 'yea, a venerable patriarch. It's said enoseh, in a conscience, to be the mither o' the cock that crawed to Peter.'

THE HESSIAN FLY.

The London Advertiser says:—"Some time ago this paper contained an account of the damage done to wheat by the Hessian fly or 'weevil.' Many thought that the prolonged growing weather would increase the harm done by giving the fly a longer time to work. We are pleased to learn, however, that it is the opinion of some of the best farmers in the country that the weather mitigated the evil in this way:—The warm weather drove the main growth of the wheat plant past the first hoops leaves of 'coverings,' thus exposing to the weather the fatal part on which the grub fastens itself. Besides this the increased growth of the plant will give it greater strength to defy the confounding silence of its insect enemy. This will be cheering news to many who feared that their crops were seriously damaged. It is also believed that the parasite which preys upon the Hessian fly has taken advantage of the warm weather to increase in large numbers and multiply."

The Supreme Court will open at Ottawa on the 25th instant.

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND THE GREAT PYRAMID
Are among the Leading Questions of the day—but a subject all should bear in mind, as that
After the 1st of January, 1878, I will sell goods 10 per cent cheaper
THAN HERETOFORE, FOR CASH AND CASH ONLY.
I would advise those who are in the habit of running long-winded accounts, and settling them by slow notes, to go and deal where they can be accommodated for six or twelve months as they may require, and when they want to SAVE MONEY to bring the cash to me, and I will satisfy any reasonable person that anything can buy Goods from me from Twelve to Fifteen per cent Cheaper than they can purchase them from those who give credit.
THIRTY DAYS' CREDIT WILL BE GIVEN
parties we consider in a position and honest enough to pay on demand. All accounts rendered monthly, and if not then settled 12 per cent interest will be charged. A Call Solicited, and we know you won't go away disappointed,

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,
—FOR—
Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.
The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.
Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.
Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.
It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents' worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.
An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.
THE AMERICAN EYE SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.
There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.
The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.
They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.
They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.
They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.
Prepared by GEORGE E. MITCHELL, Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. 36-tf

Those Shades are manufactured in the most substantial manner, and will be promptly attended to and executed with despatch.

ADVANTAGES:

The advantages of these Shades are that they are clean and cool and ventilating, strong and durable, can be let down to any height by one pull of the cord, and are so simple that a child can work them, and they will not get out of order. They are also self rolling, and are so constructed that they cannot fall to pieces.

These Shades are sold by the square foot, and not according to the window. 19-76 Also a small charge for fixing up.

RAILWAY BY-LAW.

As will be seen in another column, the Town Council have submitted a By-law to change some of the conditions of the By-law granting $180,000 bonus to the Ottawa and Toronto Railway. The same matter was brought before the County Council yesterday, and laid over until the June Session.

The object will be gleaned from our report of the speeches at a public meeting held in town on Monday evening. We have not had time to give the subject much consideration but hope to be able to do so at an early date.

A REFORM RIDICULOUSLY RETARDED.

We last week pointed to the propriety of a change in the sittings of the Ontario Legislature, by the substitution of a morning session, for that after SIX o'clock which is continued ad infinitum in a close chamber, rendered still more injurious to the health of members by the glare, heat and waste of oxygen caused by the gas lights. The same day our article appeared the subject was brought up in the House; but it was far from being discussed. It was unfortunate in its introduction, in its treatment by the only man (Dr. Clarke) who spoke upon it, as any length, and in its reception by the members in the light of a Clarkeism rather than a matter worthy of serious consideration. The first division of the session may be regarded as a mad-cap freak, and it was on Dr. Clarke's motion "for a select committee with instructions to amend the first and second rules of the House, by providing that the time for the ordinary meeting of the House shall be at an earlier hour than three o'clock in the afternoon." It may be that the mover thought he was getting at the idea of a morning session; but it will be seen that there is a glorious indefiniteness about his call for "a select committee with instructions to amend." Followed up as the motion was by one of Dr. Clarke's speeches, there can be little wonder that the House got hilarious. In vain did the Attorney-General suggest that the motion be withdrawn, stating his belief that the subject was worthy of consideration; and in vain did the mover ask a withdrawal. Cries of "Question!" aided the diversion, and forced the division whereby the motion was lost by a vote of 28 yeas to 40 nays.

Considering the circumstances under which it was taken, the vote is not so adverse as appears on the face of the division list. It was not really taken on the question at all; but for fun. This will account for some of the names of rural representatives that appear among the nays, that of the funny man from East Durham, for instance, as well as that of the Almanac man from Owen Sound, and good-natured Moses Springer. The whole of the lawyers are of course included in the forty-nine, Mr. Scott standing by his professional brethern of the Provincial capital in their desire to spend their days in the Courts and their nights in the House. Dr. O'Sullivan, in spite of his natural love of the Irish for fun, was not carried away in the general sport, and preserved his sobriety long enough to vote yea. One member of the Ministry, Mr. Wood voted for the reference of the question to a Committee. All things considered, therefore, those who favor a morning rather than a night sitting of the House have no reason to be discouraged by the vote of Wednesday last. The solid lawyer vote against the consideration of the question carries a lesson to those constituencies who send members of the legal profession, resident in Toronto to represent them in the Provincial Parliament. If such men cannot make some professional sacrifices for their constituents, for their country, and for the $800 per session it pays them, they had better give place to others. If rural members have to suffer for the convenience of their lawyer colleagues, it then becomes the duty of rural constituencies to see that there are so few lawyers elected that they cannot control a majority in the House; and if lawyers outside of Toronto persist in helping their brethern of the gown, they too must be weakened in numbers. The proposed reform will no doubt come up again, for it is certain the agitation for it will not cease now that it has been fairly started.

ORANGE INCORPORATION.

In a late issue we gave our views on the Orange Bills and the manner in which they have been used for party purposes. We then wrote in the expectation that they would again come up at the present session; and called on those who might introduce them to avoid the causes that formerly led to their certain rejection, which causes we also pointed out. These were a sinking of the plain question beneath the plane of the minority, and the presentation of a demand rather than a request to the Government, a thing decidedly incompatible with the primary idea of loyalty, professed by the Orange Order. Whether the society referred to is to blame for this indirectly we of course cannot tell; but we maintain it is the way in which these Orange Bills have been handled by their proposed friends in the House led to their rejection, and naturally so. Neither is it improbable in the light of events that this is just the result desired by the political tricksters who had them in hand. They simply wanted to catch Orange votes by pretended zeal for the interests of the body and by "tutoring the Orange heart" in opposition to those who "refused them incorporation." The only complaint we have to make is, that Orange incorporation has never yet been discussed on its merits, but that it and the Order it refers to have been used as political tools by Orange politicians and political Orangemen. Now we discover that in spite of the former boast of continued agitation those who took the Orange Bill in hand have no intention of introducing them this session; and there is a strong suspicion that this omission is for a political purpose. It was the expressed desire of the Orange body as such that the question should be brought up year after year, and those who proposed to act for the the Orange Order were bound in honor and fairness to respect that desire and act upon it. The excuses given are paltry, and also contradictory, Mr. Merrick states that the intention was to circulate petitions a constituencies represented by Government supporters to show such members that their constituents would support them in voting for Orange incorporation, but that it was found impossible to get these petitions in time to present to the House. No wonder this caused laughter in the Legislature. There has surely been time enough to circulate petitions since the last session of the House, and have them presented at the opening of this session, if necessary—that is, if the expected signatures could be got to them. But such petitions could be presented at any time during the session, and if the names were forthcoming there is yet time to get these petitions before the end of the session. Even the delay of petitions, or indeed there non-existence, need not have led to the quenching of the Opposition's pretended zeal in this matter. That no notice of application was given in the Ontario Gazette, as required by law, looks very much as if the abandonment of the Bill for the present session was premeditated If not then those who undertook to forward them are too great fools to be entrusted with anything, and too ignorant of the commonest proceedure to be worthy of a seat in the House at all. Mr. Merrick certainly did not show up as a wise man when he displayed his belief that a notice in the Orange Sentinel was sufficient, and when he was laughed at he still further made an ass of himself and completely "let the cat out of the bag" by exclaiming "well if the Government don't choose to pass these measures next session, I can assure them they will soon give place to those who will!" The whole secret is contained in this outburst. The evident intention of the Opposition is, to delay the discussion of these Orange Bills till next session; just before a general election, in the hope that they can then create an excitement which will prove of benefit to them at the polls, by making Orangemen political tools then, as they have too frequently been in the past. Is it not about time that members of the Orange Order rejected the guidance of blind prejudice, and followed the path pointed out by reason?

THE PROTECTIONIST PARTY.

A Conservative Convention was held in Toronto last week, we are told for the perfecting of the party organization. The delegates we are informed by the party press "placed on record" the following resolutions:

"1. They are satisfied that the welfare of Canada requires the adoption of a national financial policy, which, by a judicious readjustment of the tariff will benefit and foster the agricultural, mining, and manufacturing interests of the Dominion.

"2. That no such readjustment will be satisfactory to the interests affected or to the country, if adopted as a provisional means only to meet a temporary exigency, or to supply a temporary deficit, nor unless it is made and carried out as a national policy.

"3. That until a reciprocity of trade is established with our neighbors, Canada should move in the direction of a reciprocity of tariffs so far as her varied interests may demand.

"4. That it is the duty of the people of Canada to force upon the attention of the Government and Parliament of the Dominion the necessity of carrying out their views, or to withhold or withdraw their confidence from any Government which may fail, from want of will, or want of ability, to enforce them by legislative enactment."

The "national financial policy" spoken of in the first and second of these resolutions may mean anything or nothing. Perhaps the framers of the resolutions know what they mean, perhaps the delegates know what they were voting upon, but we doubt it. It is hard to imagine any re-adjustment of the tariff which will do anything but harm, in attempting to benefit the farmers at the expense of the miners and manufacturers, while the miners are to be benefitted at the expense of the farmers and manufacturers, and at the same time the manufacturers must be benefited at the expense of the farmers and miners. In this sort of circumlocutory policy, we can't for the life of us see where the gain is to come in if all be benefitted alike, and unless such be the case some one class will be given an unfair advantage. Nor can we imagine why the lumberman and fisherman should be left out of this round about game, unless, indeed it be that they are to be made the victims on which the farmers, miners, and manufacturers are to fatten; and were there no fear the three industries favored would soon begin to fight over the spoils, and to prey upon each other in a very unamiable fashion, thus the permanent effects of this so called "national policy" would be only mischievous, and its advocates declare that any readjustment such as they propose will not be satisfactory "as a provisional means only to meet a temporary exigency, or to supply a temporary deficit". Surely they do not mean that exigencies and deficits should not be temporary; and if not, how is any adjustment to do more than supply a temporary necessity. Or to put it differently:—Unless a re-adjustment would cause the exigency to be merely temporary, where's the use of any readjustment at all? And if the exigency continued, would there not have to be a continued series of readjustments? Better leave the business of the country to regulate itself, and avoid tariff revision except when it is forced by a demand for revenue, which demand can only be temporary.

The third resolution of this precious series is more definite than its predecessors, inasmuch as it declares plainly what its farmers think should be done by Canada. Their idea is that until reciprocity of trade is established with the United States, this country should adopt the principle of reciprocity of tariffs. But even this resolution has added to it a saving clause limiting reciprocity of tariffs within the demands of Canada's varied interests; and upon such demands we will wager no two of those who voted for the resolution can agree. But the resolution fairly commits the Conservative party to the principle of reciprocity of tariffs; that is they virtually pledge themselves to adopt no fiscal policy of their own should they return to power, but [illegible] in accordance with that of the United States, copy Yankee imposts, protect as the Yankees protect, and imitate them in what the resolutions call a "national financial policy." If the financial policy of the Conservatives be that of the United States, Canada may well pray to be preserved from Conservative rule, for all the financial resolution ever perpetrated in a civilized country, those of our neighbors to the south are the greatest.

The fourth and last resolution of the series has no connection whatever with the others, and while we are willing to agree to its assertion we hold that it has no logical bearing whatever on the question of reciprocal tariffs.

CHANGED HANDS.

The Review has changed hands, Mr. Robert Romaine going out and Messrs E. J. Toker and John Carnegie taking possession. Mr. Robt. Romaine's valedictory appeared last week, and also, the pronunciamento of the new firm. During the last few years the wane of intellectual vigor of the late proprietor was too evident in the columns of our contemporary. As a return to second childhood crept on him, his love for puttering in mud puddles became again so intense, that lately, his chief pleasure lay in dishing up his much loved clabber (to use a Scotch phrase) for his patrons. With increasing years and increasing cares came a carelessness for truth, and this too often controlled by an uncontrollable pettishness of temper and no trifling degree of selfishness often rendered him ridiculous. Possessed of no small share of vanity also, on account of his being over forty years a practical printer, he has witnessed the growing influence of this paper, and the mechanical skill with which it is weekly got up, and has found that the more reasonable, practicable and progressive views advocated in the EXAMINER are received with more favor by a discerning public than the crudities and old fashioned whims of an old fashioned man; hence he has fretted on the bits, and not unfrequently manifested a disposition towards us very much akin to desperation, but we became used to such things, attributing them to dotage.

At the close of his newspaper career he tries to draw a modicum of consolation from the fancy that the politics of the Review are and "always have been conservative," but a review of the prospectus of 1853 will convince him that he started a Reformer, on-the-fence, or independent; as even the Montreal Gazette, in a notice of its appearance says: that it indulged too much in the "cant phrase reform." But people yet hint that Mr. F. Hincks is going over to the Conservatives about that time succeeded in winning the affections of the then Reform-independent Review, and all will admit that he has since worshipped his adorable Conservatism, because more tangible expressions of their affection have been at their disposal. Having retired from newspaper life we must deal leniently with his weaknesses. He has chosen a business more congenial to his instincts, but were we to follow his example, when the late proprietor of this paper retired from its management, we might refer to Mr. R's peculiar christian outbursts in which, in extreme fits of piety, he is said to use other forms of prayer than the Disciples were taught from the Mount, and we might be ready to advise him to withdraw to some purer stream than the Otonabee River, and, there perform diverse washings to purge him from some of the dust of the Review office. Ah, yes, and, we might insinuate that his separation from the Review office has a financial meaning akin to struggling and which must have caused regrets, indeed.

With regard to the new firm, we believe that Mr. Toker will conduct the paper in a fair and honorable way, and although Mr. Carnegie has long been warmly opposed to the EXAMINER, both are in altered circumstances, as the old hand that controlled these columns has, like Mr. Romaine, also retired from newspaper life, and will not, like Mordicai, be at the Kings gate to vex him. We therefore wish the new firm success, only asking fair treatment and no favors.

THE Review's reference of last week to the "Scott Fraud" was wholly unnecessary.

TOO LATE.—Dr. O'Sullivan did not take his seat in the House of Assembly till several days after the session commenced.

Mr. Scott is appointed on two standing committees of the Legislature, that of Privileges and Elections and that of Private Bills. Dr. O'Sullivan is also on two Railways and Standing Orders.

THE Review last week indulged in some mean innuendoes, built upon the late claims of the government against Mr. John McDonald, and leaving suspicious inferences to be drawn against Mr. McWilliams, the timber agent and the Crown Land Commissioners. If the Review wants more light on this subject, wherein it appears to have scented a small "scandal" it had better invoke the brilliancy of Dr. O'Sullivan, by asking him to move for another return. Suspicion surely is the father of Scandal, and Malice the grand father.

AT the workingmen's banquet in Toronto the only workingman who spoke was the one who said to Sir John "Here's $250 worth of "gold watch and chain for you. Put it in "your pocket," The other speakers were Sir John(lawyer), Mr. Leader (lawyer), Mr. Cameron (lawyer), Mr. Macdougall (lawyer), Mr. James Beaty (Leader manufacturer).

IN his last Annual Report as Superintendent of the Kingston Asylum, laid before the Ontario Parliament last week, Doctor Dickson gives his opinion of the use of catabolic liquors, either in sickness or health, in the following unmistakable terms:—

"Alcohol whether given in the form of beer, wine, or whiskey, has, in every case the same destructive tendency. I am well aware that some physicians claim a power for alcohol it does not possess. They prescribe it as a restorative, and assert that in wasting diseases it is useful in arresting or preventing waste of tissue, neither of which effects I am quite positive it possesses, and for those purposes it is perfectly futile to prescribe it. I am sure that in a state of health there is not a single organ or tissue of the body that derives any benefit from its use, and quite as positive that it is a most destructive agent to every organ and tissue of the body, either in a state of health or disease. Most mistaken ideas have long been entertained of the efficiency of alcohol in many diseases of the system and its general effects on the human body, but actual experiments have convinced several of the ablest and most professional thinkers in the medical profession, that it has always acted in every form proved itself to be the most pernicious agent that was ever employed—mentally or otherwise. During the time I considered that its use in a state of health never necessary, and in a state of disease it is most injurious, I have, for years past, prohibited its use in this Asylum."

BOBCAYGEON AND LINDSAY RAILWAY.

It appears to me that the people of Bobcaygeon are making a great mistake in trying to get a railway to Lindsay, and I think they will find my words true should they ever succeed in their project which, however, I don't believe they will do. It no doubt, would be a good thing for Mr. Boyd to have this road made because it would enable him to have two outlets for his lumber at Lindsay, and would then enable him to drive a hard bargain with the road—setting the water route against the road—and the same thing would happen when he got to Lindsay. It would then be a good thing for Mr. Boyd, but it would be ruinous to the business men of Bobcaygeon, and would make it a mere feeder to Lindsay and to Toronto, and they will find this out when they see all their best customers daily going to those two towns for their supplies. A road from Bobcaygeon to Lindsay! What does that mean. It means that Lindsay and Toronto, by means of it, will drain away from this village nearly every dollar's worth of grain and other farm products which now find their way to Bobcaygeon. It means that all the supplies which now go from Bobcaygeon into the surrounding country would then come from Lindsay and Toronto. And what do the people expect they are going to do when they get to Lindsay, if they ever do get there, which I much doubt. I suppose their trade wants an outlet to, and an inlet from the sea—that is to and from Montreal, the seaport of all this western country. Well now are they going to obtain this by going to Lindsay. How are they going to facilitate their connection with Montreal by going further away from Montreal—which they will do by going to Lindsay. And I wonder if the business men of Bobcaygeon have calculated the large additional expense of carrying their produce to Lindsay on its way to the sea. If they have any produce to export it must go east. If they have none then they dont want a railway. And if they do want a railway then common sense must teach them to make it towards the east, and that the nearer they make it to the east the shorter the route and the less the cost of freight. And then again I wonder if the people of Bobcaygeon know the cost of a railway to Lindsay and the cost of working it if they get it there. I assume the distance to be fifteen miles, and the cost not less than twenty thousand dollars a mile, which would make the building of the road foot up just three hundred thousand dollars—the annual interest on which at only six per cent would be eighteen thousand dollars. And surely the people of Bobcaygeon ought to know what every body else knows, that the expense of working a railway increases according to the steepness of the road. And, let me ask, would the traffic over this short bit of railway pay working expenses, saying nothing of the eighteen thousand dollars of interest in the cost of construction. Would it pay even fifty per cent of the working expenses. I doubt it. And how is this bit of a road going successfully to compete with the Victoria road. The fact is the whole thing is a fiasco, except in so far as Mr. Boyd is concerned. To him it would be an advantage, but to the village and to the people it would be certain ruin. Well now this is my advice to the people of Bobcaygeon, let them make the best terms they can with Mr. Hogel to get a road from Bobcaygeon to Omemee, and let Mr. Hugel try and get Peterborough and the Grand Junction railway to make the connection between Omemee and Peterborough—and thus when the people of Bobcaygeon have say produce to ship, or goods to receive, they will be on the natural highway to the ocean, and they can buy and sell at Montreal. I may advert to this subject again.

A FRIEND.

The Imperial Parliament.

The Imperial Parliament was opened on Friday last by Royal Commission. The Speech from the Throne states that so long as England's neutrality is respected her attitude will remain unchanged, but expresses a desire that precautions be taken in the event of unexpected occurrences which may render it incumbent upon the country to interfere. During the debate on the Address in the House of Lords, both Earl Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury denied the existence of divisions in the Cabinet, and the Address was, after some debate, agreed to. In the House of Commons the debate, which was participated in by the Marquis of Hartington, Mr. Gladstone, and Sir Stafford Northcote, was brought to a close after an amendment had been offered by a Mitchell Henry praying for an examination into Irish grievances.

THE TORONTO OPPOSITION CONVENTION.

A few things have leaked out respecting the doings of the recent secret meeting in Toronto.

It was urged that a strenuous effort be made to get possession of the voters' lists of next year, and the hint was broadly given not to be too particular as to the means employed to attain the end desired.

It was resolved to make a combined provincial effort to promote the circulation of the Toronto Mail.

The question of "the sinews of war," was discussed. This is one of the chief stumbling-blocks in the way, as the days have gone by of supplies from Pacific Railway charters, Northern Railway sailings, Secret Service funds, and enforced contributions from Civil Service employees. As most of them present have been more in the habit of expecting to receive than to give money, it need hardly be said that the question, though important, was one of considerable delicacy. It was finally resolved to make a general levy on the pockets of the faithful throughout Ontario. How the appeal will be responded to time must tell.

The question of "Protection" was earnestly discussed. Some thought it a risky policy to cross the Rubicon and burn their boats behind them; but on Sir John A. Macdonald assuring them that by the "Protection" question alone could he "dish the Whigs," a reluctant unanimity was secured. We shall see in time how much shrewdness the ex-Premier has manifested in adopting the "Protection" dodge. We are inclined to think he has made as big a blunder as when he sold the Pacific charter to Sir Hugh Allan for money.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

Mr. Burnham unanimously re-elected Warden.—The old auditors re-appointed.—Mr. Carnegie appointed Sectional Chair.—Standing Committees for the year.

In accordance with law the newly elected county council assembled in the Court House, on Tuesday afternoon last, at 2 o'clock p. m.

There were present:—

J. Millar, Reeve of Otonabee,
J. Lang, Deputy Reeve of Otonabee.
J. Burnham, Reeve of Ashburnham.
T. G. Choate, Reeve of Dummer.
P. Costello, Reeve of Hamilton.
M. Sanderson, Reeve of Smith.
F. J. Bell, Deputy Reeve of Smith.
J. B. Pearce, Reeve of Norwood.
James Golborne, Reeve of Burleigh &c.
F. Birdsall, Reeve of Asphodel
W. Burgess, Reeve of Belmont.
Thomas Clarke, Reeve of Galway.
J. Hicks, Reeve of Harvey.
J. Dinwoodie, Reeve of Lakefield.
H. Collins, Reeve of North Monaghan.

The Clerk called the council to order, and asked them to elect a Warden for the ensuing year.

Moved by Mr. Millar, seconded by Mr. Birdsall,—That John Burnham, Esq., Reeve of Ashburnham, be Warden for the current year. There being no opposition Mr. Burnham was declared duly elected, and on making the usual declaration of office, was conducted to the chair by his mover and seconder, and briefly thanked the council for the honor conferred upon him of again electing him Warden of the county.

The minutes of the last day of the last session were read and confirmed.

AUDITORS APPOINTED.

Moved by Mr. Moloney, seconded by Mr. Costello,—That Mr. John J. Hall, be appointed auditor for the ensuing year.

The Warden nominated Mr. C. Burton as the other auditor.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

A communication was read from Mr. W. H. Scott, M. P. P., asking leave to address the council in reference to resubmitting the county by-law, granting aid to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway to the amount of $150,000, and changing the conditions.

Moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That Mr. Scott be heard.—Carried.

Mr. Scott, who was present, then addressed the council. His remarks were similar to those in another column, while addressing the public meeting in the Opera House on Monday Evening.

Moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Golborne,—That the Warden nominate a committee to consider the question of re-submitting a by-law.

The Warden then nominated Messrs. Choate, Pearce, Dinwoodie, Birdsall, Moloney, Millar and Sanderson a committee to consider the question.

COMMITTEE TO APPOINT STANDING COMMITTEES.

Moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That Messrs. Sanderson, Millar, Burgess, Golborne, Collins, Clarke, Costello, and the mover and seconder be a committee to draft the several Standing Committees for the year.—Carried.

SESSIONAL CLERK.

Moved by Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Bell,—That John Carnegie, Esq., be appointed Sessional Clerk for the current year.—Carried.

The council then adjourned to give the committee time to report on the re-submitting the Railway by-law. The following report was read by the Chairman:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The special Committee appointed to consider the application of the President of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company beg leave to report: Recommending that a by-law granting a bonus of $150,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company be submitted to the ratepayers of this county to be expended easterly from Peterborough with modifications of the clauses respecting the amount of aid to be obtained, and the claim in respect of work shops, and containing a clause to repeal former By-law for same amount.

They would also recommend that a Committee be appointed to draft a By-law in accordance with this report, making such alterations in the conditions of the former By-law as they may deem expedient.

THOS. GEO CHOATE,
Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Pearce the report was received and adopted.

Moved by Costello, seconded by Mr. Burgess that the special Committee appointed to consider the advisability of resubmitting the $150,000 by-law be re-appointed to draft a new by-law.—Carried.

On motion the Council adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment. All the members present.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON STANDING COMMITTEES.

On motion the Committee on standing Committees reported as follows:

The Committee appointed to draft the standing Committees for the year 1878, beg leave to report: recommending the following appointments viz:—

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. SANDERSON,
Chairman.

January 22nd, 1878.

On motion the report was received and adopted.

The remainder of the day was taken up by the committee in preparing the Toronto and Ottawa Railway By-law, which on division was laid over till the June session for further consideration.

LAKEFIELD.

AGRICULTURAL.—The annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of Lake field Smith and Ennismore was held in the Council Chamber in this village, on Thursday last, when the following Officers and Directors were elected for the ensuing year:—President, George Fitzgerald; Vice-President, T. H. Bell; Sec. Treas., M. S. Dean; Directors, Alexander Fitzgerald, Samuel McKibbin, R. A. Strickland, Isaac Garbutt, Geo. Scott, J. C. Sharin, Thos Young.

PUGILISTIC.—A genuine pugilistic encounter took place in this village last Thursday between two young men from the Township of Smith. Some time previous they had met to Selwyn, and were about to engage in a fight when the father of them interfered and put a stop to it, and afterwards lodged a complaint against the other for abusive and threatening language. On Thursday last the case came off and the charge was found, which was paid forthwith, and all interested proceeded to one of the hotels, where after having a drink or two, they agreed to shake the mats, which they did and afterwards fought it out in the street, after which they shook hands and went home, neither of them being much hurt

BY-LAW No.—

A By-Law to aid and assist the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company by giving by way of bonus to the said Company the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars in Debentures of the Town of Peterborough.

WHEREAS the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough is desirous that a railway should be constructed from the City of Toronto, through Cleveland Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa and the said Company under an Act of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario passed in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Huron and Quebec Railway Company" and amendments thereto are empowered to construct such a railway, and it is enacted that any Municipal Corporation which may be interested in securing the construction of the said railway or through any part of which or near which the railway or works of the said company shall pass or be situated may aid the said company by giving money or Debentures by way of Bonus, Gift or Loan;

And whereas the name of the said Company has been changed to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company;

And whereas by an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough and to authorize the issue of Debentures on the security of Town property and for other purposes," it was enacted that certain property therein mentioned should be vested in the Commissioners therein named, and their successors to be called "The Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust," and that it should be lawful for the Mayor and Town Council of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being to cause to be issued Debentures under the seal of the said corporation to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer of the said Town and by the Secretary of the said Commissioners and to the amount and for the purposes and in the manner in the said Act designated, and that it should be lawful for the said Commissioners to issue new Debentures if required from time to time upon which to raise funds to retire outstanding Debentures, and that the Town Council of the said Municipality should annually upon the application of the said Commissioners raise upon and from the ratable property of the said Municipality the Interest and Sinking Fund requisite for the ultimate redemption of the said Debentures according to the said Act;

And whereas heretofore the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough by By-law duly ratified by the ratepayers of the said Town of Peterborough and subsequently sanctioned by the Legislature of Ontario granted aid by way of bonus to the said company to the amount of the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars;

And whereas by the first section of an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario passed in the first year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-seven and chaptered Forty-six it was declared lawful for the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough notwithstanding such Act of Consolidation to grant aid by way of bonus to the said Company by way of substitution of the aid granted by such recited By-law and in an amount not exceeding the said sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars upon such terms and conditions as to the said corporation may seem expedient and by the Second Section of such recited Act it was further provided that the Debentures to be issued under such By-law be issued and redeemable in the manner provided by the said Consolidation Act;

And whereas it is deemed expedient to grant aid by way of bonus to the said company by way of substitution of the By-law heretofore passed as aforesaid;

The Municipality of the Town of Peterborough by the Council thereof therefore enacts as follows:—

1. That it shall and may be lawful for the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough to aid and assist the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company in the construction of a railway connecting the City of Toronto with the City of Ottawa and passing through the said Town of Peterborough by granting by way of bonus to the said Company Debentures of the said Municipality to the amount of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars in the manner and on the conditions hereinafter contained:

2. That for the purposes aforesaid it shall and may be lawful for the Mayor and Town Council to cause to be issued Debentures of the said Municipality under the Seal thereof to be signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Treasurer of the said Town and the Secretary of the said Commissioners to the said amount of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the said Town at the time following, that is to say: Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Sixteen years from the issue thereof; Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Eighteen years from the issue thereof; and Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Twenty years from the issue thereof; such Debentures to be for the sum of One Thousand Dollars each, and to bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half yearly; such interest and the redemption of each of the said Debentures as may be converted into money and negotiated as hereinafter set out to be provided for in the manner and subject to the provisions of the said hereinbefore in part recited Act consolidating the debt of the said Town of Peterborough;

3. That the said Debentures shall be issued on and bear date the First day of May, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-eight, and shall have attached thereto Coupons for the payment of the interest, half yearly, on the first day of May and November in each year, the first of such Coupons to be payable on the first day of November, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-eight, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained;

4. That the said Debentures when so issued shall in pursuance of the requirements of the Act incorporating the said company and amendments thereto be deposited with the Trustees named or to be named in accordance therewith as seen as the sum of Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars of Municipal aid shall have been voted towards that part of the said proposed road between Ottawa and Peterborough inclusive as hereinafter mentioned;

5. That should such Municipal aid as in the last section mentioned not be actually voted by Municipalities within two years from the time hereinafter fixed for this By-law to come into force then and in such case this By-law and all the provisions thereof shall become actually null and void and of no effect;

6. This By-law shall become void and of no effect, and Debentures issued hereunder shall not be valid unless the construction of the said railway as to that part thereof within the County of Peterborough shall have been actually and bona fide commenced on or before the first day of July One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-nine, and unless such construction shall have been so commenced such Debentures shall forthwith thereafter be returned to the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be cancelled;

7. The line of the route of the said railway shall be as to that part thereof within the said County of Peterborough from the easterly boundary of the said County to the Town of Peterborough by way of Norwood Village in as direct a line as may be reasonably consistent with any engineering difficulties that may exist and should such line of route not be adopted by the said Company then this By-law shall become void and of no effect and the Debentures issued hereunder shall be returned by the said Trustees to the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be cancelled.

8. That the Company shall only become entitled to the proceeds of Debentures to be issued under this By-law as follows, that is to say to the proceeds of twelve thousand and five hundred dollars of such Debentures on each consecutive five miles of the said proposed road easterly from the River Otonabee shall have been graded and bridged for a distance of fifty miles easterly from the said River and to the proceeds of Debentures to the amount of seventy-three thousand dollars when the said proposed road shall have been completed and in running order from the City of Ottawa or Carleton Place to the Town of Peterborough within the limits of the especially hereinafter mentioned erected in the Town of Peterborough and provided that the proceeds of the Debentures as herein provided for shall be handed by the said Trustees to the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust in payment of the moneys heretofore advanced by them to the said Company.

9. That the said Trustees shall not negotiate, dispose of or sell any of the said Debentures or any of them except from time to time as the said Company may become entitled to the proceeds thereof as hereinbefore mentioned and before any such Debentures are so disposed of the overdue interest Coupons as the time of such disposal attached thereto shall be detached therefrom and returned to the Treasurer of the said Corporation for cancellation and such cancellation should be a satisfaction of the interest represented by such over due Coupons.

10. It is further enacted that the said hereby granted shall be if accepted by the said Company be as accepted upon the express agreement that the changes to be made by those wanting the said railway for freight to pass from Peterborough all points within the Town or County of Peterborough and any point East thereof to any point at any time named the charges for freight from time to time being changed on the said railway from any point West of the said Town or County to the same point East;

11. It is further enacted that unless the said road shall be completed and finished from the Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa or Carleton Place with workshops as hereinafter mentioned before the First day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One the said Debentures in the proceeds whereof the Company may not have become entitled under this By-law shall be returned by the said Trustees to the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be cancelled.

12. This By-law shall be of no force or effect unless before the day hereinafter mentioned for the coming into force thereof the said Company shall have executed a valid contract or agreement with the said Municipality of the Town of Peterborough binding and obliging the said Company to faithfully perform all and singular the provisions and conditions of this By-Law and to erect and maintain at the said Town of Peterborough proper workshops of the said Company of a capacity to employ at least one half of the number of mechanics or workmen employed by the said Company in the service of the said Company and to keep the same employed thereat and retaining the Municipality of the said Town of Peterborough harmless from all claims for damages by reason of the exercise of the powers by this By-law granted.

13. This By-Law shall take effect and come in force on the First Day of May in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-Eight.

14. That the By-law hereinbefore recited on the Ninth day of November A.D. 1877 granting aid to the said Company by the issuance of Debentures of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars and the same is hereby

15. It is further enacted that unless the said road to be constructed from the Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa or Carleton Place as hereinbefore mentioned be completed and in running order from the Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa or Carleton Place on or before the First day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough shall have the right to enter upon the said railway and take possession thereof and to run the trains thereon and to charge such tolls for the carriage of passengers and freight thereon as they may deem proper and the said Company shall not be entitled to any of the proceeds of the said Debentures or any of them except from time to time as the said Company may become entitled to the proceeds thereof as hereinbefore mentioned and before any such Debentures are so disposed of the overdue interest Coupons as the time of such disposal attached thereto shall be detached therefrom and returned to the Treasurer of the said Corporation for cancellation and such cancellation should be a satisfaction of the interest represented by such over due Coupons.

16. It is further enacted that the said hereby granted shall be if accepted by the said Company be as accepted upon the express agreement that the changes to be made by those wanting the said railway for freight to pass from Peterborough all points within the Town or County of Peterborough and any point East thereof to any point at any time named the charges for freight from time to time being changed on the said railway from any point West of the said Town or County to the same point East;

17. It is further enacted that unless the said road shall be completed and finished from the Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa or Carleton Place with workshops as hereinafter mentioned before the First day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One the said Debentures in the procee

LOCAL NEWS

Parliamentary Papers.—Our thanks are due to Mr. Scott for copies of Parliamentary papers kindly forwarded to us.

Remember the Social Ball and Supper under the auspices of the Peterborough Brass Band, on Monday Evening, the 28th Instant.

Personal.—Mr. C. A. Post, who has been seriously ill for the past few weeks with typhoid fever, is, we are glad to learn, recovering.

Board Wanted—by a young man in a private family where no other boarders are kept, Methodist family preferred. Address, X. Y. Z., this office.

Enlarged.—The Stratford Beacon has taken a step forward by enlarging to forty columns. The Beacon is an energetic an able paper and deserves its marked success.

Auction Sale.—Mr. John Thornton, of Lot 13, in the 14th Concession of Otonabee, will sell by public auction, on Tuesday the 27th instant, a quantity of farm stock, &c. For particulars see posters.

Too Late.—We have received a communication from Mr. T. G. Choate, Reeve of Dummer, too late for this issue. It will appear in our next issue and must close the controversy as far as we are concerned.

Clearing Sale.—Mr. John Elder announces this week that he will commence a great cash clearing sale before stock taking, to continue for two weeks, in order to sell off his surplus stock before stock taking. As he intends running off the goods at low prices cash buyers should visit The Elephant.

To-Night.—Mr. Youmans' "Songs of Nations" to-night promises to be a grand success from the number of tickets already disposed of. We are requested to say that those intending to attend will do well to purchase their tickets at Wilson and Davis' Bookstore and save delay at the door in the evening.

The New Council.—The new Council represents a variety of trades; thirteen members being engaged in the following occupations:—Grain dealer, 1; Gentleman, 1; Editor, 1; Merchants, 2; Shoemakers, 2; Lawyer, 1; Blacksmith and Carriage-makers, 2; Builder, 1; Bricklayer, 1; Miller, 1; Contractor, 1.

Eyes Right Again!—Getting into Line.—The members of the Conservative Associations are getting into line for the approaching elections. Rev. Vincent Clementi, Dr. Kincaid and Mr. Scott, attended the Toronto Conservative Convention and received instructions. When Law, Gospel and Physic take the matter up, some strange things may be looked for. We shall see—well, what we shall see.

Peterborough District L. O. L.—At the annual meeting of the Peterborough District L. O. L. held, the following officers were elected and installed for the current year, namely:—

Bro. Maxwell Hall	W.M.
" Henderson Nesbitt	Dep. M.
" Wilton Tennyson	Chaplain
" Wm. Thompson	Secretary
" Robert Weir	Treasurer
" Geo. W. Hall	D. of C.

Horticultural Society.—The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society was held on Thursday, January 10th, when the following officers were elected for the current year:—

President—John H. Roper.
Vice-President—Allan Macdougall.
Directors.—D. W. Dumble, W. H. Pendry, C. F. Henderson, Jas. Stevenson, Chas. Ormond, James Rose, E. A. Brown, John McClelland and John English.
Auditors—John Burnham and W. H. Pendry.

Arrested for Perjury.—Mr. James O'Neil, Merchant, of Montreal, and formerly of Port Hope, we learn from the London Advertiser, has been arrested at the instance of a Mr. A. Donohue, on a charge of perjury arising out of a recent case. It will be remembered that Messrs J. & R. O'Neil failed a few months ago in Montreal for some $200,000, and their first dividend was for 5¾ cent on the dollar. Several English creditors were so disgusted with the failure that they failed to prove even their claims.

Grip on Hemorrhoids.—The cartoon of Grip illustrates this week how the exemption question works. The idea of it is a laboring man at work with a pick-axe. On his hands and crushing him to the earth in a large sack labelled "taxes." On top of this is an ecclesiastic, fat, and with "good fat capon lined," balancing on one hand a church and the other a building representing church property. The burden is further increased by the addition of a judge who bestrides the shoulders of the ecclesiastic, while perched up aloft is a civil service employee. The moral is obvious, and he who runs may read.

St. George's Society.—The annual meeting of the Peterborough St. George's Society was held on Wednesday evening of last week. The following officers were elected for the current year:—

President—Mr. George Barlee.
1st Vice-President—Mr. E. Courtney.
2nd Vice-President—Mr. W. E. Sherwood.
Chaplain—Rev. V. Clementi.
Physicians—Dr. H. C. Burritt and Dr. R. P. Bonsher.
Secretary—Mr. T. Bithray.
Treasurer—Mr. G. E. Shaw.
Committee of Management—W. Hook, E. J. Toker, W. H. Pendry, H. Grundy and W. Helm.

Catholic Bazaar.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that a Grand Bazaar will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week; the proceeds to be applied towards the Church Building Fund. A large number of rich and costly prizes will be drawn for, the value of which no doubt will tend to making a keen competition. As it is but seldom this church appeals to the public for assistance, we presume they will be well patronized, and consequently realize a handsome sum for the object which the bazaar has been promoted. We are also informed that a chair valued at $60 will be set up for competition in voting between the admirers of Mr. Bertram and Mr. Scott—the one receiving the greatest number of votes to receive the chair. Doors open each day and evening. Admission only ten cents.

Remuneration to the Mayor.—As announced in our last issue the Finance Committee called a meeting of the citizens last Friday evening, to consider the question of granting remuneration to the Mayor for past services. The chair was occupied by Councillor Cahill, Chairman of the Committee, who briefly announced the object of the meeting, and called on them present to discuss the matter. No one seemed desirous however of taking the platform, and the chairman was about to vacate the chair, when it was moved by Mr. John Brown, seconded by Mr. William Montgomery, —That this meeting adjourn for twelve months. As it was quite evident the meeting was a packed one, the resolution carried without any opposition, and the crowd separated. Such meetings cannot be taken as expressive of the feelings of the people, and the holding of them seems to amount to little less than a farce.

More Humor for the Ghoulunts.—The ladies in connection with one of our churches in Ashburnham are getting up a banner in connection with their church, a praiseworthy object. They have already selected a chair—as many chair we suppose—to be sold to the highest bidders, in favor of the leaders of the two political parties; but as there are only two reformers on the church roll, it is not likely that outsiders will come forward to the bidding, and an easy victory is anticipated for Sir John. It is even hinted too, that embroiderers are being enlisted wherewith to secure a high bid in favour of the Conservative Chieftain. At the close of such a farce we do hope that the Conservative Organ which do the puffing for Sir John will give the whole circumstances, inasmuch as we have often put them in possession of the facts. When there are so few Reformers on the membership it will not be necessary to stop to Millbrook meetin. Whoa, now the Reformers had honestly won the supper, the money paid by the parties for admission at the door was taken to secure the case for the chief, but then, that was only following our Pacific Scandal theories.

On motion the report was received and adopted.

The following officers were then unanimously elected:—

President—Joseph Walton.
1st Vice-President—Rev. V. Clementi.
2nd Vice-President—Isaac Garbutt.
Directors—Thos. H. Bell, Alex. Scott, James Campbell, John Bennett, John White, Wm. Helm, Wm. Rutherford, Geo. Fitzgerald, and Henry Collins.
Auditors—Messrs. James Edwards and John McClelland.

The meeting then adjourned.

Immediately after the above meeting the newly-elected Directors met, and appointed Mr. John Carnegie Secretary-Treasurer.

On motion of Mr. Collins, the sum of fifty dollars was voted towards the funds of the Cobourg Central Exhibition, and by another motion Messrs. Walker, Clementi and Carnegie were appointed the representatives of the Society to the Central Exhibition Society.—Review.

Intermediate Examinations.—The report of the Intermediate Examination for the term ending in December, has been published, and from it we are able to draw comparisons of the work done in the different Collegiate Institutes and High Schools of the Province. Passing over those schools whose candidates passed do not amount to 30 per cent. of the number examined, we find the following comparative standing of the most successful schools:—

Almonte	8 out of 9 or 88 per cent.
Barrie	30	" 41 or 73	"
Bowmanville	7	" 9 or 77	"
Berlin	7	" 9 or 77	"
Brantford	17	" 123 or 73	"
Bradford	2	" 3 or 66	"
Brampton	6	" 9 or 66	"
Chatham	2	" 3 or 66	"
Clinton	5	" 10 or 50	"
Cobourg	6	" 8 or 74	"
Cornwall	2	" 4 or 50	"
Dundas	5	" 10 or 50	"
Farmersville	3	" 5 or 60	"
Galt	10	" 15 or 66	"
Goderich	3	" 10 or 60	"
Guelph	7	" 8 or 87	"
Hamilton	19	" 48 to 40	"
Kingston	3	" 9 or 33	"
Lindsay	5	" 8 or 62	"
London	9	" 10 or 90	"
Napanee	5	" 12 or 41	"
Norwood	2	" 7 nearly 30 per cent.
Ottawa	15	" 16 nearly 93	"
Peterborough	12	" 17 nearly 69	"
Port Hope	1	" 2 nearly 50	"
St. Catharines	10	" 11 or 90 per cent.
Toronto	15	" 21 or 72	"
Uxbridge	5	" 8 or 100	"
Whitby	3	" 14 or 20	"
Woodstock	2	" 2 or 100	"

From this table it will be seen that the Peterborough School takes a very high rank for work done, standing above Brantford, Cobourg, Dundas, Hamilton, Kingston, Lindsay, Whitby—far ahead of Port Hope—about equal with Guelph, Goderich and London, and if the number of candidates examined be taken as the criterion, is the third in the Province. This should entitle croakers who are continually endeavoring to injure our Collegiate Institute. The entrance Examinations were also very creditable to the Public Schools of the town. Out of 39 candidates 29 passed. The whole work was well done. Penmanship in many cases very superior, spelling almost perfect, and the general style of the work reflecting great credit on the teacher preparing them, and on the pupils, very many of whom were under 14 years of age, and several of them not 13. Below is the list of successful candidates at the Intermediate Examinations:—

O'Brien, Michael	Junkin, Robert
Mather, Charles	Clark, Frederick
Wright, J. J.	Burnham, J. H.
Kent, E. L.	Willoughby, Henry
Fair, Caroline	Keele, Sarah
Leonard, Jennie	Cook, Sophia

Masquerade Carnival.—On Friday evening last the first masquerade carnival of the season —in fact the first for two or three years, was held in Ashburnham Rink, and passed off in a very successful manner, being pronounced one of the best yet held in the town. About seventy-five appeared in different characters—the costumes being very tastefully, and in some cases exceedingly well got up. Especially worthy of mention was the bridal party, which created quite a sensation when they made their debut on the rink. It would be invidious to particularize the other characters, especially when each took their part so well both in dress and actions and we will content ourselves by giving a list of the principal names and the characters assumed, commencing with the bridal party, the first nine, giving them in the order as they entered the rink:—

D. G. Edwards	Clergyman
Master Edwards	Groom
A. D. Braithwaite	Best Man
Geo. W. Hatton	Bride
R. B. Edwards	Bride's Father
Thos. Fortye	1st Bridesmaid
Geo. Shaw	2nd do
Maxwell Hamilton	3rd do
Maxwell Donaldson	4th do
W. H. Robinson	Indian Chief
A. J. Rogers	Prince
Miss F. E. Coulter	Mother Hubbard
R. Fortye / Miss Deanistoun	Turkish Lady and Gent
Miss Addie Abbott	Lady Jane Grey
" Ada Wallis	Snow Flake
" Minnie Hartley	Quakeress
" Lou. Ormond	Scotch Lass
" C. Carnegie	Highland Girl
" Burrell	Tyrolese
" Katie Wallis	Fishwife
" C. Menzies	Gipsy Girl
" Jessie Roberts	Highland Girl

Harry Thompson	Bride
J. Robertson	One of our Girls
A. Mercer	Shantyman
G. T. S. Kerr	Negro
J. Lilly	Scout
D. Menzies	Man of the Period
R. Hogan	Jack in the Box

Besides these there were some twenty others whose names and characters we could not learn. The committee deserves credit for so successfully making and carrying out all the arrangements, and we learn they intend holding another one in a few weeks, which no doubt will also be a success.

In the case of the Otonabee Indians the jury failed to agree and were discharged. The seven French jurymen stood for conviction, and the five English for acquittal.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Special Meeting.

The Town Council met in Special Session on Friday morning at 10 a. m. Present,—The Mayor in the chair, and Councillors Dumble, Patterson, Haggart, Miller, Rutherford, Robertson, Boyle, Yelland, Cahill.

On motion the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was held over till next meeting.

THE MAYOR stated he had received a communication from Mr. Scott, stating that it was absolutely necessary that the memorial for the sale of a portion of McDonnell street to Mr. W. Davidson be signed and forwarded to him at once, if the Council wished it put through the Legislature at this Session.

MEMORIAL FOR SALE OF STREET.

On motion of Councillor DUMBLE the By-law for stopping up and selling a portion of McDonnell street in the Town of Peterborough was read a first, second and third time and the Mayor and Clerk were instructed to sign and seal the same, and forward it to Mr. Scott.

On motion a petition to the Legislative Assembly, and a Memorial to His Excellency the Governor praying for an act to authorize the Corporation of Peterborough to issue debentures for the purpose of paying the indebtedness appearing on the first of January, and also to provide for the appropriation of the money payable by the Midland Railway Company, towards the paying of the municipal loan fund debt, was read a first, second and third time and passed, and the Clerk and Mayor were instructed to sign and seal the same.

ACCOUNT.

An account from Messrs Douglas & Logan amounting to $6.75 was received and ordered to be paid.

EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION.

On motion of Councillor Patterson, seconded by Councillor Rutherford,—The Clerk and Mayor were instructed to sign and forward to Alderman Hallam, Toronto, the petition praying for the non-exemption of Church property etc.,

The Council then adjourned until 9 a. m., on Monday morning.

Another Special Session.

The Council met in Special Session on Saturday evening last at the call of Mayor. Present, —His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Mallon, Haggart, Smith, Patterson, Rountree, Yelland, Rutherford, Boyle, Dumble and Miller.

The Mayor explained the reason why he had called the meeting together to-night instead of at nine o'clock on Monday morning as arranged at last meeting, namely, in order to give the Clerk more time to write up his minutes, previous to the meeting of the new Council on Monday morning at eleven o'clock. He called to be excused from presiding over them to-night, and called upon the Council to appoint one of their number to fill the chair.

On motion Councillor Smith was moved to the chair, and the Mayor retired.

Minutes of last two meetings read and confirmed.

Councillor Hamilton entered and took his seat.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From C. D. Macdonald, Police Court Clerk, the following:—

To the Mayor and Town Council of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—For your information, I herewith hand you a statement shewing the receipts of the Police Court during the last year.

Its receipts from all sources have been $744.66, of this amount $665.66 will appear as part of the receipts of the town for 1877. $349 have been paid to John Ritchie, License Inspector, being fixed in eight cases by the Police Magistrate, Liquor License Act. Of this last mentioned amount the town is entitled to $166.66, which added to the sum already received make the net receipts of the Court during the year $665.76.

The undersigned would respectfully call your attention to the fact, that his acting as Clerk of the Police Court occupies very nearly one half of his time; that in consequence his hours of attendance at the office since his appointment has averaged sixteen hours per day, having no fewer than five books of record to keep, issuing all summonses, subpœnas, warrants, &c., making returns to the Dominion and Provincial Governments, and returns of all Convictions four times a year to the Quarter Sessions—work never before performed by the Town Clerk, and which was added to the duties in March last, and not contemplated at the time of his appointment.

In connection with the above, I would say the fees payable to the Clerk by statute, amount to $267.50, but which sum stands at the credit of the town. This fact and in consideration of the extra duties imposed, which I have performed to the best of my ability, I consider myself justly entitled to an advance of my salary, of at least $200, and should you decide to grant me the said sum for the performances of the above extra duties enumerated, it will be received by me as an equivalent in full of my just dues, for services performed during last year as Clerk of the said court. All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHAS. D. MACDONALD.
Clerk of Police Court

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

G. L. Mitchell	$33.10
R. Green	2.00
Henry Best	1.50

Information was asked respecting Mr. E. Green's account, when Councillor DUMBLE explained it was for the erection of water closets and urinals on the river bank at the end of Charlotte Street. An appropriation of $100 had been made for the erection of those last summer, on the Market Square, but as the butchers and others residing close by protested the committee had thought best to erect them on the river bank as being close to the Market and in a convenient and suitable locality.

MR. MACDONALD'S REQUEST.

On taking up Mr. Macdonald's application, Councillor DUMBLE moved that it be received and taken up afterwards.

Councillor PATTERSON moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor HAGGART, that the request of the Police Court Clerk be received and the prayer granted.

Some crossfiring took place as to whether the request should be granted at this stage of the meeting, or received now, and afterwards granted, each Councillor expressing himself in favor of it, but differing in opinion as to the mode of dealing with the communication.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Councillor CAHILL, as Chairman of the Finance Committee reported as follows:

The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts:—

Scott & Edwards, law expenses	$91 14
J. R. Stratton, printing	22 25
Peterborough Gas Company	28 75
Ormond & Walsh	19 61
Irwin Marks, repairs to water cart	3 25
J. E. Belcher	10 00
R. Walsh, shovel	2
W. H. Robertson, account in full	11 91
Thomas Farquhar, Holt children	42 00

Your Committee recommend that the suit of Cumming v. Nicholls be settled as suggested by the Town Solicitors, and that the Clerk be authorized to purchase two copies of Cornwall's Municipal Manual.

Your Committee cannot recommend the Council to grant the requests of Messrs. Dawis and Cumming, as there has been no new duties imposed on either of them since their appointment.

Mr. Green's term of the Market having not yet expired, your Committee think this matter should be left over for the new Council.

Your committee have considered the matter of remuneration to the Mayor, and they are of opinion that Mr. Toole for his long services to the town in various official positions, and for his valuable services as Mayor during the last three years, deserves well from the people of Peterborough. We are opinion that the Mayor has necessarily suffered financial loss in consequence of holding office, and we think that a small sum should be hereafter provided for the dispensing of charity by the Mayor, and to save him from actual loss. With reference to Mr. Toole, your Committee are pleased to be able to speak in highest terms of his administration of the office of Mayor, and they regret that in answer to the question of salary they put been before the people, they do not find themselves at liberty to recommend the payment to him of a salary, but suggest to the new Council the propriety of testifying to the value of his services by a grant to him after the people have had time to consider the matter. All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOS. CAHILL, Chairman.

Peterborough, January 18, 1878.

Councillor YELLAND thought the Council should not in the matter of giving the Mayor a remuneration for past services not overlook the responsibility.

Councillor PATTERSON suggested it be left to a vote of the people, as the public meeting held the previous evening did not give a correct expression of the feeling of the people.

Councillor DUMBLE was not afraid to express himself on the matter. Had it come before the Council during the year he would have supported and voted for it, but as this was his last sitting at the Council Board he did not think he was justified in voting for it, although if the members of the Council thought he was, he was prepared to do so. If the matter came before the people on a citizens he would vote for giving the Mayor, say, $200 or $300 a year for the past two or three years. Although opposed to Mr. Wardale in many things he had admired the calm, fair, capable and courteous manner in which he had discharged the onerous duties of mayor, and deserved a pecuniary remuneration and gratuity.

Mr. Phillips and Mr. Calcutt were in favor of making a reduction owing to their loss, and it was Moved by Mr. Calcutt, seconded by Mr. Phillips that Messrs. Cope and Paint be made a reduction of $5.00 each on their taxes, their property having been destroyed by fire during the summer.

The Mayor said that Mrs. Keating had made application to him to have her taxes remitted, but the Council would not remit them as the owned property and had several tenants.

TAXES CANCELLED.

Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Mr. Calcutt, that the back taxes amounting to $5.65 due on lot No. 14 west half of Elizabeth street be cancelled, and that the County Treasurer be notified of the same.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned until the first Monday in February.

POLICE COURT

SELLING LIQUOR ON SUNDAY.—On Monday morning Mrs. Scott, Monaghan, was fined $20 and costs, for violation of the Liquor Law by selling on Sunday December 30th.

A SCHOLAR CASE.—A charge against the same person of a similar nature for selling on the 13th, was enlarged until 4 p.m., when it was further postponed till Monday next.

LARCENY.—James Murphy, was charged by R. N. Reddy with stealing a buffalo robe the property of George Walton, out of complainant's yard, on the evening of the 18th. Case enlarged till 22nd and bail accepted for his appearance.

BREACH OF BUILDING BY-LAWS.—The charge of the Building Inspector against John Boyd for the erection of a wooden stable on Water Street, was heard yesterday morning, and judgment reserved.

RAILWAY MEETING.

A Large Gathering in the Opera House—Mr. Scott lays a New Scheme before the Ratepayers.

A public meeting of the ratepayers of the town was called by the Mayor for last Monday evening in the Opera House, to discuss questions relating to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. Although but a few hours notice had been given, a large number assembled to hear explanations from the President, W. H. Scott Esq. M. P. P., in reference to the new scheme which is now found desirable to promote consequent upon the defeat of the late bonus by-law in the city of Toronto.

The Mayor, took the chair and explained the object of the meeting. He at some length referred to the early history of the road and its subsequent progress, up to the unfortunate defeat of the Toronto bonus by-law. Owing to this it was deemed advisable to slightly modify the scheme, by constructing the eastern portion of the road—from Peterborough to Ottawa—making this town the terminus. If this was done Toronto would soon see the mistake she had made, and would, he felt satisfied exert herself to build a road from that city to this town. He would call upon Mr. Scott the President of the road, to lay his plans more minutely before them.

MR SCOTT on coming forward was received with applause, and said, he regretted the short notice which had of necessity been given to the meeting. He had no new scheme to lay before them, but merely the old one slightly modified —namely the construction of the eastern portion of the road at present, and the altering of the terms of the town by-law, so that the whole amount of the bonus should be available for the construction of the road from here to Ottawa. The town and county were to a large extent interested in the welfare of the proposed road, and connected with its success. The promotion of the scheme had been somewhat nipped in the bud by the unexpected defeat of the Toronto by-law, after which he had deemed it prudent to withdraw the By-law before the City of Ottawa and the County of Carleton. Perhaps a mistake had been made in submitting the by-law to the people of Toronto at this time they did—when the tax Collector's were calling at each man's door, and the heavy taxes which they were called upon to pay militated against the success of the by-law. The different railways of the city, had also put forth every exertion to secure its defeat, and this with a lavish expenditure of money, enabled the opponents of the road to roll up a large majority against the by-law. This defeat knocked the plans of the Company somewhat out of joint, as had Toronto not voted as they did, the bonuses from Ottawa and Carleton would have been secured, and with these the whole of the municipal aid—except from a few small municipalities—secured. The Company would then have been in a position to have obtained from the government the amount of aid expected, as he believed they were prepared to do it justice. The scheme which I am about to bring before you to-night, is one gathered from our town papers, and from several of our prominent citizens, namely, to build the eastern part of the road first, and to hand over to the Company the whole amount of the bonus—$150,000—for its construction. The road will still retain the name of the Toronto and Ottawa, as I believe it will eventually be built from Ottawa to Toronto, for if built from here to Ottawa, having connection there with Montreal, Toronto will not long allow Montreal merchants to come almost to her doors and take away the trade from her. Toronto may change her mind in a year; perhaps it may take longer, but she must eventually do so. A basis of construction might be arranged to have the road built from Ottawa here, and then connect with the Midland, and secure the further extension of the line to the Georgian Bay. In the late address from the Throne at the opening of the Local Legislature, the idea was thrown out that the door might soon be closed against giving aid to railways. He did not say this would be done, but such a course might be pursued, and it was necessary to secure the government aid for this line at once, if it was to be secured at all. The road between here and Carleton Place has especial claims upon the government for assistance; and he felt satisfied would be granted, if the municipal bonuses could be secured. What he purposed doing was to ask all the municipalities to revote on their by-laws, making a similar change to that asked of Peterborough. He believed the other municipalities would favor this scheme, Ottawa he thought would prefer to have the terminus of the road here rather than in Toronto, as there was a kind of jealousy between the two cities. He had also an offer from the gentlemen controlling the Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, that if the municipal bonuses and government aid for the section of road between here and Ottawa, were secured they would build, equip and complete this line, thereby giving us a direct connection with Montreal. Were this done having connection with the Midland to Georgian Bay as well as to the eastern markets, we would be enabled to draw the trade away from Toronto. Toronto could not afford to lose this trade and the result would be that, a line would be very soon constructed from Toronto to this place. If the road were only built to Peterborough, having its terminus here, I am very strongly of the opinion, that it would be more advantageous to us than a through line. Under the old by-law $100,000 was to be expended for the grading of the road easterly from this place, and the remaining $50,000 upon the completion of the road from Carleton Place to Toronto. What we now ask, is that the whole $150,000 be expended on the road easterly from this place, so as to warrant the government making the grant. This could have been accomplished by getting the government to legalize the election by-law, giving the consent of the Council, but he did not wish to do this action, as steps in had been in the Legislature he had not his face against such legislation, believing the people, and not the Council, had the right to act in the matter. (Applause.) The ratepayers could either adopt it or let it drop as they saw fit. As to the state of the project, the speaker said, the survey between here and Ottawa would be completed by the 1st of February. Two survey parties had been placed upon the ground, one between here and Toronto, the other between here and Ottawa. After the defeat of the Toronto by-law, the first named party who had got as far as Port Perry were discharged, but the other was retained, and as he had before stated would have the survey completed between here and Ottawa by the 1st of next month. Already between $16,000 and $17,000 had been spent upon the project, and he did not believe a single dollar had been wasted. He then explained the division of the property between Toronto, Ottawa and Peterborough, giving to each one-third. If Toronto he had been fortunate enough to secure such men as Senator Aikins and Messrs. Howland and Smith to subscribe the necessary stock and two directors. He would not help expressing his gratitude to these men for the course they had pursued since the defeat of the Toronto By-law. Fearing that their connection as directors might prejudice the people of Ottawa and other eastern places against the road, they offered to place their resignation in his hand, and also if necessary sell out their stock for what they had paid themselves. He concluded by saying that if the town and county submitted the by-law, he would at once proceed to Ottawa and Carleton as well as other places on the route and have By-laws submitted to be voted upon at an early day, so that he might be able to come before the Legislature for government aid, which he felt sure would be given and which would establish the financial basis of the road.

MR. G. A. COX approved very much of the scheme but thought as the "road would eventually be built to Toronto that a portion of the $150,000 should be reserved, and $100,000 was all we should be asked to give.

MR. D. W. DUMBLE being called upon took the platform amid much applause and made a telling speech in favor of the proposed scheme. He believed if this town could be made the terminus of the road it would greatly aid the prosperity of the town, but we could not expect to keep it the terminus for any absolute time as Toronto would not allow Montreal men to take the trade from her lap, and would feel it compulsory on herself to construct the road from that city to this place. Without this road we would always remain a "better and egg" town but with it we would become a great manufacturing centre, possessing the magnificent water power which is upon the Otonabee, as manufacturers could then get in their raw material without difficulty and at low rates and be in a position to compete with front towns and come up to any town in Canada. He called on the meeting to give Mr. Scott a rousing vote of thanks for his untiring exertions and toil in working up this road, making him one of the most popular men in this part of the Province. (Cheers)

MR. SCOTT asked if there were any present opposed to the scheme as if so he would consider it a great favor if they would express themselves, because if the scheme would be opposed to any extent he would not go on with it.

DR. KINCAID said in his experience in this town rival parties had killed some of our best enterprises, and it was with pleasure he listened to the remarks just made by Mr. Dumble. Lindsay was outdoing Peterborough in her enterprise in railway matters and was at present negotiating for another to Bobcaygeon. Any gentleman who would throw cold water upon this scheme was an enemy to the prosperity of the town, and Peterborough would be blind to her own interests did she not move in this matter. He would therefore move the following resolution:

Moved by DR. KINCAID, seconded by MR. D. HAGGART,—That in the opinion of this meeting, it would be to the interest of the Town of Peterborough that the eastern section of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway from Peterborough to Ottawa be proceeded with, and with that view the Town Council be requested to submit to the ratepayers of the town a by-law in stead of the by-law heretofore voted, a by-law granting $150,000 towards the construction of that part of the road from Peterborough easterly.

Mr. D. HAGGART had much pleasure in seconding the resolution, and said that from a conversation he had with the President of the Midland Railway he little doubted but that if this eastern section of the Toronto and Ottawa were built, the Midland would pull up the route between Millbrook and Omemee and run a line from here to that place direct, thus placing Peterborough upon the main line from Montreal to the Georgian Bay.

Mr. Cox again expressed himself as not wishing to be held as offering any opposition to the scheme. He would not oppose giving $150,000 but thought $100,000 enough.

MR. T. G. HAZLITT was favourable to the construction of the Toronto and Ottawa railway, but thought we should not be in too great a hurry. He approved of spending one-third of the bonus for the completion of the road to Toronto.

After some further discussion of a conversational kind, the chairman put the resolution which was declared carried unanimously.

The meeting then broke up after giving three cheers to Mr. Scott, called for by Mr. Dumble.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.—It is the duty of every person who has used HOSCHEES' GERMAN SYRUP to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 40,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the GERMAN SYRUP cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample Bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. For sale by J. D. Tully & Co. After War.

Pestilence and intemperance—colds lead to the greatest destruction of human life, mainly because it is considered by many to be of no consequence, and hence systematically neglected, until a simple, curable disease, is converted into a fatal pulmonary one. Every one practised with what is called a slight cold or cough, should immediately use "Hyde's Pulmonic Wafers." They allay irritation at once, and exert a most beneficial influence on all the bronchial and pulmonary organs. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents a box.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Diseased Lungs.

"Beechhurst, Cut. April 25, 1873.
Gentlemen,—It gives me pleasure to bear testimony to a cure effected by Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. My wife having been afflicted for a number of years with diseased lungs, I was induced to try your Balsam, which I certainly recommend to the public as being as a true and most reliable cure for diseases of the lungs. In confidence I beg to refer you to any of my friends, also my family whom for your success with your valuable remedy, induced it to be the only medicine adopted in such cases.

Very truly yours, J. A. ANDERSON.

Don't Know Him.

We have heard of a man who owned a house and lot, and who had a wife and children, and who was in the habit of coming home at night, and who was in the habit of going away in the morning, and who was in the habit of eating, drinking and sleeping, and who was in the habit of reading the papers, and who was in the habit of smoking cigars, and who was in the habit of paying his debts, and who was in the habit of saying his prayers, and who was in the habit of attending church, and who was in the habit of contributing to the support of the gospel, and who was in the habit of voting at elections, and who was in the habit of paying taxes, and who was in the habit of hiring men to work for him, and who was in the habit of paying them their wages, and who was in the habit of selling his property, and who was in the habit of buying property, and who was in the habit of using Hop Bitters, and who was in the habit of recommending them to his friends, and who was in the habit of enjoying good health, and who was in the habit of being happy, and

Somebody once said the best way to get rid of a good friend was to lend him $5. That was when times were easy. You can alienate him now for 50 cents.

The Rev. Mr. Reisseford is drawing tremendous congregations in Toronto, 3,000 people squeezed into St. James Cathedral, on the 13th instant.

Benjamin Dunnell, of Hamilton, Ont., while walking along the street on the 11th, was noticed, to stop, grasp the arm of a companion and fall to the ground a corpse.

The debate on the Address in the Imperial House of Commons was concluded on Friday last, Mitchell-Henry's amendment relative to Irish grievances being defeated by 301 to 48, and the Address carried.

In more than one of the Presbyterian churches in London the service is performed in a way that would have sent John Knox into fits. The psalms are intoned, and the Lord's prayer repeated by the congregation pesant, as in the Church of England.

Mr. T. S. Arthur, the popular author of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," and other powerful temperance tales, well says:—"The curse is upon us, and there is but one cure; total abstinence, by the help of God, for the individual, and prohibition for the State."

We are sorry to learn that Hon. Mr. Blake's health still continues unsatisfactory. It is said that his medical advisers have imperatively insisted on his abstinence from Ministerial or exacting duties of any kind, and that his resignation has for some time been in the Premier's hands.

The very latest "Turkish atrocity" is to be seen in Cheapside, in London, where a peripatetic vendor of penny varse is carrying about a trayful of "Bulgarian ears," made of flesh colored india-rubber, and imitating with frightful fidelity a human ear severed from a human head.

In the Manitoba Legislature a resolution has been carried in favour of petitioning the Dominion Government to permit the re-payment of the seed wheat advances bushel for bushel, instead of, as at present, four bushels to one—a proportion due to the relative value of the grain. A resolution was also adopted for a petition to Ottawa praying that the rate of payment for land in the settlement belt be reduced from $5 to $1 per acre.

The meetings of the Dominion Board of Trade came to a close last Friday. The insolvency law question was referred to a committee to report at the next annual meeting, as were also the subjects of treaty relations with South America and the iron trade. Resolutions were adopted in favour of the establishment of a department of commerce and of taking steps towards organizing a confederated Board of Trade for the colonies.

The Bowmanville Statesman says that "One of the best meetings yet held of the West Durham Alliance for the suppression of the liquor traffic took place on Tuesday week in the Temperance Hall. There was a good representative attendance, and an excellent spirit of unity was manifested, the determination being strong to continue active warfare against the accursed traffic. An efficient Executive Committee for the riding was appointed, and will meet on Friday, 18th instant, at this place to appoint officers and attend to other matters. The executive was instructed to take any steps deemed necessary in sustaining the present law, or initiating further action."

Reviewing the latest phase of the O'Donoghue case—a Manitoba letter in the Mail, wherein it is stated that the people of that province don't want O'Donoghue back—The St. John Freeman (edited by Hon. Mr. Anglin) says:—"What a sorry humbug the whole Tory proceeding in this matter was. Sir John framed, and the Tory caucus adopted, and Mr. Costigan moved, a resolution for which the Orange Tories could vote without hesitation; which, it was hoped, would deceive those Irish Catholics who believed their story that O'Donoghue was excepted from the amnesty because he is an Irish Catholic; which, if passed would afford no relief to O'Donoghue, and, if lost, would not embarrass the Tories should they get back to office.

A MISTAKEN NOTION.—Growing plants in rooms do not vitiate the air, but, on the contrary, if kept in a reasonable number, will tend to purify it. Of course there are a few exceptions to this rule; plants with very fragrant flowers, like the heliotrope, tuberose, and mignonette, often affect delicate persons by producing nausea and giddiness when confined to the close atmosphere of a room. No better proof of the healthfulness of plants need be asked for than in the persons of florists, who live in their greenhouses for months at a time, frequently sleeping among their plants night, as working among them during the day. No healthier class of men can be found than the gardeners and florists, who constantly inhale whatever there may be, noxious or otherwise, given off by plants and fragrant flowers. Those who desire to have plants in their rooms need have no fear of injury from them, and the atmosphere, if made healthy for the plants, can scarcely fail to be healthful for the person breathing it the same time, as the water given them from time to time passes of in minute quantities, imparting healthful moisture to the air.

THE PROTECTIONISTS in Canada are having a hard time of it. The Conservative workingmen of Toronto having announced their intention of giving Sir John A. Macdonald a banquet and presenting him with a costly watch and chain, a free-trade paper presents the following dilemma: If, as Sir John A. Macdonald asserts, the workingmen of Canada have by the non-protective policy of the Government been brought to beggary, hunger and nakedness, how can Sir John ever look himself in the face when shaving after taking from them their scanty earnings to be squandered for wines and jewellry! If, on the other hand, the workmen of Toronto can afford to spend $1,200 or $1,500 on such a demonstration, what becomes of the starvation cry? Not long ago Mr. E. K. Greene of Montreal published a circular showing that under its present fiscal policy Canada was fast going to the dessition bow-wows; the same gentleman is one of the provisional directors of a company for the manufacture of felt hats, which is about to begin operations in Toronto by enlarging the capital and expanding the business of a concern already in prosperous existence; which leads us to suspect that his private prospectus inviting stock subscriptions may not be of nearly as gloomy a tone as was his public circular. Another director is Mr. Turner, of Hamilton, an ardent protectionist, who fought bravely for protection to enable the poor Canadian to make felt hats without losing too much money, didn't get it—and heroically went into manufacturing felt hats all the same.—New York World.

Giant T.,

BRITAIN'S REPROACH.
BY MRS. SEWELL.
"Yes, sir, the nation's true prosperity
Cannot exist without sobriety:
And working men will never be hungry men,
Whilst they are tempted to the liquor den.
If see you wince at that, sir. Well, 'tis true:
It is an ugly word for such as you
To hear, no doubt; but 'tis an ugly thing,
Which no assumption that has a plausible ring,)
And 'tis a fact, sir, and I say again,
The man are tempted to the 'Rose-bush,'
And perish there. And yet good people stand
And see the poison overflow the land,
And mark in pleasant parties, dress, and dine,
And sneer at abstinence, and sip their wine.
* * * It comes but from the man
Who gain their fortunes by the 'liquor-ban.'
They therefore raise the cry, 'The poor man's beer
Is his chief comfort, and the greatest cheer
For man's troubles.' That, sir, I deny.
Beer is the poor man's greatest enemy;
And thousands knew it well, who would rejoice
If it were never placed within their choice.
Man, sir, with noble hearts and skilful hands,
In native grain the foremost of all lands,
Courageous, faithful, generous and brave,
Scorning the base dependance of a slave,
Their peril is the drink. Then, why, sir, why
Are drink shops licensed with impunity?
Why are these crimes suffered to pollute
The British soil and make the man a brute?
Why allow private interest to flout
The earth with crime, and misery, and blood?
Sir, I can't bear it; you must let me speak:
Some times my heart's so full, I think 'twill break.
For I do know, as we poor drunkards stand,
We need protection upon every hand.
Protection from that law that flings away
The nation's strength—I mind, sir, what I say.
Protection from our weakness; from the snares
In which we get entangled unawares.
"Sir, did you ever walk along the street,
A low back street, at night, when drunkards meet?
Where the gin palace turns the night to day,
And public-house and beer-shop line the way?
Say, did you listen? What, sir, did you hear?
Our English workmen were enjoying beer.
Did the clamor come from happy sons,
Or wild beasts maddened, raging in their dens?
You hear the fiendish laugh, the curse, the strife,
The curses heaped upon a helpless wife:
The wretched harlot's song, the drunkard's roar;
The noisy fiddle, and the rattling floor.
You saw the ragged mother, sick and pale;
You hear the miserable infant's wail.
That was the English workman's happy lot,
That was the music to the 'poor man's pot.'
You heard it? Yes, our workmen mad with drink!
Something to make a sober christian think!
"Few, as yet, strive to disinfect the air;
A noble-hearted handful here and there.
The greater part remote from the disease,
Live in fair homes and breathe the sanitated breeze
And wish the little handful good success.
'If they don't 'exaggerate' or 'drive' the thing,
Or ask a 'exertion' they cannot bring.
"But in my thought, the scales are on their eyes,
And if, by some miraculous surprise,
The naked truth should flash upon their sight,
And every drink-shop stand in sudden light,—
Astounded with the horror of the view,
Their cry would be 'Lord show me what to do!'
"A time will come, sir—would that it were come,
When righteousness shall reign in every home
And the blessed knowledge of the Lord shall be
As the great floods that overflow the sea,
And all things hurtful shall be swept away,
And earth rejoice in one long Sabbath day.
Then e'en the little child shall dare to play
Upon the harmless cockatrice's den,
For poison shall have lost his venom then.
"But this is not that time. The serpentstings,
The adder bites, and the drunkard sings
In mad carousal, while the British name
Grows a by-word for drunkenness and shame.
O, sir, roll this reproach away,
And hasten on the glorious Sabbath day.
When Christ shall reign in righteousness and peace,
And all the turmoil of the world shall cease.
Think of that time, and for his glory's sake:
This fenfold work of mercy undertake."

WIT AND HUMOR.
A great hardship—an iron steamer.
Hydrophobic bedclothes—Sheets of water.
Love without money has been compared to a pair of shiny-leather boots without soles.
A girl at school would like to have two birthdays every year. When she grows up a woman she objects to having one.
'Have you any fish in your basket?' asked a person of a fisherman who was returning home. 'Yes, a good eel,' was the reply.
'Now, papa, what is humbug?' 'It is,' replied papa, 'when one pretends to be very fond of me, and puts no buttons on my shirts.'
A farmer made his last will and testament in words few but significant:—'I have nothing, I owe nothing, and I give the rest to the poor.'
People who attend fires should never throw the burnous out of the window until a sufficient number of people have accumulated to break the fall.
An Irishman on seeing a vessel very heavily laden, and scarcely above the water's edge, exclaimed, 'Upon my sowl, if the river was but a little higher, the ship would go to the bottom.'
A convict wrote a letter to his brother, a serious letter, without an attempt at a joke, which, however, concluded thus: 'I must leave off now, for my feet are so cold I cannot hold my pen.'
Foote, being once annoyed by a poor fiddler straining harsh discords under his window, sent him a shilling, with a request that he would play elsewhere, as one scraper at the door was sufficient.
A lady waited on a doctor to purchase some fashionable remedy that was to cure everything. 'Lose no time, my dear madam, in using it,' said the doctor, 'for in less than a week it will be out of fashion.'
Landlady (to boarder who has passed his cup six times): 'You are very fond of coffee, Mr. Smith.' Mr. Smith: 'Yes, ma'am, it looks as if I was when I am willing to swallow so much water for the sake of getting a little.'
'The sun is all very well,' said an Irishman, 'but in my opinion the moon is worth two of it, for the moon affords us light in the night time when we really want it, whereas we have the sun with us in the day-time when we have no occasion for it.'
We would have no man imitate the example of the Boston miser, who, being asked at a dinner party whether he wished to be helped again, replied, 'No, thank you, I don't want any more; but I will take the rest in money, if you please.'
An alchemist solicited a reward from Pope Clement XII. for an alleged discovery of the art of turning stone into gold. The witty pope gave him a very long purse, saying that a man who had it in his power to make gold only wanted a purse to put it in.
A practical joker living near Danbury, Conn., stole a scarecrow from a farmer's cornfield last week and leaned it up against the owner's door-yard fence. The owner saw it, and supposing it to be a burglar, sat up all night waiting for it to attempt to enter his house.
Tommy came home from school, and handed to his father the teacher's report on his progress during the month. 'This is very unsatisfactory, Tom; you've a very small number of good marks. I'm not pleased with it,' 'I told the teacher you wouldn't be, but he wouldn't alter it.'
Daniel Webster once observed in company that no woman ever wrote a letter without a postcript. 'By next letter shall relate you I said a lady of his acquaintance. The Great Expounder soon after received a letter from his fair disputant, where after her signature, stance: 'P. S.—Who is in right now, you or I?'
In a certain school, when the scholars were parsing, the word wolf occurred in the sentence. The younger who was up, a bright eyed little fellow, puzzled over the word for a few minutes, and then as a bright idea struck him, burst out with—'I can parse it. Positive wolf; comparitive, wuler; superlative, sunlog-wuf.'

WITHOUT A NEWSPAPER.
Nothing presents a sadder commentary upon the present condition of society than the large number of families, both in town and country, but more especially in the latter, that subscribe to no paper of any kind. Hundreds and thousands of families are thus growing up utterly ignorant of what is transpiring in the world and around them—ignorant of the mighty events of the day. But who can tell the vast amount of injury that is being inflicted on the rising generation—those who are to take our place in the busy world at no distant day—growing up without any knowledge of the present, or any study of the past, this ignorance, being imbued into them by the sanction of those who should, and doubtedless do, know better, did they only think of the injurious effects of their insane course. Let the head of every family think of this, and place in the hands of those for whom he is responsible the means of acquiring some knowledge of the moving panorama in which we act our different parts.

ABOUT THE SIZE OF IT.
The entire mass of tobacco which is annually consumed in smoking, snuffing and in chewing on the earth is 4,000 millions of pounds; manifestly too high an estimate for from twelve to fifteen hundred millions of inhabitants. Let us take the half as the more probable, and let us suppose the tobacco leaves transformed into roll tobacco, a tobacco serpent is created which with a diameter of two inches, and following the direction of the equator, could wind itself around the earth thirty times. Let us suppose the tobacco is formed into tablets similar to the chocolate tablets, and which, indeed, is the shape which the chewing tobacco of sailors and Yankees takes, and we have a colossal pile worthy of being placed beside the third largest of the pyramids of Gizeh, that of Mykerinos, and as massive and as high as that old regal edifice. Let us grind all the tobacco into snuff, and let us picture to ourselves the sad case that an evil equinoctial wind one fine morning blows the snuff over the ocean, and showers it on one of the German States, we are certain more than one of the Lilliputian States would have much difficulty in recovering its existence by shovelling away the snuff.

IT WASN'T THE TOOTHACHE.
In the ladies, waiting room at the Central Depot the other day, were a newly-married couple from Grass Lake. They had been visiting in the city two or three days and were then ready to go home.—They sat side by side, of course, his arm around her waist and she leaning on his shoulder. A long-waisted stranger from the East, having sore eyes and a big heart, walked in, saw them thus seated, and in about a minute he asked of the husband:
'Has that woman there got the toothache?'
The husband looked up in surprise, but made no answer. After two or three minutes the long-waisted man again remarked:
'If that woman has got the toothache, I've got a bottle of peppermint in my satchel.'
The bride rolled her big white eyes around, and the husband looked somewhat embarrassed. The man from down East unlocked his satchel, fumbled around shirts and collars, and brought up four ounces of peppermint essence. He uncorked it, touched the contents of the bottle against his big red tongue, and, handing it toward the husband, feelingly said:
'Just have her sop some on a rag and rub her gooms with it. We've used it in our family for——'
The bride's eyes threw out sparks as she lifted her head from its loving position, and, striking at the bottle, she snarled out:
'Tuthache, you fule! If you don't know the difference 'tween true love and tuthache, you'd better pick grass with the geese.'
My Lord! gasped the man, and he hurried out with the satchel in one hand and the bottle in the other.—Detroit Free Press.

TALE-BEARING.
What counsel should be given to those who are so unfortunate as to have tale-bearers among their acquaintances?
Never listen to them if you can help it. The receiver is as bad as the thief. If you are deaf they will soon be dumb. When they come to tell you something 'you ought to know,' tell them that very often the old line is true, that 'Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise.' You may indeed sometimes think that it is better the tale should be told to you than to anybody else, and that when once you have heard it, it will not be told again; by listening you may, perhaps, prevent further mischief. But even this is a doubtful justification; and you ought not to be satisfied without attempting to make the tale-bearer sensible of his folly and sin.
Never gave him the chance of reporting anything about yourself. Shroud yourself in impenetrable reserve. Make him feel that his habit excludes him from all the pleasures of confidence and intimacy with wise men. Talk to him about the weather and the crops, the the news and the exhibitions. Never say anything that may not safely be twisted into any inconceivable shape, reported by a hundred foolish tongues, without doing any harm. Never tell him anything that you would not trust him to say over again in any words he might like to use, and with every possible misapprehension of your meaning, on a platform before three thousand people. Be especially afraid of him when he is obsequious, when he praises your business tact, and admires the taste with which you have laid out your garden. Under the warmth of his good opinion your reserve is likely to relax. Remember the words of Solomon: 'He that goeth about as a tale-bearer revealeth secrets, therefore meddle not with him that flattereth with his lips.' Of all the foolish pretences by which tale-bearers justify themselves for telling what should never be told, surely this is the most ridiculous, that they 'spoke in confidence.' If they find it is so hard to hold their tongues, what right have they to subject a friend to the inconveniences which they could not bear themselves? If they are guilty of betraying trust, what right have they to expect that there own trust will not be betrayed? They ask their friends 'not to tell,' but there example is likely to be more effective than their precept.
See that you create in your own house and among all your friends a spirit of intolerance for the offence, and a moral judgment that shall repel and condemn the offender. Let tale-bearing never be regarded as a weakness, but as a vice. Let no cleverness palliate it. Make it despised as a meanness, censured as a sin.
There are, indeed, 'Tales' which ought to be told and listened to—'Tales' of cheerfulness in suffering, of energy and self-denial in well doing, of open-handed generosity, of incorruptible integrity. Such 'Tales' have elevated the moral aims of many of us, inspired our shaking hearts with courage and constancy, given force and fire to our noblest passions. The gospel itself is a 'Tale;' and the apostles 'turned the world upside down,' not by a moral or religious theory, but by telling the story of how the Lord Jesus loved mankind. Yes, the story of his poverty and homelessness, temptation and agony, his miracles of mercy and his words of love, his shame and death, is the spell by which even the hardest and most profligate of men have been softened and recovered to a holy and blessed life. Tell that story, and children will feel its charm, and aged men and women, bowed down under sad cares and sorrows of lifetime, will confess its power. Would that every Christian tongue were full of it! How often used it supporting and lightening the faltering of good causes and the zeal of the ministry, emboldened to tell the tale of Christ's infinite compassion! 'Life and death are in the power of the tongue.' By words shalt thou be justified, and by thy words shalt thou be condemned.'

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND THE GREAT PYRAMID
Are among the Leading Questions of the day—but a subject all should bear in mind, is that
After the 1st of January, 1878, I will sell goods 10 per cent cheaper
THAN HERETOFORE, FOR CASH AND CASH ONLY.
I would advise those who are in the habit of running long-winded accounts, and settling them by slow notes, to go and deal where they can be accommodated for six or twelve months as they may require, and when they want to SAVE MONEY to bring the cash to me, and I will satisfy any reasonable person that for they can buy Goods from me from Twelve to Fifteen per cent Cheaper than they can purchase them from those who give credit.
THIRTY DAYS' CREDIT WILL BE GIVEN
parties we consider in a position and honest enough to pay on demand. All accounts rendered monthly, and if not then settled 12 per cent interest will be charged. A Call Solicited, and we know you won't go away disappointed.
LUKE FISHER.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,
—FOR—
Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.
The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.
Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate backing Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.
Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.
It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction of the muscles, stiff joints, spasal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.
NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.
An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye incute or chronic, Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.
THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Ringworms and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.
There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.
The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.
They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with them it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.
They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC-DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.
They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

LIFE.

Life is a rose, briar-burdened, yet sweet—
Blooming a day,
Flinging its perfume like pestume to meet—
Wind blow away.

Leaf after leaf spreads its blush to the air,
Kissed by the sun—
Dewser-kissed growing so joy makes it fair—
Love's guerdon won.

Leaf after leaf shrinks up from the heart
Leaving it bare;
Color and fragrance and joy all depart—
None left to care.

Nay, the Divine in it lingers there still:
God's care in all.
Rose-leaves but drop at the beck of His will—
Fetters which thrall.

Up from its trammels the freed spirit wings,
Higher to soar;
Altar immortal, a pure essence flings—
Sweet evermore!

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

Sermon by the Rev. Alex. Bell, of St. Andrew's Church.

As announced in a previous issue the Rev. Alex. Bell, of St. Andrew's Church, delivered his promised sermon on "Eternal Punishment," on Sunday, 20th January. Owing to a pressure on our space last week it was unavoidably crowded out, but we this week give an extended report. The church was crowded to its seating capacity, and the preacher listened to with marked attention. The following was the text:

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment.—Matthew xxv, 46.

He said:—Our business to-night is not with the nature of future punishment, the manner of its infliction, or the place where it shall be endured; but only with its continuance as here described to us, "everlasting punishment." The whole teaching of the Bible goes to prove that man is a responsible creature, and that he is under obligations to serve and to honor the God who made him, and who shall in due time judge him and render to every man according to his works. The laws given for the guidance of man's life—the rewards held out to stimulate his obedience—the threatenings uttered to deter him from crime—the punishments often actually inflicted for disobedience—and the protection and deliverance and good vouchsafed for faithfulness—all go to put the point beyond controversy. That the present life is not the whole of man's existence is as clearly taught in the Bible as man's responsibility—no one we think will attempt to deny. The soul is not destroyed by the dissolution of the body, nor is the responsibility of our actions in this life cast off by the change experienced in what we commonly call death; for this life, whatever may be its sufferings and trials, its punishments, rewards or pleasures, is set forth as a probationary state, while the future is the unchanging sphere in which just and adequate rewards or punishments shall be rendered to the good and to the evil—the unchanging state into which we are introduced, and left there with the momentuous utterance, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still, and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still, and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still, and he that is holy, let him be holy still." That the rewards and punishments of the future are meant to be, and shall be eternal, seems to the unprejudiced reader to be the plain meaning of the Bible. And certainly it is clear to us that, unless some foregone conclusion has been arrived at, or some pet theory adopted which must be maintained even at the expense of the inspired word, no man with any pretension to understand the plain application of language can possibly resist the conclusion that the punishment of the wicked shall, according to the scriptures, be everlasting. We know there are men in prominent places—large-hearted and good men—who have expressed a hope to the contrary, and many are taking advantage of it to cast off all fear of consequences to live more carelessly and more openly regardless of all religious restraints. But the advocates of this hope, whose estimate of sin cannot be very high, and whose conception of God's benevolence must be so full and all-absorbing that there is no room left in their hearts for a single thought of justice, differ very widely among themselves as to the way in which their hope shall be realized. Some affirm that all who die impenitent shall be annihilated, and some, that future punishment shall continue only for a time, and that by the reforming efficacy of that punishment all men shall be ultimately purged from sin, and restored to God's favor and an eternity of happiness thereafter; and others, that after a period of punishment some shall be restored, and only those found impenitent after this trial of punishment shall be annihilated. In such teachings as these it will be easily observed that there is a purgatory far more worthy of the name than the devotee of Rome was ever taught to fear; for men are sure to be released from its pains without either "fee or friendly prayer," while to those not released there is a cessation of all existence and of all suffering—a thought that, as comfortable to some low minds, and as pleasing as if they were promised the safety and the joys of heaven. The result of promulgating opinions like these is not hard to see. The harvest to be reaped from such seed is certain to be a laxity of morals, a casting off of all fear of consequences as regards the future, a weakening of all sense of responsibility towards God, and the introduction of a "Sadducean licentiousness" which will laugh at restraint, and turn to ridicule the most sacred concerns of our holy religion. The standard of life shall be reduced and men shall look not to what God says, but to what they themselves desire, and what their neighbours, lax in their morals as themselves, won't openly condemn. And so the wish of society and the common practices of men, be they pure or corrupt, shall become the test of daily conduct. And what matter whether this test be strict or easy, according to God's word or the grossest notions of the human heart, heaven shall be sure at last, the only difference being, that one shall enter a little earlier than the other till the whole race shall at length be gathered home to God reconciled; all penalty shall be exhausted, all possible suffering finished, and happiness shall reign. Who, with a faith like that and a hope like that, is likely to be careful about the character of his acts? Who, with a faith like that and a hope like that, is likely to sacrifice one single desire of a depraved heart for righteousness sake? What will think of suffering one single disappointment, or facing one hour's hardness that he can help for Christ's sake and the gospel's, when his doing or not doing shall make no difference in the end? And how can the professed ministers of Christ with power and the hope of success urge their flocks to lives of godliness and holiness, while at the same time they are teaching them to entertain such hopes? How can they pray for the speedy conversion of each as shall be saved, when they hope, and teach their people to hope, that all shall be saved, that even the lost now shall be brought from the sufferings of the damned, and set side by side with those who have already entered into life? Surely men may now confidently pray for the dead, and without the fear of being put to shame commit the remains of the murderer, the drunkard, the libertine, and the saint side by side to the grave, in the sure and certain hope of a glorious restoration for them all. There is an inconsistency here which men possessed of a very fine sentimentalism may not be able to see; or, perhaps, affecting a prodigious grasp of intellect and an extraordinary measure of benevolence, the thing is too small to get their attention; but those who take God's word, and not sentiment, as their guide cannot swallow the camel so easily. As the word abides so also their faith abide, and while they on the one hand look with expectation to the great reality "eternal life", they fear on the other the equally as great reality "eternal punishment." But what saith the scripture? The verse before us speaks of "everlasting punishment" and "eternal life"—the one as the portion of the wicked, the other as a portion of the righteous. Those who deny the eternity of punishment freely admit the eternity of life. They believe in the never-ending continuance, nature and joys of what we speak of as eternal life, but deny the ever-enduring nature of what we speak of as eternal punishment. Of punishment they affirm that, the age will come in the future when punishment shall be exhausted and all men shall be restored to God's favor, and get a place among the heirs of glory. Now it so happens that life and punishment are here described to us in the very same terms. The words translated, "everlasting" and "eternal," are in the original one and the same, so there is no reason why the translation should be not "eternal punishment" as well as "eternal life." The word in both cases is aionion, eternal, so that the very same length of continuance is affirmed of the punishment that is affirmed of the life—they are both aionion. And one of two conclusions we must admit, namely: either eternal life and eternal punishment, or limited life. Of the later the whole plan of salvation is a contradiction; and believing the gospel, and holding by Jesus as He is revealed and offered to us in it, and accepting the eternity of life we are bound to accept the eternity of punishment also. Both shall have the same unending continuance, or both shall have the same limited duration. They stand together or they fall together. For the failure of life our benevolent hopers are not prepared, and as there is no middle position there is nothing left them but a hopeless hope or the candid acceptance of the doctrine in question. But our hopers say that the word aionios is never used in the sense of unending duration, and therefore cannot mean "eternal" or "everlasting" in the sense in which we usually accept these terms. To this we answer aionios is one of the strongest terms to express unending duration that the Greek language can produce. Moreover in the Septuagint, which is the oldest Greek translation of the Hebrew scripture, aionios is the word chosen to convey to us the meaning of two Hebrew words used to express the eternity of God, the abiding nature of God's covenants, the duration of the Messiah's reign, God's unalterable plan of dealing with the righteous and the wicked, and other kindred ideas where the notion of unknown and unlimited continuance is required. This one fact shows us beyond doubt that whatever men may think of the word now those who first used it to express Bible ideas understood it to mean "eternal." Time has been defined as the space between two eternities. When we look back to the unknown and the unlimited duration before time began we call that eternity, and when we look forward to the unknown and unlimited duration after time shall cease, we call that eternity; and we have not yet been able to discover one single instance in the New Testament in which aionios to its application does not clearly give us the notion of eternity, either in reference to the past or to that which is to come. The word is used seventy-two times in the new Testament. Three times it refers to the unlimited duration before time began—i. e., the eternity past; and forty-three times it is applied to life—the gift of God to man, the life which we get in Christ Jesus, and which Jesus gives when He says, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish;" the life described to us as everlasting, and which shall gain its majority in heaven. Fourteen times it describes the continuance of the bliss and the glory of the saved. Twice it is applied to Jesus' life, once to God, once to the Holy Ghost, and once to describe the power ascribed to God. And in one and all of these applications the idea of unending continuance is undeniably conveyed to us in strong and clear contrast to things which have a limited existence. Seven times it is applied to the future of the wicked; and who shall say that the inspired pen wrote the word for us sixty-five times to have the clear and accepted meaning of unlimited duration, and left it seven times on the page with liberty to us to understand it in a sense the very opposite? Where is the authority that tells us to translate it eternal, everlasting, unending, when applied to life and glory, and Christ and the Holy Ghost and God, and the continuance of the future happy condition of the saved; but to give it the meaning of limited duration when applied to the future of the ungodly? The meaning which we put on the word in the one case we are bound to put on it in the other. Surely among reasonable men, and with those who trust to God's word, before sentiment, the testimony of sixty five unquestioned applications will be sufficient to settle the meaning to be attached, in seven others made by the same writer, and without word or circumstance to qualify or limit the meaning. Again we have the word aion, meaning duration. This in a reduplicated form, such as "eis tous aionas ton aionon," and translated "for ever and ever," is never used in any other sense than that of unlimited, unending duration. The form of expression occurs about twenty times in the New Testament; sixteen times in one way or other it is applied to God and Christ and to the continuance of their life, and praise, and government and glory; once to the happy continuance of the blessedness of the saints, and three times to the future continued punishment of the wicked. And are we to believe that words used seventeen times to describe the unending praise, and life and glory of God and Christ, and the unending reign and happiness of the redeemed are not to have the same meaning attached to them where thrice applied to the future sufferings of the lost? We know that aion without the re-duplication is often used in connection with things which necessarily have a limited duration. And it is here we believe that all the difficulty has arisen. Some men have not been able to see the invariable rule which governs the application of the word, and finding it is sometimes in places where it could not mean eternal they hastily reject that meaning in every case, and begin to hope that what it states of the wicked in the future is not true. But let it be observed that whenever applied it means in every instance the whole, as to duration, of the thing with which it is connected. If to God it means the whole of God's existence; if to the world it means to the end of the present economy; if to life it is to the whole of life; and if to the future it is to the whole, not to a part of the future. Only nine times is aion applied to the future of man, and seven times out of the nine by Jesus Himself in reference to them who believe in Him, thus: they shall "never die," "never thirst," "never perish," "live for ever," &c., and about these there is no dispute. But the other two by Peter and Jude, because about the future of the impenitent must, without the shadow of an excuse, be questioned. The question here is to make men wiser than Christ. And there are other expressions such as "unquenchable fire," "the worm that dieth not," "they shall not see life," "the wrath of God abideth on him," "good were it for that man if he had never been born," &c., which can have no intelligible meaning if we rob them of the notion of unchanging and unlimited continuance. Must we then in the face of all this, and without reason mutilate the word and pervert its plain meaning, simply because men love to have it so—because from an over-flowing benevolence and a heart full of love and pity, some cherish a hope—a hope without scriptural foundation, and which, whatever it may be to themselves, can only be to those who love their sin a snare. If we are to follow our own wish then we may have it as we please; but if as intelligent and responsible creatures we are to follow God's word, then we are bound to accept its plain teaching, and when we come to it, it is not to seek what we desire, nor say what we would like to hope for, but to ask, "What does God say?" The responsibility here is that of accepting or rejecting the truth, and with that acceptance or rejection the taking or the casting away of life. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and to accept God's remedy is to escape all the horrors, and fears, and sufferings and darkness which make up and gather round eternal punishment; while to reject God's remedy is to throw away the safeguards of life, to let life's hopes go, to pull down life's supports and protections, and to place ourselves in the position of those who shall be the unwilling subjects of all that future punishment implies. To the unprejudiced it must be plain that as surely as the Scriptures teach the eternity of God and Christ and life, and the blessedness of the saved, so surely do they teach the eternity of punishment. Accept the one side, and we cannot get out of accepting the other. Reject the eternity of punishment and the very same reasoning compels us to reject the eternity of everything—of life, of heaven,

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 31, 1878.

THE PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

Mr. Treasurer Wood made on Thursday last the usual financial statement of the session. His speech was a model of plain, unvarnished exposition, and the good sense which characterised its composition and delivering was rewarded by the close attention of the House and the miserable apology for a criticism which emanated from the leader of the opposition. We shall have future opportunities of expressing our opinions on some of the more important points brought up in the speech, and therefore we content ourselves for the present with a brief abstract of the statement of our financial affairs which it contained. The subjects discussed by the Treasurer were (1) the Receipts and Expenditure of the year 1877, (2) the condition of the finance at the close of the same year, and (3) the estimated receipts and expenditure of 1878. The Receipts of 1877—exclusive of money borrowed in order to obviate the sale of Dominion debentures, of which a brief explanation is given below, were as follows :—

From the Dominion of Canada	$1,393,469.43
Territorial Revenue	693,712.99
Public Institutions Revenue	39,726.07
Interest on investments	128,073.72
Education	67,878.89
[illegible]	79,688.36
Licences	57,694.49
Law Stamps	29,174.50
Casual Revenue	1,021.13
Algoma Taxes	1,936.71
Mimico Farm	1,936.71
Drainage Debentures	99,825.69
" Assessment	570.93
Settlers Homestead Fund	117.16
Total Receipts	$2,442,977.59

The total expenditure for 1877 was $2,368,315.44, leaving a surplus on the year's operations of $63,762.14. In accordance with statutary requirement the sum of $721,994.07 was paid out of capital for aid to railways, drainage of swamp lands, and distribution of surplus, and as the sums which make up this amount were not chargeable to ordinary expenditure that had to be met in some other way than a resort to the ordinary revenue. The method of raising the money adopted by the Government was the sale of Dominion 5 per cent debentures and as the time for selling them to advantage has not yet arrived the sum of £149.000 sterling has been borrowed to meet payments of the above kind for 1877 and 1878. The money has been borrowed at four per cent on the debentures as security and as these bare five per cent of interest the transaction is a profitable one.

The financial condition of the Province at the close of 1877 is shewn by a comparison of the assets with the liabilities. The former amounted to $6,262,374.82, and the latter to $1,509,576.21, leaving a surplus in the Treasury of $4,752,798.61 notwithstanding unusually heavy payments in aid of railways during the year. The Estimated Receipts for 1878 amount in all to $2,451,069.42, and the estimated Expenditure is placed at $2,542,353.94 of which only $2,052,653.62 is fairly chargeable to ordinary revenue, balance being on capital account. From the above exhibit it appears that the financial condition of the Province is sound and satisfactory, and the entire absence of intelligent criticism of the budget speech on the part of the Opposition was an involuntary acknowledgment of the fact.

PRISON LABOUR.

A bill is now before the Ontario Legislature to provide for the employment of prisoners outside the prison walls. A few moments consideration will make the necessity of some such measure patent to all. Of late the rapidly increasing number of those incarcerated in our gaols has, we regret to say, been particularly marked. By reference to a report lately issued, we find the increase for the last twelve months, over a like period preceding was 2,945. The difficulties of procuring work for such a large number of men has been the cause of most of them finding themselves with nothing to do, and, birds of the situation,—free to walk carelessly around, or concoct some new mischief to be entered upon when they are released. There can be no doubt, no greater evil can exist in any community than absolute idleness. Apart altogether from the question of revenue, it is most desirable that the hands and the brains of the prisoners should be employed. If, therefore, the necessary amount of work can not be had within the walls, it must be secured without.

But another circumstance must be taken into consideration, these extra labourers are so many more thrown upon the market in competition with those well-behaved members of society who have to look to their hands for their support and that of their families. This new influx is regarded by some as threatening the latter. Where there is no other consideration than employment, and where it is not a question of wages so much as one of keeping criminals busy, it is thought the remuneration for their labour will be so low that other men will have no chance of competing with it. We are free to admit we would much prefer if there were no criminals to be hired and no prison labor to be employed. We believe something could be done to lessen the quantity of both, by the infliction of shorter and more decisive methods of punishment. In many instances in which terms at hard labour are now imposed, the lash would be a much more speedy and, we believe, a not less effective expedient. But until some such method is introduced, or some new deterrant found, prison labour will have to be employed. It is one of the penances which society pays for having bad members, that it must suffer—innocent and guilty alike—from the depredations of these lawless ones. To a very great extent, however, the evils predicted from the measure seem to us imaginary. It must not be forgotten that prison labour is inferior, that it is clumsy to manage, and that it is extorted from men who are prepared to do all they can to avoid it, and to take advantage of every loophole during the whole day they work to escape it. They will have no other object than to get in their day. How much material they may spoil, whatever dissatisfaction they may give, is of no consequence whatever. What has the skilled workman, giving his time of his own free will, and with his reputation to maintain, to fear from such? No man with any deliate or expensive work to perform will place those in positions of any consequence who in accomplishing it have no object to gain in doing it well, and nothing to fear by doing it ill. Such a feeling must inevitably lead to prisoners being employed in the inferior kinds of work or in the drudgery of the superior. There are a great many things in every trade from which workmen would gladly be free. Such labour as hod-carrying, street-cleaning, and many of the more servile employments, good workmen can only be induced to do from necessity; and from them if this measure becomes law, they will be released.

Another point which must be kept in view is the additional punishment these vagabonds will have to endure by being forced to publicly appear in their prison dress. Isolated from the world, with society quite congenial to their tastes, with good quarters to live in and not the worst fare, it has got to be the fashion among these gentry very often to contrive to get "sent down" for three months whenever business is dull, and live at the public expense till something better turns up. These, and more, evils the present bill will obviate; and while being really a benefit to those at work outside by relieving them of much disagreeable toil, it will enable the government to get some return for the expenses incurred by prisoners, and will tend to make both physically and mentally better men of the prisoners themselves.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

The very satisfactory condition of Ontario's educational system under the supervision of a responsible Minister of the Crown is matter for congratulation; but is nothing more than might be expected under such a plan of administration, always provided that we have as now a diligent and painstaking head of the Department. There were some who strongly objected to the addition of another Minister to the Ontario Cabinet, and occasionally we have yet the same objection raised as something to the discredit of those who administer the affairs of the Province. But those who make a merely partisan objection to the new portfolio in the Ontario Cabinet, and profess admiration for the old way of managing our Educational interests, under a Chief Superintendent entirely dissociated from the Ministry, forget or fancy those they appeal to are ignorant of the fact that the new order of things was long ago recommended by the aged and respected Egerton Ryerson himself. That gentleman with his large experience in the field to which the greater portion of his life was devoted doubtless saw plainly the difficulties in the waw of carrying out reforms in the educational system, such as could not be surmounted unless the matters with which they dealt were brought directly to the attention of the Legislature. We question very much whether the excellent changes that have been made of late years in the condition and governance of our schools and schoolmasters could possibly have been inaugurated had it not been for the attention paid to them by a Minister of the Crown, having power as such to make firm his responsibility, and being directly restrained as well as aided by the criticism and advice of the Legislature. It is but in accordance with our system of responsible government that our educational affairs as well as all other public interests should be made the direct care of a Minister amenable to Parliament for his acts; and certainly those matters that come within the province of Mr. Crooks are of equal, if not superior importance to any other class or subjects that go to make up that mass of public interests embraced in the word politics. And it is by broadening the basis of our politics by the direct introduction into the discussions in Parliament of matters of deep concern, that our public men will be raised beyond the poor inanity which seems to bind many of those of the present House, and our public affairs rendered debatable on other grounds than personal attacks on opponents and petty party scandals.

Some fault has of late been found with the Minister of Education, and with the government of which he is a member, on account of the late investigation of charges against his subordinates by a Judge commissioned for the purpose, rather than by himself. The charges, which proved to be unfounded, were made not only in the apparent interests of the schools, the teachers and the public; but indirectly were a charge against the Minister and his Department. Looked at in the latter light, they were hardly fit subjects for investigation by one concerned in the decision. The more particularly is this the case, because of the eager desire of the chief Opposition organ to make party capital out of the affair. By the appointment of a Judge of acknowledged purity to conduct the investigation, all suspicions of collusion were avoided and an assurance given the public that the matters referred to such a tribunal would be impartially considered. Hereby was avoided the accusation that the Minister tried to shield those under him and thus prevent an imputation against his own sagacity and watchfulness over his Department. That such an accusation would have been brought had the investigation been conducted by the Minister himself is evident from the history of the Central Prison Scandal, the investigation of which by the Minister of Public Works led to the cry that he had saved himself and his colleagues from censure by winking at actual offences. Perhaps it is that they have been deprived of such and the opportunity, that the Opposition do not like the Commission of Enquiry in the Educational Scandal. It seems that in any case they are determined to appear dissatisfied, and cry out, even at the sacrifice of their consistency, against whatever course may be adopted by Ministers.

Toronto Telegram: The best thing that members of the Opposition can do when they are tempted to make speeches about the Pacific Scandal is to spread their coat-tails and sit down, for it is a subject that does not stand being stirred

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

This institution has already come in for the usual sectional attack upon it the Opposition in the Legislature under guidance of obtaining information about the destination of its graduates, the member for East Middlesex indulged in some depreciatory remarks which were followed up by others of a similar and worse character from other members of the left. It is hard to say why the Agricultural College and Central Prison alone of the Provincial institutions are so persistently assailed by the Opposition. They were both projected by the Sandfield Macdonald Government and as they were both novel experiments it is not surprising that many people should have been from the first in doubt as to their chances of success. We can understand those who feel sceptical in the matter, doing all they can to prevent the undertakings from being entered upon, but we find it impossible to credit any man with public spirit or patriotism who after a project has been taken up persists in his endeavours to make it a failure by means of sneers and innuendoes which if put in the form of assertions would be positive falsehoods.

The Agricultural College has cost a considerable amount of money, and up to the commencement of last session its future seemed dark indeed. It has incurred no small amount of notoriety through the indiscretions of its first principal, the melancholy fate of its second, the unfitness of its first Rector, and the indiscretion of the then Minister of Agriculture. Under its present Principal it was rapidly gaining public confidence, but was then greatly hampered for want of accommodation. The staff necessary to carry on a College for 80 or 100 students cost very little more than the staff required for 30 or 40, and therefore if the institution was to be made a success at all it had to be extended. The only alternative was to abandon it as a failure. The latter course the Ministry naturally shrank from adopting, and they asked for an appropriation for the purpose of making addition to the buildings. These have been to a great extent completed during the past season so that now there is accommodation for all who offer instead of an establishment so limited in capacity that only a small proportion of those who applied could be admitted. There is every reason to believe that the institution is now on the fare way to success, and that of no ordinary kind. Since the opening of the College 208 students have enrolled themselves, and of these 87 are now in attendance. There is no doubt that the attendance will rapidly increase as additional accomodation is provided, and already it has been found necessary to relieve the Principal by appointing a Rector to assist him in the care of the Students. Of the 208 students 121 have graduated and of these 81 are known to be engaged in either agriculture or holticulture; 7 are puraning veterinary studies; 18 have not devoted themselves to either of these occupations, and the remaining 17 have not reported themselves. While we believe that the benefits of the institution should be confined as much as possible to those who intend to become farmers, gardners, or veterinary surgeons, we do not much regret that a small percentage of the graduates find there way into other callings. The education they receive, as any one can see who looks at the programme of studies, is a thorough one, and it would be a good thing for society if the members of other pursuits or professions knew a little more than they do about the great staple industry which is the country's sheet anchor.

Matters have at last reached a stage which warrants us in saying that the success of the Agricultural College and model farm is beyond peradventure, and now that these institutions are doing their work on the whole well we earnestly urge upon the members of the Legislature the necessity of not only refraining from desparaging statements that are uncalled for but also of being somewhat liberal in their financial support. Their growing popularity is sufficiently attested by the fact that whereas a short time ago the boys had to be paid for attendance by the receipt of remuneration for the work on the farm there are now plenty of applicants eager for admission without remuneration at all. It may in course of time become not merely advisable but necessary to impose a fee for tuition with a view to keeping out all but those who come with the object of making subsequently a practical use of the knowledge they acquire. Farmers sons who wish to obtain a good English Education while learning the principles and most approved methods of agriculture ought to make a point of spending a session or two in the Agricultural College before setting up for themselves.

THE DECISION OE "BETTER JUDGES."

We are willing to agree with our Conservative contemporary in this town, that the commercial men of the country as a body are better judges of what is most requsite in trade matters, than the Dominion cabinet. And herein is just the difference between those who advocate a protective tariff. and those who are content with a tariff, for purposes of revenue only. The one class contend that ministers should not meddle with what they cannot fully understand, while the other class hold that they should ignore their own comparative ignorance and the laws of trade, by attempting an unnatural regulation of the country's commerce. We are glad to welcome the Review as a convert to this healthy doctrine, it has been wont to disregard, and we most heartily endorse its sentiments when it says :—

"Sensible men will be apt to put more confidence in the opinions expressed by commercial men on commercial questions than in those expressed by a number of professional men on a subject on which they are confessedly at sea."

We also agree with our contemporary on the good effects to the country, likely to result from the meeting of the Dominion Board of Trade, though we cannot admit that the dicta of that Board should be accepted as gospel, on all occasions, and on every matter it chooses to pronounce upon. But if we cannot go so far as the Review in our admiration of the Dominion Board of Trade, we are glad to observe the greater admiration expressed by our contemporary, because we feel that after such an expression there, will be a readier acknowledgment by it, the wisdom of the following resolution, passed the other day by the Board, of the wisdom of which it has spoken with such assurance.

"Moved by Mr. John I, Mackenzie, of Hamilton, and seconded by Mr. Greene, of Montreal. That while, in the continuation of this Board, the present tariff of 17½ per cent, in fair and reasonable, yet in the event of its being found necessary to increase the duties for revenue purposes, this Board would respectfully request the Government to consider the industrial development of the country in any readjustment of the tariff."

This was carried without so much as one discontent voice being raised against its acceptation of the present 17½ per cent tariff as satisfactory, or its express endorsation of a tariff "for revenue purposes." In case an increase of duties for such purposes is found necessary, (and we trust such necessity will never arise,) it will be the plain duty of the government, and along with it the whole Parliament, to consider while deliberating on a readjustment, the probable effects of an increase on the industrial development of the country. Indeed such a consideration is perhaps the very strongest argument against a high tariff, and it is not improbable that such a thought indeced the reference in the resolution, unanimously passed by the Dominion Board of Trade.

OUR SCHOOLS AND THEIR COST.

The education of the youth of every enlightened country is one of the chief objects of the people; and no country stands more nobly forward in this great work than Canada. To do this the whole people are compelled to give of their means in proportion to their wealth or supposed ability to pay. The willingness to give is no where disputed, when the education is calculated to fit the recipients for the general duties and relations of life. It is only when an education of a higher class than can be obtained at a Public School is sought for that complaints as to the cost and the questions "Who shall pay for it" are raised; and it is reasonable and necessary that a limit should be set to the kind of education that should be imparted when at the expense of the public.

The question of the work done in the schools of this town cannot reasonably be disparaged. In both High and Public Schools as good work is being done as in any school in the Province; and were it not for some ulterior design, which is easy to surmise but unnecessary to declare, not one depreciatory word would ever have been written against our schools. To our certain knowledge, within the space of one week the same influence has been at work, but in a less open way than usual, yet with the same design,—a design far from honorable and entirely foreign to the well being of the people, or the advancement of education. To place the question of costs before the people, we have taken the figures supplied by the Town Council in a report of a Special Committee; and, as far as they will admit, we have compared the work done, and the cost per pupil, and in every case we find the figures in favor of the Peterborough Public and High Schools. Here is a table as to the PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

	No. Children Reported.	Total Cost.	Cost per Pupil.
St. Thomas	711	$3,735	$ 5 20
Port Hope	773	6,700	7 50
Cobourg	580	5,560	7 35
Lindsay	1,000	4,150	7 00
Belleville	1,300	11,180	9 35
Barrie	500	8,000	16 00
Collingwood	600	5,861	16 16
Guelph		7,000
Brantford	1,300	7,000	6 00
Berlin	4,500	6,040	14 00
Stratford	900	8,000	9 00
Peterborough	800	5,055	6 30

The returns from Guelph are so incomplete that no comparison can be made.

Now let us have a comparison of

HIGH SCHOOLS,

	No. Pupils Reported.	Total Cost.	Cost per Pupil.
St. Thomas	73	$4,669	$64
Port Hope	100	2,630	26
Cobourg	90	4,230	47
Lindsay	35	2,500	71
Barrie	38	2,700	71
Belleville	90	3,000	33
Brantford	150	5,000	33
Berlin	55	3,600	65
Stratford	80	3,600	45
Peterborough	130	5,200	40

A comparison of these tables founded on the figures supplied by the Council prove conclusively that Peterborough Public Schools cost the least per capita of any of the schools referred to except that of Brantford and Port Hope, and we venture to assert that the Brantford figures have not been correctly given.

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute costs less per pupil than any of the schools, except those of Port Hope and of Brantford; and in these instances there is evidence of incorrect figures either in copying or tranamission. For instance the salaries of the High School teachers in Port Hope amount to $2,000, while the cost to the municipality is placed at $1,800, hence income from government grant and other sources is only $800; while in Peterborough it has been $2,200. But we can reasonably assert that Port Hope High School costs more than $2,600. In all probability the true figures are $2,600 and $1,800, or $4,400. which gives a rate per pupil of $44, and which would be about correct.

The Brantford figures are inexplicable, unless the fees be added in some way. There are seven teachers in the High School. The Principal receives $1,500 a year, giving salaries, therefore, as in other schools, the salaries must be over $5,000. The municipality raises $3,000, and the fees and government grant would raise the other $3,000, which must be the true figures, and hence in the Brantford High Schools each pupil would cost $40 a year, which would be the same as in our Collegiate Institute, and which, no doubt, is nearly correct. These tables have been formed from the figures published by the Council, and therefore are worthy of perusal.

Since writing the above we have received fuller information from a large number of High Schools, which we purpose to lay before our readers next week.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

The result of a railway meeting held in Bradburn's Hall about a week ago, is the submission of a new By-law to the ratepayers, as will be seen in another column. This By-law has several conditions in it not in the original By-law. The defeat of the Toronto By-law has led to this change of action, on the belief that if the road were constructed from Ottawa to Peterborough, Toronto would then see the wisdom of insuring its construction to that city without delay. There are objectors to the present proposed schedule, who hesitate to see the peoples' money expended unless a guarantee of the completion of the line can be obtained in the way of municipal bounses and government aid, sufficient to indoce capitalists to take hold of the enterprise, and make sure of the completion. The idea of connecting with the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron, by way of the Midland, and with Toronto by way of the Nipissing Railways may be a full return for the $150,000 sought for, but the people would prefer a road direct to Toronto and than by some western line reach Lake Huron. The expenditure of the money piece-meal by the mile as the road might be constructed, in whole or in part, carries upon its face the appearance of danger, as, if the road should not be completed when all the money should be spent, and that no other funds were available, there might be a difficulty such as has retarded the Grand Junction; and twenty or even one hundred miles merely graded would be a small return for $150,000, until trains would be running which might be very remote indeed. We do not wish to raise any barriers to the progress of the enterprise, but would rather encourage it, yet both sides should be looked at, as it may entail a yearly tax of $10,000 for ever on the ratepayers of the town. It is true a short sighted policy of standing still might prove injurious to town interests, but every step should now be taken with due caution. Our interests are northward as well as eastward or westward, and while the present project is doomed to delay there should be an effort to see what can be done to extend our trade to the north. The action of the County Council in putting off the submission of the new By-law till June would perhaps be wisely followed by the Town Council pursuing the same course, unless something new should come to the surface in the mean time.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

London Advertiser: No doubt, if England goes to war, we will all want to see her arms victorious: yet it is a sorry spectacle to see "Christian England" preparing once more to pour out her blood and treasure in an effort to uphold an effete and tottering heathen kingdom.

The Halifax Election.—The election for Halifax, on which more than usual interest was centered for the past fortnight, has resulted in the return of Mr. Jones, the new Minister of Militia, for the seat vacated prior to his appointment to office. The majority, so far as heard from, is over two hundred.

We notice that it is the announced intention of the Ontario Government not to move in the matter of the erection of new Parliament Buildings for the present. We don't doubt the Government in being thus actuated by motives of economy, is consulting the public interest. It cannot be denied, however, that the buildings at present occupied by the Ontario House are very unsuited for the purpose, and are anything but a credit to the Queen City of the Premier Province.

As another proof of the ruin of Canadian industries we have from the Mercury the information that a Guelph carriage builder has just received an order from Grahamstown, Cape of Good Hope, for four covered bugvies and three covered democrats. When Africa stretches out its hands to us for our manufacture it must be evident that Canada's fame has gone abroad through the whole earth.

St Catharines News: The writs for the next general election for the Dominion of Canada are returnable on the 31st of March, 1879. The probability is therefore, that the elections will be held upon the assessment rolls of the present year This being the case, it behooves Reformers to look sharply after the revisions, and see that the full voting strength of the party appear upon the lists. In giving this advice we are only following the example set by our opponents.

It seems Digby is an old Conservative stronghold. In 1867 it elected a Tory by nearly 300 majority, and in 1873 by acclamation. Politically, therefore the election the other day possesses no particular significance. Referring to Mr. Vail's defeat the Montreal Herald remarks : "It will be only natural for the Opposition to extract as much comfort as possible from Mr. Vail's reverses, but it should at least remember, in the midst of its gratulation, that though the Government has lost a Minister of Militia, it has not been obliged to look for a constituency in which to replace him, either in Manitoba or British Columbia."

The question of the future is at all times an important one, but the question of future rewards and penalties is to many an absorbing one. The sermon on the first page deals with this question in reference to the duration of the penalties, and is worth perusal. It will not meet the approval of all who may read it, but it does nevertheless demand their consideration because it concerns their future being for well or for woe. We do not intend discussing the various theories of men and their varied hopes and fears, but we would advise those who must one day face results to provide against untoward ones; and they can only do so by becoming convinced of what they have to provide against, and how to do so.

Ontario Reform Association.—The annual meeting of the Reform Association of the Province of Ontario has been called for Tuesday, February 5th, at the rooms of the Association in Toronto, 54 King street east. The meeting is a business one, and will be attended by representatives of the several branch Reform Associations of the province, besides members of the Dominion Parliament and Local Legislature. As matters of special interest to the Reform party at the present time will come up for consideration and discussion, it is highly desirable that every Riding should be fully represented at the meeting. We hope Peterborough will be fully represented.

Stratford Beacon: The "Chieftain" visited Galt on Tuesday. His tour was a "canvas"-ing one. The few faithful of that locality, thinking the hero of "Ephesus" might not survive the coming session, had expressed a desire that Lady Macdonald should accept from them his portrait. Sir John stated that as Lady Macdonald was busy packing his linen for Ottawa she had sent him for the "pioter." Owing to some derangement, in railway time tables a hitch occured, which necessitated Berlin, Blair and Preston being touched en route. We are credibly informed that had the "hitch" been made public, the freedom of Blair and Preston corporations would have been presented to the redoubtable knight. Though not of much moment, yet it is a peculiar coincidence that the person "put up', to read the address and the individual who performed the "actual count" at the Galt Reform demonstration a few weeks since, bear the same name. We don't wonder at the local papers differing as to his being "disinterested" and at his omitting to count those who went by the "other route." The joke among the working men is, who paid for the "pioter" presented in their name?

NO REFORMER NEED APPLY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir.—As you are expected to be posted in all the public affairs, I wish you would inform the people of this neighborhood why it is that no Reformer can obtain employment on the locks here. When the money is being expended by a Reform Government, and under the Superintendence of one who professes to be a Reformer, but from appearance must be a wolf in sheeps clothing. The Reformers here ask no favors, but think that being Reformers should not debar them from obtaining employment.

If there has been any money expended on public work in your neighborhood has the same policy been carried out there.

Yours &c.,

THE MACDONALD MATTER.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams, has written a letter in answer to the mean insinuations of the Peterborough Review in reference to the difficulty between the Crown Land Department and John McDonald. He invites the call for an investigation, and refers to the Opposition members in the Legislature from Peterborough as proper persons to move for a committee, if there be any supposition of wrong doing in the matter. Mr. McWilliams certainly has the better of the Review which, however, publishes his letter without apology or even reference. The followin is the letter :—

To the Editor of the Peterborough Review :

Dear Sir,—In your issue of last week there is an article insinuating that Mr. McDonald held receipts of mine for dues paid me which he had not received credit. I state distinctly that these insinuations were without foundation and I challenge Mr. McDonald or any other person to produce a receipt given by me for which he has not received credit As you wish to receive more light I will let you know what has caused all the trouble. Last spring Mr. McDonald made a sworn return to me in which he gave 97 pieces of saw logs cut on Government lands in the township of Chandos. When I went there I found that on one unlicensed lot alone over 160 logs had been cut. Knowing that Mr. McDonald has had a feeling against me for years, I would not complete the examination myself, but sent two of my assistants and they reported to me 296 pieces of saw logs cut on two unlicensed lots, besides a large number cut on licensed lands, and Mr. McDonald had to pay the Government according to their report on the unlicensed lots, and the parties holding the licenses had to pay for the timber cut by McDonald on their lots As for other charges that have been circulated by Mr. McDonald and other persons that I passed timber free of dues to obtain votes at an election, I say there is not one word of truth in them. And as both East and West Peterborough are represented in the Local Legislature by Conservatives who are anything but friendly to me, let them take the responsibility of bringing those charges against me, and ask for a committee, and I will request the Commissioner of Crown Lands, as a personal favour to me, to grant a committee of one, and that one to be the Hon. M. C. Cameron, the leader of the Opposition, and then it cannot be said there was any whitewashing done. For the more any honourable and unbiased man investigates my management of the woods and forests in this agency the more thoroughly will he be convinced that I have conducted the business in the interests of the Department and without either fear or favour.

Yours, etc. J. B. McWILLIAMS.

AN UNFOUNDED STATEMENT.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

Sir,—Permit me through your columns to contradict a statement made by Henry Collins, Esq., at our Town Hall, the day of the Election of Councillors, as it was made when I was not present, when I am sure it would not have been made. My informant say that Mr. Collins stated that I went to his (Mr. Collins) house on the Saturday night previous to (either the nomination or election, (he does not remember which) and that I begged of him to let me be elected for Reeve, and that I would give him, Mr. C., all the pay I should receive from the County Council; and further, that I worried him so that Mrs. Collins called him to go to bed, and not be breaking the Sabbath day. That he refused to comply with my request, and rose and left me sitting there.

Now, Sir, as I have not been in Mr. Collins house for six months, and hence did not there, nor any where else, offer or solicit any compromise from him, I cannot account for his giving currency to a statement that was utterly untrue. I am sorry that such false statements should be made for the purpose of gaining a few votes. The use of such means to obtain his election, cannot gain much praise. He thinks I was anxious to get elected Reeve, but I assure him that I used no undue influences to secure a single vote, while he, and his friends used every means at their command to secure his election.

I am, yours truly,
WM. ROBSON.

Current Events in Dummer.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir.—We have come through a rather exciting municipal campaign, with more than the usual amount of criticism on the acts of Township officials, and insinuations about their intentions. One of the gentlemen elected as Councillor, failed to qualify. It is to be regretted that Mr. Wason did not make himself sure about his qualification before he ran. Without any feeling against the gentleman who takes his place at the Council board, electors are generally better satisfied when the men of their choice take their seats.

Next came the vote on the 9th inst., on the "Dunkin Bill." The Dunkinites led the Poll in the morning, giving 82 "Yeas" to 18 "Nays," out of the first hundred votes. Those opposed to the By-law had some hir d teams at least, and gave other considerations for votes; notwithstanding, the votes for the By-law were brought in freely, cheerfully, and more promptly than those against it, and the poll closed with 157 Yeas and 65 Nays. One very hopeful and pleasing feature of the Temperance movement is, that the young men and boys are more than two to one for it. More than one grey-headed father in Dummer voted "nay," while his one, two, and, in some cases, three sons responded with a hearty "Yes."

I notice an article in your issue of the 17th inst. headed, "Taxes in Dummer," in which the writer hints that "Somebody" has the use of large sums of money at a cheap rate of interest, and from which the general reader would infer that the finances of Dummer were in a lamentable state. I understand the late Treasurer, David Rose, Esq, invites the fullest inquiry into his accounts as Treasurer, ever since he held the office, and I am pleased to learn that the Council has appointed John J. Hall Esq. of Peterboro. one of the Auditors of our township accounts. I am sure that the report of a gentleman, with the experience, ability and integrity of Mr. Hall, will go far towards silencing the idle rumors that have been going the rounds this dull winter, and will satisfy all reasonable men of our true state of affairs.

It has been snowing some to-day. Have you sufficient influence with Venner to get us enough for sleighing?

LOCAL NEWS

Valentines.—The valentine mania will soon be upon us. They are already in some of our shop windows.

County Council.—The January session of County Council closed last Saturday. An extended report of the proceedings will be found on our fourth page.

Dunkin in Haliburton.—The Dunkin Bylaw was submitted at the meeting of the County Council on Tuesday, and the vote will be taken on the 6th of March.

An Outside Opinion.—The London Advertiser of the 29th instant, says:—That James Stratton and D. W. Dumble are two of the best temperance advocates in Peterborough.

Skating Carnival.—We are informed that another skating carnival is upon the tapis, and will in all probability come off on the 15th proximo. It is expected to be even more successful than the last.

Revised Statutes.—We have received a copy of the Revised Statutes of the Province, which have just been issued. The work is comprised in two bulky volumes, bound in a style similar to that of the Provincial Statutes.

The Robinson Farm, containing one hundred acres composed of the east half of Lot 18, in the 4th Concession of the Township of Smith, was sold on the 13th instant by public auction, and purchased by Mr. John Hall, Senior, of Smith for the sum of $7,000 cash.

Bell Down.—We desire to impress upon township clerks the necessity for condensing their reports to the uttermost point when sending them in for publication. Our columns are always crowded, and the great query with us is not what to put in, but what to leave out. With our correspondents generally bear this in mind.

A Worthy Example.—The Brantford Board of Aldermen recently voted the reporters of the two local journals $30 each. "In recognition of their faithful reports of Council proceedings throughout the past year, as such service is of great advantage to the ratepayers and the city." Peterborough Town Council should make a note of this, and act accordingly.

Proud of It.—The following birth notice appears in Saturday's Toronto Globe:

On the 25th Jan., the wife of T. V. Roy, the converted Brahmin priest (and eldest daughter of Major H. G. Greig, of Woodstock), of a daughter.

This is the first birth of a Brahmin child known on this continent since its discovery by Columbus.

The Band Ball.—On Monday evening last the social ball under the auspices of the Brass Band was held in the Opera House, when about fifty couples were present, and a very pleasant time spent, breaking up after the wee sma' hours. Supper was served in the Cameron House, and did credit to Mr. Moloney, who set out a well laden table. The financial results of the Ball, we learn, are far from satisfactory—the citizens not supporting it as well as expected.

Change of Business.—Mr. Adam Hall has purchased the good will and stock in trade of the Lannin estate, better known perhaps, as the Grant T., and will in future carry on the business in his name. We wish Mr. Hall every success in his new business. In consequence of the change, and his giving up the boot and shoe business, he will dispose of his stock of boots and shoes below cost, and at prices heretofore unknown in Peterborough.

Is He Correct?—Is Vernor not entitled to some honour in his own country? He does not pretend to be a prophet; rather he bases his prognostications on certain theories by which he claims that if he cannot reach precise results he can at least make a very close calculation. Now we have been carefully watching the weather changes for this month, and we certainly feel impressed with his predictions. To our mind they have been fairly, if not fully verified.

Tract Society.—The annual meeting of the Religious Book and Tract Society will be held, (D. V.) in St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, on Wednesday evening, the 6th February, at 8 o'clock. The Rev. J. G. Manly, of Toronto, the agent of the Society, will deliver an address on "Bibles and Bible Truths," to set forth the claims of the Tract Society in its own proper field. It is hoped that Mr. Manly's known ability as a lecturer will secure a large attendance. A collection is to be taken up.

"The Collegiate Institute."—The Review has again been forced to eat humble pie, in the publication of a letter from "Ratepayer," showing the good position of Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and making an in direct defence of the Latin and Greek course sneered at by the Review and its ad-s, in their attacks on the school, the Board that controls it, and the teachers and pupils who do it credit. Grub and Latin may seem entirely useless to those who know nothing whatever of them; but the wise ones of the world hold a different opinion.

Young Men's Presbyterian Association.—A meeting of the Young Men's Presbyterian Association was held last Monday evening, in the St. Andrew's Church School Room, for the transaction of business and the election of officers. The following are the officers for the current year:—

President,—Jas. A. Hall.
Vice-President,—Dr. Bell.
Secretary,—W. W. Johnston.
Business Committee,—George Dennistoun, G. M. Roger, J. D. Tully and James Little.

Severn vs. the Queen, or the right of the Ontario Government to impose a license on brewers has been decided in the Supreme Court in favor of the brewers, four judges agreeing; two holding opposite views. This matter is therefore put at rest so far as the jurisdiction is concerned, but the question of prohibition has not come up. But the inference from the judgment in this case would be that the power to prohibit is in the Dominion Government. The right to levy licenses on shops, taverns and small dealers only being relegated to the Local Parliaments.

The Dog Question.—The Cobourg Sentinel discusses the dog question and gives the following information to owners of noisy and vicious dogs: "The keeping of a vicious dog near a public road, in such a way as to endanger the travelling public, is a nuisance and renders the persons knowingly keeping it there liable to an action by any person injured thereby. One instance of aggression may be sufficient evidence of a vicious propensity on the part of a dog, and if it can be proven that the owner had information of this first case he may be held liable for a subsequent offence of a like nature.

Mud Lake Bridge.—The County Council has decided to repair the Mud Lake floating bridge in the Spring, and Mr. Luke Fisher and others have got the consent of the Council to swing the east end of the bridge northward as far as Mr. Fisher's grist mill. This, it is said, shortens the bridge 210 feet, and will also bring the end to a favorable landing place where the ascent to the Mud Lake road will be more easy and more advantageous to the travelling public. This will also lessen the future outlay for planking, &c., from time to time by about one-twelfth of the whole cost.

Query.—A correspondent requests us to answer the following query, viz:—What are the proper terms of relationship in these instances: A and B are brothers, what are the terms of relationship of the children of A and B, respectively named E and D, and what are the relationship between E and the children of D, also between the children of E and the children of D?

Ed. Ex.—We are not fully aware of the depth of philosophy involved in the question, and are not prepared to give the exact information asked for. Perhaps some of our readers would supply our lack of knowledge on the above question.

Canadian Poultry.—The American eagle may be the finest bird in the world, and able to lick all creation, but when it comes down to the domestic fowl the Canadian can beat him. At the recent poultry show at Chicago, Mr. R. McMillan, of Galt, showed a collection of 117 birds, and took the prize of $100 for the best collection. In addition to this, Mr. McMillan took twenty special prizes, sixty-one firsts, twenty-one seconds, fifteen thirds, seven fourths and five fifths. The display was said to be the best ever made by one exhibitor in America. Mr. McMillan is expected to be an exhibitor at the poultry show to be held next month in this town.

Political Speeches.—The speeches delivered during the recent summer season by the prominent members of the Reform Party have been published in pamphlet form by the Reform Association of Ontario. They form, in their entirety, a complete book of reference, all points of interest being touched upon. A valuable addition is an index, prepared by Mr. G. R. Patullo, the energetic Secretary of the Ontario Reform Association. The Ministers who have taken part in the summer meetings have been the Hon. Messrs. Mackenzie, Blake Cartwright, Huntington and Mills. The admirers of these gentlemen, and in fact all who desire to keep themselves informed on current politics, should procure copies.

Amending the Law.—Mr. Wills, M. P. P., has introduced a bill in the Ontario Legislature, intended to amend the Municipal Institutions Act, and having the following check upon appointments for civic honors: No judge of any court of civil jurisdiction, no jailer or keeper of a house of correction, no sheriff, deputy sheriff, sheriff's bailiff or high bailiff, no bailiff of any division court, no inn keeper, saloon keeper or shop keeper, licensed to sell spirituous liquors by retail, shall be qualified to be a member of the Council of any Municipal Corporation. No assessor, collector, treasurer or clerk of the municipality, no person, having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with, or on behalf of the corporation, and no person in arrears for taxes at the time of nomination for election for members, shall be qualified to be a member of the Council of a Municipal Corporation.

"A Mortuary Chapel."—We would invite the attention of our readers to the communication of "A Stockholder" in another column, in reference to the proposal to erect a "Mortuary Chapel" on the central plot in the Little Lake Cemetery grounds. The wisdom of the position taken by "A Stockholder" cannot but merit the approval of every thoughtful stockholder of the Company, and should at least arrest proceedings that, to say the least of them, would be both unwise and unjust to all the stockholders outside the pale of the Episcopal Church. It is not to be supposed that the other denominations would ever use such a building, and hence they do not desire its erection. It will be no answer to their objections that they may have a right to do so. And if the timely correspondence of "A Stockholder" prevent the Directors undertaking the erection of a building that may—yea—will afford large dissatisfaction, the writer will deserve the thanks of all interested in preventing feeling in reference to the resting place of their beloved dead.

Important Decision.—It will be of importance to young ladies and gentlemen to know that interchanged kisses constitute a promise of marriage as fully as words can. At a trial for breach of promise in one of our cities not long ago, said the learned judge:—"A gleam of the eye and conjunction of the lips are overtures when they become frequent and protracted." The jury thereupon found a verdict for $15,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage against a masculine defendant whose only wrong said on the 13th instant by public auction, and purchased by Mr. John Hall, Senior, of Smith for the sum of $7,000 cash.

TAXES IN DUMMER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of the 17th instant, I observed an extraordinary communication over the appellation of "Ratepayer," in reference to Taxes in Dummer in which the writer, smarting under a recent municipal defeat, too plainly exhibits his animus which is not to arrive at truth, or, to truthfully instruct, but to mislead and throw dust into the eyes of his fellow ratepayers.

When a writer has become so much interested in the financial affairs of his township, or country, as to believe it his special business to publish charges against any public man, of embezzlement or of having levied large sums on the people in excess of requirements, most people, or at least those of unprejudiced minds will at once conclude, that before doing so he should have some very good grounds for his accusations and that having such, he should write over his real name, for if his charges be true, he has no necessity to hide behind an assumed name, or to ask any county councillor to father his communication and thus to become his scape goat; if not true his object becomes apparent, viz., to give publicity to untruthful statements.

The comparison made by "Ratepayer," of the township rate paid by Monaghan and Dummer, must, I am sure, be perfectly astonishing to himself and all his friends. Without one saving clause, he boldly asserts that Dummer has paid more of such rate in two years than Monaghan has in six, by which, or he would not have made the comparison, his inference is plain viz, that Dummer has paid three times more in this way, than necessary. If this be true how can "Ratepayer" i. e. A. R. Kidd, explain the fact that in the year 1874 when he was a Councillor a sum amounting to over two and a half times that raised by Monaghan in either of the years 1875, 1876 or 1877 was levied on Dummer which a comparison of Monaghan's rates as follows: 1875, $344; 1876 $345; 1877, $340, with the following evidence will show:

"In answer to your enquiry I beg to say the township rate for 1874 was six mills and the amount raised for such purposes in that year was $870 and that the motion of council authorising such rate was seconded by Mr. A. R. Kidd."
(Signed) W. DARLING, Clerk.

If it was wrong in 1877 to levy more on Dummer for these purposes than the amount paid by Monaghan, it was certainly wrong in 1874, and Mr. Kidd must have thought he was doing right or he would not have seconded such a motion. If he did right, where are the grounds for publishing such a comparison? probably Mr. Kidd was then conversant with the following facts which he cannot have since forgotten, viz., that the area of Dummer was over four times that of Monaghan; that a large proportion of its lands were unsettled which thereby necessitated the expenditure of an increased amount for the repair of its surveyed roads and all the expenses of Municipal Government; that the council could not collect the whole school rates levied by Trustees of School Sections in which there are non-resident lands, in time to be available, but were obliged to provide the funds and the Treasurer was obliged to pay over the whole amount of the levies. These considerations undoubtedly caused the levy of such a township rate then by Mr. Kidd, for in no other way could the deficiencies be made good than by a special rate. How stands the matter since then? Two new School Sections have been formed in one of which a Brick School House has been erected.

Then in the year 1850 the county council passed a By-law to authorise the Warden to subscribe for stock in the Monaghan Gravel Road Company. Twelve hundred dollars worth of this stock was taken by the County which was augmented to two thousand dollars by another By-law in 1865 and this money which the people of Dummer helped to pay, was expended in making a gravel road through Monaghan. Now, sir, if this proceeding were reversed, and the county had built, or helped to build one of our roads, would it not tend to lessen our township rate?

Mr Kidd further on finds, "that Dummer has not paid any County &c., rates since the 26th March 1874," but unfortunately in this matter he has most egregiously blundered, thus parading his own ignorance, or he has wilfully given currency to that which is false, for had he referred to those same county auditors reports for 1875, page 194, he would have found no less a sum than $1050 independent of land sale transfers, given credit for on this account, but what, sir, in a thousand dollars in his eyes if he can make people believe it has been misappropriated. On one other occasion—at a public Nomination—he made a mistake of one thousand dollars in adding a few figures in simple addition, then too he had it on the wrong side of the account.

As to the wilfully false statement that there is a balance due of $3610 less non-resident collection $1460 or $2150 the County Treasurer wrote me 26th Dec. last that Mr. Rose had said him accounts as would at that date reduce the balance due the county to $436. A further correspondence as follows speaks for itself.

To E. PEARSE Esq., County Treasurer.

SIR,—Has the Treasurer of Dummer, independent of land sale transfers, paid any sums on account of county rates since 26th March, 1874? If so what amount and when?

THOS. GEO. CHOATE.

DEAR SIR,—In reply to your enquiry I find by referring to my books that the Treasurer of Dummer has paid me on account of County rates in cash as follows: In the year 1875, $1010 and in the year 1877, $1623 41. Yours truly,

E. PEARSE, County Treasurer.

Peterboro' 22nd Jan., 1877.

The charge of paying a share of our County liability by the transfer of a sum due from the county to the county in payment of a part of such liability, as a simple matter of convenience, is such an utterly contemptible one as not to merit a reply.

In all my municipal experience, I never before discovered a person who complained of his Councillor or his Reeve having made too good a bargain for him, yet such is the case in this matter of interest. No ratepayer has yet paid any on the balance due, and if called for Mr. Rose will pay it. I have not a doubt but that Mr. Kidd would rejoice, if the ratepayers of the township would have principal and interest to pay.

It is well understood here, that on the day of Nomination, Mr. Kidd agreed to support Mr. Ferrier for Reeve next year, if that gentleman would support him this, or in other words, "you scratch my back and I will scratch yours," which is completely at variance with the corrupt practice clauses of the Municipal Act, in fact Mr. Kidd unblushingly admitted this arrangement at a public meeting in North Dummer. Before so pure minded a gentleman as Mr. Kidd came to such an agreement, he must have evidently discovered that our affairs were better managed in 1865—the year Mr. Ferrier was Reeve—than in any of the years I have occupied the position. How stands the matter? I find Dummer paid in 1865, $2145 of county and debenture rates while the same rates for 1877 were $622 less or $1,523. If the saving of the people's money be his object I am afraid this comparison will show him he has made an unhappy selection.

In the matter of accounts why does not Mr. Kidd show that in the Treasurer's account annually published in sheet form, that in any instance no credit is given for money paid in or on the other side of the account that money is charged which has not been paid out? For the simple reason he can find no such items. I challenge him to do so if he can. If he cannot do so what is he whining about.

I shall not reply in future to anonymous correspondents. Yours, &c.,

THOS. GEO. CHOATE.

Warsaw, 23rd January, 1878.

LAKEFIELD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR.—Will you kindly allow me space to reply to the Lakefield News, in a correspondence purporting to be written by X, but really cooked up by the News-men. He—pardon me—they want the public to be informed why the School Board advertised for a janitor, by posting a written notice (instead I suppose of getting one printed in the News office) on a telegraph pole opposite the post office. Then X (or the News-men) asks was this the chairman carrying out his pet policy of cutting down printing. The query serves the News' purpose, and leaves the question to X, that is to himself. I admit I have objected two to bills from the News office, when presented to the Council for payment, until a reduction was made, as the prices were always from 12½ to 50 per. cent above what the same work could be obtained for from other offices. And as the ratepayers elected me to represent them and see after their interests, and not to see after the News, I did my duty, although it may have displeased the News-men. They no doubt, would have hired to handle a little more of the people's money, and their failing to do so annoys them. Being a little riled they reserved X in their own way, yet they could have done differently, as in their own columns was the notice contiguous to the communication? As the News is supposed to know everything of a public nature, will it kindly inform its readers, what became of a little bill of theirs presented to the Council in the spring, but objected to, because of extravagant charges. Was it ever paid, and if so, what members of the Council were present when payment was ordered? While in the Council I did practice economy, and to place that economy before the ratepayers will please me.

I am, yours &c.,

CHAIRMAN OF SCHOOL BOARD.

Lakefield, 21st January, 1878.

DUMMER.

COUNCIL MEETING.—A special meeting convened at Old Town Hall at 1 p m., at call of the Reeve. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting confirmed. Reeve stated that the meeting was called to have the Treasurer appointed so that his bonds could be executed, so as to commence duties on 1st January, 1878. The names of W. Darling, John Spence, sen., and Robert Smith, were moved as treasurer, W. Darling withdrew his name, and finally, Mr. Kidd moved, seconded by Mr. Crowe in amendment, that Francis T. Dunsford be appointed Treasurer to commence his duties on first of January next.—Carried. The Reeve read a copy of the questions asked the lawyer about certain points in the deed of the Town and Agricultural Hall, and stated that he had not received a reply from Mr. Dennistoun yet. On motion of Mr. Ritchie, seconded by Mr. Wigmore, the Reeve was instructed to have the Treasurer's bonds executed and report at next meeting. On motion the taxes of Mrs. Dwyre and Mrs. Rubs was abated, and Collector notified to that effect. Orders granted—To Timothy Fitzpatrick, expenses of survey $11, Mrs. Brown, abatement of taxes $1.32; Thos. Geo. Choate, statute labor tax and interest on arrears on west half 12 con. 4, Mr. Choate to do five days extra labor in 1877, $12.07. A by-law to appoint a Treasurer &c., read and passed.

JANUARY 5TH, 1878.—Council met at Old Town Hall. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and signed. Clerk reported that he had received a letter from Messrs. Scott & Edwards making a demand for $170. Moved by Mr. Wigmore seconded by Mr. Crowe, that the Clerk be instructed to reply to Messrs. Scott & Edwards that this Council deem that Mr. John Wason, jr., Collector for 1876, has no claim against this Council, and that this Council will therefore resist any such action on behalf of Mr. Wason. —Carried. Clerk to notify Mrs. E. Hill that the Com. of Crown Lands will put a saving clause in the patent protecting her dower in east half con. 8. Clerk instructed to notify parties deemed necessary in the matter of payment for a road off the north side of east half 24, con. 2, to appear at second meeting of Council. On motion a claim by Charles Doughty, for building stoves in the road was referred to the Committee for that division. On motion Mr. Robb's report as wood ranger was received and filed. On motion the passing of a By-law to establish a road on E 24 con. 2, was laid over to next meeting. By laws to provide for payment of salaries &c., for 1877 read and passed. Orders granted—To T. G. Choate balance as Reeve $8; selector of jurors $2; attending land sale $3.40; equalizing U. S. S. No. 8 $2; examining bridge on 5th con. line, by order of Council $3; deputation to Toronto $8; one day examining jobs on road $3; postage and stationery $1. Daniel Wigmore balance as Commissioner $10; Daniel Wigmore, as Commissioner, $12; Thomas Ritchie, balance as Councillor, $10; John J. Crowe, balance as Councillor, $10; John J. Crowe, examining roads by order of Council, and as Commissioner, $12; W. Darling, balance as Clerk, $45; W. Darling, register of births &c., $10; W. Darling, selector of jurors, $2; W. Darling, refund of postage, stationery and expense account, $12.74; David Rose, as Treasurer, $60; James Robb, as wood-ranger, $6.50; James Robb, deputation to Toronto, $8; John Hunter, selector of jurors, $2; Lewis Lewis, abatement of statute labor tax, $2.66; P. P. Cope, account, $4; Mrs. Elliott, firewood for hall, $6; John Kidd, balance of repairs on Town Hall, $7; Thomas Ritchie, seeing about lumber, $1; George Forbes, sen., aid, $10; Robert Tamblin, abatement of arrears on east half 27 con. 12, $23.30. —Com.

LAKEFIELD.

CAPTURED.—Hobbs, one of the scoundrels who committed rape on Mrs. Jones and her daughter in Chandos, was taken prisoner at Sterling, by Mr. G. Cochrane. He was taken through here and lodged in the Peterborough gaol.

L. O. L.—At a meeting of the Lakefield district L. O. Lodge hall last week, the following officers were elected:—Dr. Bell, D. M.; Wm. Thurston, D. D. M.; Richard Warren, Sr., D. Chan.; Thos. Hall, D. Treas.; W. Graham, D. D. of C.; W. C. Sanders, D. Sec.

LAKEFIELD AND PETERBORO' STAGE.—A stage will leave Lakefield every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, calling at the hotels at 9 a. m. Returning, will leave the Commercial House, Peterborough, at 3 o'clock, p. m. Single tickets 30 cents. Mr. C. J. Carruth is the proprietor.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.—It is the duty of every person who has used BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle on 40,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the GERMAN SYRUP cannot be too widely known. Ask your Druggist about it. Sample Bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. For sale by J. D Tully & Co. George Street Peterborough. 52-eow

In Your Throat Sore,

Or are you annoyed by a constant cough? If so, use promptly "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers." They will give you instant relief. They relieve the most distressing of coughs in one night. Consumption, and no other remedy can be had for coughs, colds and many diseases of the throat and lungs, and if taken in time they will surely cure. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents a box.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A Really Good Article.

We would call the attention of all interested to an article of undoubted merit, and which we would advise all in want of to give a trial. We refer to Darling's Canadian Powders and Anodine Heave Mixture, they being extensively used by many of the largest horse dealers in the country; these men have discovered that it improves the condition of the horse by purifying the blood and removes from the lungs and liver all that prevents their healthy action; its effect is soon apparent in the improved appearance of the animal, which is one great reason why horse dealers use it, as they are thus thereby led to get better prices and at the same time give their customers sound and healthy horses. I Feel Myself as Good as Now!

West Fairlee, Vt., Jan. 11th, 1877.

Dear Sir—For seven or eight years past I have been in poor health, and for the past year or more very feeble. My health continued to decline, and my flesh and strength wasted away, until I was bedfast most of the time, up stairs without great exhaustion. I suffered from frequent and distressing attacks of palpitation of the heart, my food distressed me, and caused me pain in the stomach; and I suffered from extreme nervousness, especially from the debility of the system generally, my blood became thin and poor and sluggish in circulation, and I was for years suffering all the tortures of a confirmed dyspepsia. About six months since I concluded I would try a bottle of PERUVIAN SYRUP, and received so much benefit from it that I purchased five bottles more, and have continued the use of the Syrup until quite recently. It has restored my health to such an extent that I find myself as good as new. My digestion is good and my weight has increased in the past four months from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and thirty-eight pounds; my strength has returned, and my general health is thus wonderfully improved, and I can truly say I owe it all to the use of your PERUVIAN SYRUP. I earnestly recommend all sufferers from dyspepsia and debility to give it a trial, hoping it will do them as much good as it has me.

Yours very truly, MRS. S. B. BEMIS.

A Campaign Slander.

When Dr. R. V. Pierce was a candidate for State Senator, his political opponents published a pamphlet containing lies of his popular medicine, hoping thereby to prejudice the people against him. His election by an overwhelming majority is evidence that the manufacturer of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery" and Pleasant Purgative Pellets" is a gentleman of character, and one whose word may be relied upon. Any one who has ever used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery" for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Chronic Diarrhœa, or Blood Humors, will join in pronouncing it the best remedy ever discovered. Sold by druggists.

BY-LAW No.—

A By-Law to aid and assist the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company by giving by way of bonus to the said Company the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars in Debentures of the Town of Peterborough.

WHEREAS the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough is desirous that a railway should be constructed in the nature of the Prince of Ontario passed in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of her Majesty, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Horse and Peterboro Railway Company" and amendments thereto are empowered to construct such a railway, and it is enacted that any Municipal Corporation which may be interested in securing the construction of the said railway or through any part or which or near which the railway or works of the said company shall pass or be situated may aid the said company by giving money or Debentures by way of Bonus, Gift or Loan;

And whereas the name of the said Company has been changed to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company;

And whereas by an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough and to authorize the issue of Debentures on the security of Town property and for other purposes," it was enacted that certain property therein mentioned should be vested in the Commissioners therein named, and their successors, to be called "The Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust," and that it should be lawful for the Mayor and Town Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being to cause to be issued Debentures under the seal of the said corporation to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer of the said Town and by the Secretary of the said Commissioners, and to the amount and for the purposes and in the manner in the said Act designated, and that it should be lawful for the said Commissioners to issue New Debentures if required from time to time upon which to raise funds to retire outstanding Debentures, and that the Town Council of the said Municipality should annually upon the application of the said Commissioners raise upon and from the taxable property of the said Municipality the Interest and Sinking Fund requisite for the ultimate redemption of the said Debentures according to the said Act;

And whereas heretofore the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough by By-law duly ratified by the ratepayers of the said Town of Peterborough and subsequently sanctioned by the Legislature of Ontario granted aid by way of bonus to the said Company to the amount of the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars;

And whereas by the first section of an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario passed in the year of our Lord One Thousand and Eight Hundred and Seventy-seven and Ch

COUNTY COUNCIL.

THURSDAY SESSION.

The Council met, all the members and the Warden present.

The minutes of the day previous were read and confirmed.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

On motion the committee on appointments were allowed to report, as follows:

The committee on appointments to office, beg leave to report recommending the following appointments to office for the current year:

1. That Messrs. William Dunford, W. H. Rosborgh and S. J. Griffin jr., be appointed Trustees of the Norwood High School and that all former appointments of Trustees of the Norwood Grammar School of this County be rescinded.

2. That Messrs. M. Sanderson and John Carnegie be a Board of Audit of Criminal and County Accounts.

3. That John H. Belcher, Esq., be appointed County Engineer.

4. That R. Kincaid, M. D., be appointed Jail Surgeon.

5. That James McWilliams be appointed care-taker of the Court House and Grounds.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

HENRY COLLINS,
Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr Collins the report was received and adopted, and a By-law was afterwards passed confirming the report.

INTERIM GRANT.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Lang, the By-law to authorize the Warden to take action in cases which may arise between the Sessions of this Council and which require immediate action was read a first time.

The Council then went into committee of the whole on the second reading, Mr. Choate in the chair, when the By-law was lost in the second reading.

COMMITTEE ON SCHOOLS.

On motion of Mr. Moloney, seconded by Mr. Diawoodie, the Committee on Schools were allowed to report.

The Committee on Schools beg leave to report.

1 They would recommend that this Council grant the sum of one hundred dollars to a Model School, established in any of the Municipalities of the County, and that in the event of more than one Municipality deciding to establish a Model School, the Public School Inspector shall decide which school shall receive such grant.

2. That the memorandum of the Hon. Minister of Education in reference to School Inspectors remuneration be referred to the Finance Committee.

Cox's General Insurance Agency.

ESTABLISHED 1858.

GEO. A. COX would respectfully intimate to the insuring public of Peterborough and Vicinity that for over 19 years he has been doing a successful and steadily increasing Insurance business; the many losses that have occured during that time have EVERY ONE been promptly and honorably paid, and NOT A SINGLE CLAIM CONTESTED.

He still continues to solicit business for such old and reliable companies as THE ROYAL OF LIVERPOOL established in 1845. Assets over Nineteen Millions of Dollars.

THE NORTH BRITISH & MERCANTILE, of Edinburgh established in 1809, with accumulations of Twenty-three Millions of Dollars.

THE PHŒNIX OF LONDON, established in 1782, and which has nearly one hundred years has paid losses averaging $1,344 per day.

These companies have all passed through the great fires of Quebec, Chicago, Boston, New York, Portland and St. John, and the enormous losses were all promptly paid without affecting their stability in the least degree.

Rates as low as consistent with absolute security.

A NEW MAN

IN AN OLD STAND.

The undersigned begs leave to announce to the Public that having dissolved partnership with the late firm of Bailey Bros., he has since opened up a store in F. H. Scobell's old Stand, corner of Reid and McDonell streets, with a new Stock of Groceries, Provisions, Fruits, Nuts, Oysters, Meats, Spiced Meats, Flour, and numerous other articles such as are usually kept in A First Class Grocery Store.

☞The above goods can be depended on as being FRESH and GOOD and as CHEAP as any store in Town.

The undersigned begs leave to thank the public for their liberal patronage to him while in the late firm of Bailey Bros., and would solicit a continuance of their patronage in his new stand, where he will endeavour to please both by Keeping Choice Goods and paying attention to the wants of his customers.

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND THE GREAT PYRAMID

Are among the Leading Questions of the day—but a subject all should bear in mind, is that

After the 1st of January, 1878, I will sell goods 10 per cent cheaper

THAN HERETOFORE, FOR CASH AND CASH ONLY.

I would advise those who are in the habit of running long-winded accounts, and settling them by slow notes, to go and deal where they can be accommodated for six or twelve months as they may require, and when they want to SAVE MONEY to bring the cash to me, and I will satisfy any reasonable person that anything can buy Goods from me from Twelve to Fifteen per cent Cheaper than they can purchase them from those who give credit.

THIRTY DAYS' CREDIT WILL BE GIVEN

parties we consider in a position and honest enough to pay on demand. All accounts rendered monthly, and if not then settled 12 per cent interest will be charged. A Call Solicited, and we know you won't go away disappointed.

LUKE FISHER.

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM,

—FOR—

Coughs, Colds, Bronchial and all Throat Affections.

The Gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree is, without doubt, the most valuable native Gum for Medicinal purposes.

Its remarkable power in relieving certain severe forms of Bronchitis, and its almost specific effect in curing obstinate hacking Coughs, is now well known to the public at large. In this Syrup (carefully prepared at low temperature), containing a large quantity of the finest picked Gum in complete solution, all the Tonic Expectorant, Balsamic and Anti-Spasmodic effects of the Red Spruce Gum are fully preserved. For sale at all Drug Stores. Price, 25 cents per bottle.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cures colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration to the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils, warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (except of chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Piles, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrotulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally and, of course, lessening the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Ringworm and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Pettit's American Eye-Salve," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch; which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity, and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAKNESS, PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

MAN'S MORTALITY.

The following beautiful poem is justly considered a poetical gem of the highest order. The original is found in an Irish MS. in Trinity College, Dublin. There is reason to think that the poem was written by one of those primitive Christians made in the reign of King Diarmid, about the year 556, and was sung or chanted at the last grand national assembly of kings, chieftains, and bards, ever held in the famous Halls of Tara. The translation is by the learned Dr. O'Donovan:

Like as a Damask rose you see,
Or like a blossom on a tree,
Or like the dainty flower in May,
Or like the morning to the day,
Or like the sun, or like the shade,
Or like the guard which Jonas had;
Even such is man, whose thread is spun,
Drawn out and out, and so is done.
The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
The flowers fades, the morning hasteth,
The sun sets, the shadow flies,
The gourd consumes, the man—he dies.

Like to the grass that's newly sprung,
Or like a tale that's new begun,
Or like the bird that's here to-day,
Or like the pearled dew in May,
Or like an hour or like a span,
Or like the singing of a swan;
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
The grass withers, the tale is ended,
The bird is flown, the dew's ascended,
The hour is short, the span not long,
The swan's near death, man's life is done.

Like to the bubble in the brook,
Or in a glass much like a look,
Or like the shuttle in weaver's hand,
Or like the writing on the sand,
Or like a thought, or like a dream,
Or like the gliding of the stream;
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
The bubble's out, the look forgot,
The shuttle's flung, the writing's blot,
The thought is past, the dream is gone,
The water's glide, man's life is done.

Like to an arrow from the bow,
Or like swift course of water flow,
Or like that time 'twixt flood and ebb,
Or like the spider's tender web,
Or like a race, or like a goal,
Or like the dealing of a dole,
Even such is man, whose brittle state
Is always subject unto fate.
The arrow's shot, the flood soon spent,
The time no time, the web soon rent,
The race soon ran, the goal soon won,
The dole soon dealt, man's life soon done.

Like to the lightning from the sky,
Or like a post that quick doth hie,
Or like a quaver in a song,
Or like a journey three days long,
Or like snow when summer's come,
Or like a pear, or like a plum;
Even such is man, who heaps up sorrow,
Lives but this day and dies to-morrow.
"The lightning's past the post must go,
The song is short, the journey so,
The pear doth rot, the plum doth fall,
The snow dissolves, and so must all.

PRESBYTERY OF PETERBORO

This Presbytery met at Port Hope on the 15th inst. There were present sixteen ministers and six elders. The Commission of Presbytery invested with presbyterial powers, appointed to visit Bobcaygeon, and dispose of Mr. A. F. Tully's resignation of his pastoral charge, reported that the said resignation had been accepted, and that they had agreed to put on record the following minute: "In consenting to accept Mr. Tully's resignation, the Presbytery desire to express their deep regret at his removal from the bounds, and their high appreciation of his many admirable qualities. Cordial and genial in manner, he has greatly endeared himself to his brethern. They feel that in agreeing to release him from his pastoral charge, they are parting from a coworker who was always willing to assume his proper share of their common burden in the Church's service. They are glad to testify that he has proved himself a faithful, as well as a popular preacher; and that as a pastor, he has been earnest and diligent in a superior degree. Their best wishes go with him and with his partner in life; and their prayer as well as their hope, is, that a suitable sphere of labor may soon open for him, and that there he may enjoy abundant and permanent success." The committee appointed at last meeting to visit the congregations of Springville and Bethany reported that the congregations now agree unitedly to raise the full salary of $600 per annum, and that they are both exceedingly anxious to retain the services of their present pastor. Mr. Bennett in view of the altered circumstance, agreed to withdraw his resignation; at which result the Presbytery expressed its cordial satisfaction. Mr. Donald's resignation as clerk of Presbytery—of which notice was given at last meeting—was accepted. Mr Bennett was then unanimously appointed clerk. A circular respecting the more liberal support of the colleges was considered. It was unanimously agreed to urge congregations to greater liberality in this direction; and in order thereto, ministers were requested to arrange for an exchange of pulpits, so as to impart greater variety and interest to the Church's pleading in behalf of these institutions. A commission appeared from the missionary congregation of Minden, representing the extreme and urgent need of help in paying for their manse, on which a heavy load of debt is resting. After full consideration of the case, Presbytery agreed to aid in the liquidation of the Minden Manse debt. Congregations were requested to give help towards this object contributions to be remitted to the Rev. W. A. McKay, Baltimore. Mr. Hodnett laid on the table his resignation of his pastoral charge at Perrytown, Oakhill, and Knoxville. Committees were appointed to visit those congregations; and arrangements were made to cite them to appear for their interests at next regular meeting of Presbytery. Messrs. Smith and Donald were appointed to draw up a suitable minute with reference to the decease of the Rev. J. M. Roger, M. A., Peterborough. The minute is as follows: "The members of Presbytery felt deeply touched when the intelligence reached them of the sudden death of their beloved friend and father, the Rev. J. M. Roger. Their deep sorrow is, however, greatly mitigated by the assurance which they all cherish, that according to his own hope and confident expectation, he has gone into the blessed and glorious presence of that Lord whom he loved so well and served so faithfully. The Presbytery, many of whose members, were familiarly conversant with his life and labors, and knew him in the matured maturity of his character and powers, cannot fail as they recall his kind face, cordial manners, brotherly spirit, and saintly life, to glorify God for the grace so conspicuously displayed in their venerable father. He has left behind for the imitation of his brethern the example of one who with his whole heart believed, and with his whole soul taught the great doctrines of our most holy faith. While his strength permitted, he was most exemplary as a pastor, encouraging the down-cast and the doubting, warning the backslidden, strengthening the weak, and comforting the sorrowing. His public devotions were, beyond those of most ministers, remarkable for their unction and elevation, their spirituality and appropriateness; while it is confidently believed, that secret prayer to an unusual degree sanctified his studious and solitary hours. His extensive and varied knowledge, the soundness of his judgment, and his long experience as a minister of Jesus Christ, made him a most valuable member of Presbytery; and his absence will be long felt at meetings of our Church courts. His brethern will hold his character in long remembrance, as one distinguished for its spiritual beauty, for its sterling worth, and for the harmony of the graces with which it is adorned. They are thankful that a life so spotless and so useful, ended so well; that he was serene and cheerful up to its solemn close; and that the Lord fulfilled so abundantly to His aged servant the sweet and precious promise, 'Even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you; I have made and I will bear, even I will carry and will deliver you.' Several session-records were on the recommendation of the committees appointed to examine them, ordered to be attested as carefully and correctly kept. Leave was granted to the congregation of Springville to dispose of the old church at that place. The next meeting of Presbytery was appointed to be held at Peterborough, and within St. Andrew's Church there, on the last Tuesday of March at 1.30 p.m. Answers to the questions on the State of Religion are to be sent to the undersigned.—W. DONALD, Pres. Clerk.

DUNNETT vs FORNERI.

(From the Belleville Daily Ontario)

We give below the concluding portion of the judgment delivered by Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot in this case, relating to the charges made by the Rev. Mr. Forneri against the plaintiff. It will no doubt be read with interest by many who have been enquiring as to the result of the suit. The judgment was reported in full in the Globe on the 23rd January.

"As to the costs, the general rule no doubt is that the losing party pays the costs, but this is not so inflexible as not to yield to the discretion of the Court in a proper case, and I might perhaps content myself with saying that I do not think it, from the nature of the case and from its being the first of its class, a proper case to make the plaintiff pay costs. But lest the defendant should imagine I had refused him costs in the exercise merely of an arbitrary discretion: while his defence had not been considered on its merits, I think it right to say that but for the question of jurisdiction the plaintiff seems to me entitled to a decree. His conduct throughout seems to have been proper enough. As soon after he learned that his want of confirmation was to be alleged as a ground for refusing him the Sacrament, he expressed his readiness to be confirmed, and thus brought himself entirely within the rubrics. The rubrics at the close of the Order of Confirmation directs that none shall be admitted to the Holy Communion until such time as he be confirmed. And I see nothing to lead me to believe that the plaintiff was insincere in the expression of such a desire. I have also very considerable hesitation in believing that the want of confirmation was the true reason for the defts, course of conduct. It was not till the 30th Nov. 1875, that the objection was sprung upon the plaintiff, and in saying so the language is not too harsh, seeing that the plaintiff had been a communicant for eleven years in the Church, when he was informed by the defendant that as the plaintiff had refused on account of his unreasonable variances with the defendant to perform one of the first duties of church membership, viz, to contribute to the support of the church according to his means, the defendant begged to inform him that the sufferance by which hitherto the plaintiff had employed the privilege or membership without the prescribed qualification could not any longer be accorded to him. It thus seems that if the plaintiff had continued to contribute according to the defendant's idea of his ability, he might have continued to communicate without confirmation. The defendant in his answer does not say in terms that the plaintiff was refused permission to participate in the ordinance on that ground; but that he did not consider him according to the canons and rubrics entitled. This is immediately followed by enumeration of matters in which the plaintiff had contravened the canons and rubrics, in which this finds no place. And in the paper which the defendant read in the church suspending the plaintiff, he informs the congregation that if the defendant had acknowledged his fault (creating disturbance), and promised for the future to be a peaceable and law-abiding member of the church, he would gladly have welcomed him again to the Lord's Supper—and this apparently without confirmation.

I should suppose from the procedure of the defendant that he does not attach much importance to a strict compliance with the rubrics in matters of this description, whatever he may do in regard to others.

The other defences, that the plaintiff is a notorious depraver of the Book of Common Prayer, and is a schismatic, and has maliciously and openly contended with the defendant and others, and has refused to be reconciled to them do not seem to me sustained in evidence. The difficulties between the parties arose from the defendant introducing certain innovations in worship and church furniture, which the plaintiff resisted, and rather harsh terms entered into the correspondence on both sides. The plaintiff considers the defendant a ritualist. The defendant reports that the plaintiff is a schismatic, and if opposition to the defendant's wishes in the matter of having a Sunday School on the plans in opposition to the Sunday School of the parish constitutes schism, the plaintiff is undoubtedly guilty. In no other respect does he seem to me liable to the offered charge. The plaintiff being a notorious depraver of this Book of Common Prayer rests upon the fact of his desiring to have a revision of the book, and his having circulated a tract by the Rev. E. Nangle and other tracts in favor of revision. The defendant admits that he has said privately that if the question were opened he himself would have liked to see some things changed, and has said so to the plaintiff; but as the defendant does not think the question an open one, he charges the plaintiff with being a depraver of the book. It is admitted on both sides that there is some authority which has power to revise the book. It cannot, therefore be a crime or a sin in the plaintiff to take steps to have that authority set in motion to change what (we may suppose) the defendant himself would have liked to have changed. There is no charge that the changes desired by the plaintiff are in any way improper.

The defence upon all grounds except that as to the jurisdiction of the Court having signally failed, I think the defendant must bear his own costs."

DOURO FINANCES.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner:

SIR,—In my letter which appeared in a former issue of your paper, I gave a brief synopsis of what took place at the Town Hall, Douro, on nomination day. On that occasion I felt it to be my duty to criticise the conduct of our present Reeve of Douro, Mr. John Maloney, and it was my desire on that occasion and still is to perform the unpleasant duty in a very mild and even charitable manner toward that gentleman. I dealt only in facts; but you know, Mr. Editor, that facts are stubborn things, and it appears that these few simple facts created intense commotion in the camp, causing not a few of the members thereof to fairly wince. Of course in this extremity something must be done, these facts must be set aside at any sacrifice, even though fibbing had to be resorted to. A fly sheet was written and signed "Ratepayers," but what did it contain? Nothing but a tissue of misrepresentations from beginning to end—not even a single truth in the whole of it. It has been frequently stated to me that Mr. Maloney is the author of the famous sheet referred to; but I cannot believe it for a single moment. If I could I should at once pronounce him unfit for any position of public trust. I must, however, give the writers credit for the prudence they manifested in giving the sheet a plurality of authors; for surely it contained more rubbish than any ordinary man could even hope to father successfully for any considerable length of time.

In the first place "Ratepayers" deny that Mr. Moloney took his seat in the corner and refused to speak first. Deny it as often as you like, gentlemen, the fact still remains patent to over a hundred ratepayers; the oftener you deny it the oftener you declare yourselves capable of denying the truth. In the next place, we are told that Mr. Moloney demanded from his opponents some explanations on account of some shameful accusations which they circulated against him in their canvass, which they denied. Well, what more than a denial could the gentlemen desire before so many witness? Did he go on with his speech then? Nay; the charms of the "corporation chair" still held him fast within their embrace. When the Clerk announced the time closed for receiving nominations for the office of Reeve, I was standing within a few feet of Mr. Moloney, and I deny most emphatically that Mr. Moloney or any other person in his behalf made any demand of the kind; neither did I hear one word said against the private character of the gentleman in question, at that time nor at any other time throughout the day. This little story is pure fabrication. In the third place we are told that Mr. Foley stated that when any person came from his ward on business he attended to him, and, as he stated, was not supposed to know anything about any other part of the township, which was the sum total of his speech. This is a pure perversion of the facts. When Mr. Moloney tried to apologize for his nineteen council meetings held in the year 1877, by stating that he had a poor slow council to assist him, Mr. Foley on his own part flung the compliment back where it came from, by stating that when any person came from his ward having business, he took the lead and had said business attended to as promptly as possible, and that he allowed the other ward councillors to pursue the same course. We charged Mr. Moloney with calling a meeting of the Council and dismissing it without doing any business because he (Mr. Moloney

THE NOVA SCOTIA ELECTIONS.

When Mr. Vail was defeated in Digby, to the great surprise of those who so madly rejoiced at the result of the vote, the Opposition press was very careful to note the former majority, but did not say that it had before that elected Conservatives, and was reckoned a safe conservative constituency. In the same way the recent majority of Hon. Mr. Jones in Halifax was compared with his former election by a majority of over two thousand, but not a word was said as to the difference in the Opposition shown him, neither was mention made of a previous defeat of Messrs. Jones and Power by Conservative candidates in the same constituency. In fact both Digby and Halifax counties are old strong-holds of the Tory party, and the fact that Reformers have been of late elected in them, prove that Liberal principles have spread to some purpose when once they had but little hope of success. As to Mr. Vail's defeat in Digby, it is one of those unexplicable things that sometimes arise in political contests, but we rather think that already those in that constituency who are responsible for his rejection are sorry for their infatuation. They must see now that they have sacrificed their political interests for the fleeting gratification of petty prejudices and sectional feelings, for which their more timely reflections will teach them to be heartily ashamed.

THE ABSURDITIES OF PROTECTIONISTS.

A very amusing letter appeared in the Review of last week over the initials, N. B. C.; and it is the more amusing because the writer does not appear to have known what nonsense he was penning. He cries out against "the torrent of American monopoly", does not want "our manufactories to be overwhelmed and ruined," and declares that after putting on a 30 per cent tariff the United States "prospered beyond all precedent." Now such twaddle will not go down with an intelligent people who know that there is no "torrent of American monopoly; that our manufactories are in less danger of being "overwhelmed and ruined" than the protected workshops of the United States; and that so far from the country referred to having "prospered beyond all precedent," it is in a state little short of revolution, and agitated by a proposition to virtually repudiate part of its debt. N. B. C. evidently knows this, for he says, speaking of a gradual lowering of customs duties. "For want of acting fully upon these fair, equitable and sure principles, the United States is now suffering having kept up her tariff when there was little occasion for it—and the reaction has shown England to be the better politician by far of the two. This is the true policy which I hope will be initiated as soon as possible by our Ottawa statesmen."

His political economy appears to be sound there; but it is hard to believe that he means, or indeed knows, what he says half the time, for in another place he goes in plainly for a high tariff, and this is how he argues:—

"Do not think that a farmer cares a straw about paying a dollar more for a coat if he can sell his produce at a higher rate by means of a tariff! Nor will the poor man complain, for higher wages will satisfy him, and conduce to an easier and more comfortable maintainance. Well then, say you, who will have the burden—the public at large? Certainly; for who is interested in the prosperity of the country, but the public at large."

It is frequently and truly said that people grow rich, not by what they receive so much as by what they save. This, however, is negatived by the man who would make everybody richer by causing them to pay more all round. Its a poor rule that will not work both ways; therefore we would ask, what gain is it to the farmer that he should sell his produce at a higher rate if he has to pay more for everything he buys? of what use are higher wages to the poor man, if he is forced to pay higher prices for his bread, his clothes, his house and his tools? and if the burden be distributed upon the public at large, and, if such a thing were possible, equally on every person in the community, where would be the gain to any? Where would the prosperity come in? The case will not bear examination. Protection to everybody at the expense of everybody else is an absurdity; and protection to any one class at the expense of the rest of the people is a palpable injustice.

But sighs N. B. C., "If Canada could compete, in capital, with either England or the States." Aye, there's the rub. Canada has lost so much capital for investment in all her industries; and drawing it from any on, by protection, another is not going to increase the capital, while it will plainly be diverting it from a natural to an unnatural, and consequently dangerous, channel. Lab ourers in the weakened industry will suffer while an influx of alien labourers to engage in the protected business will assuredly lower wages in that particular line. The farmers, who depend on what they grow, and who would under protection have to pay more to everybody with whom they dealt, than paying her a little more, and there a little more, would plainly have to bear the whole burden, under the pretext that the one (doubtful) increase in their receipts would counterbalance the innumerable increases in their expenditures. The Conservatives must verily think the farmers are fools, when they try to induce them to favour such a suicidal policy as that of Protection.

THE MORTUARY CHAPEL.

A letter of "a stockholder" in the Examiner of last week has called forth a reply from the Rev. Mr. Clementi, president of the Little Lake Cemetery Company—a reply that is not in harmony with his position as president, of a company, holding in trust a piece of ground that should at any rate rescind him of the necessity to deal with all matters connected with it in a frank and straightforward manner. We anticipated part of a plea likely to be put forth, that a Mortuary Chapel would be common property to all denominations. But this needs no reply, as all do not desire it, and none of them except the Episcopalians, would be likely, even to use it. The wit pressed in with reference to the sects of England and Scotland will not convince many of the justice or reasonableness of using the money of Stockholders of every denomination to erect a Chapel for the denomination or Church of which the president claims to be a member. The directors could find other ways in harmony with the act, of spending the surplus, $1700—ways that would have the approval or all, and it is to be hoped that they will not undertake the erection of a Mortuary Chapel, until they have exhausted every just way of disposing of the cash on hand. Let a few things required engage their attention this season, such as enlarging the grounds while land adjacent can be easily obtained: aiding in getting a sidewalk from the main street to the Cemetery: placing posts to hitch teams to, instead of as now having them hitched to beautiful trees, which they are almost sure to destroy; and many other little accommodations required.

In visiting the grounds the effect of the atmosphere on the monuments are too visible, as many of them are becoming black, and unsightly. If this $1700 or any $1200 of it, were invested in a capital fund, and the interest yearly, used to clean and keep these memorial stones in good repair, the beautiful grounds would always have a fresh and cheerful appearance to visitors. In this way all funds would be aiding in beautifying the grounds for all time. At present the sum of two dollars a year is exacted for keeping each plot in order, and every one who visits the grounds will admit that Mr. Kelly does his part with great taste and exactitude. But, might not the $1700 be invested so as to lessen this yearly expense, and at the same time be used in accordance with the act.

If the President desires a Mortuary Chapel, could he not get up a subscription from those holding views akin to his own, and use that money to build a Chapel for themselves. The next thing the President can do is, call a meeting of the stockholders to advise the directors in this matter, and then he would be in possession of the views of a large number of those stockholders, who did not ever imagine such a matter as a Mortuary Chapel would be brought up at the annual meeting.

The Queen vs Wilkinson In this case the application to the supreme Court for a new trial has been refused.

The appeal against the Dunkin by-law in Northumberland and Durham has been dismissed with costs. The evident verdict of the people is therefore legally confirmed by the Court.

The war news during the past week has been rather exciting, and at times a general European war was feared. Present indications however go to show, that peace will prevail, and an amicable understanding be arrived at. A treaty of peace is now in course of preparation.

A Bill has been introduced in the Ontario Legislature to enable the Midland Railway Company of Canada; on consent of two things (in value) of the bondholders, to issue new consolidated sterling bonds not exceeding £525,000, to redeem and cancel their first and second mortgage bonds, and to liquidate their debts by giving their unsecured creditors, on consent of two things in value of such creditors, bonds in satisfaction of their claims; to change the place of their head office to London, England; and to give power to municipalities to grant aid by way of bonus to the Company.

The financial statement of the Treasurer of Haliburton (provisional county) shows that the total receipts for 1877 on county account were $1,899.06; total payments, $2,106.44; amount overpaid, $206.35. Total receipts on Victoria Railway acc't., $7,189.12; payments, $6,729.86; amount to the credit of the account, $450.26. Total receipt on debenture account, $669.79; payments, $456.53; amount to credit of account, $210.19.

"The Dominion of Canada must not be allowed to sink into the position of tillers of the soil and hewers of wood for our neighbors."

The above lucid sentence appears in the Tory sheet of this town. We suppose what was really meant was, that the people of the Dominion "must not be allowed to sink." But to sink where? Listen ye farmers and lumbermen, and blush for your degradation. "To the position of tillers of the soil and hewers of wood." Thus does the pretended advocate of protection to each and every industry speak of the two most important in Ontario, if not in the whole Dominion.

"The tariff must be adapted to the varying circumstances of the day."—Peterborough Review.

"No such readjustment will be satisfactory to the interests affected, or to the country, if adopted as a provisional means only to meet a temporary exigency, or to supply a temporary deficit."—Resolution of the Conservative Convention.

Here is a direct conflict of ideas; yet the Review is supposed to be a Conservative journal in complete accord with the platform laid down by the party convention. Is it possible that our contemporary is about to revolt under its new management; or are we to believe that the party platform is not understood by the editor. Small blame to him if it isn't.

Upon somebody or other rests a fearful responsibility for the loss of about 180 lives through the wreck of the steamer Metropolis on the dangerous North Carolina coast. On Tuesday morning, Jan. 29th, this vessel sailed from Philadelphia for Rosa, Brazil, carrying 260 labourers, engaged to work on a Brazilian railway, also 300 tons of railway iron; and on Thursday she was a total wreck on the North Carolina beach, twenty miles north of Kitty Hawk signal station, near to which the war steamer Huron was lost a month or two ago. At midnight on Wednesday, labouring against a tremendous gale from the south-east, the vessel sprung a leak; soon afterwards became unmanageable, the water having reached the fires and put them out, and at seven on Thursday morning she was "beached"—that is, ran on to the shore—as the only means of saving any lives at all. Of some 260 persons, passengers and crew together, only about 100 were saved. It is pronounced that the vessel was both unseaworthy and overloaded. If shippers will load vessels down to almost the last foot that can be carried in smooth water, sending them out to take their chances on the tempestuous deep, surely vessels so overloaded should not be allowed to carry passengers.

The Toronto Mail is above all things desirous to further the prosperity of the country. It has told us this a hundred times, and this is the way in which it does it:—it has afforded materials to the New York Times to write a serious article wherein it is stated that the Dominion has been brought "to the verge of bankruptcy." It is an ill bird that fouls its own nest, and what can we think of this foul Tory "bird" that circulates slanders whose only result must be, supposing any one sufficiently credulous to believe them, the depreciation of our credit both at home and abroad, and the infliction upon our citizens of wanton injury! And it should not be overlooked that the very "workingmen" who have been cajoled into making Sir John costly presents would be the worst sufferers by the organ's attempt to lower the credit of the country.—Beacon.

The Goderich Signal tells the following:—The other day a jolly Grit and a shrewn Conservative—a farmer—met in a store, where they fell to discussing the merits of two eminent Canadians whose engravings were there displayed. The Conservative did not know who they were, and knowing this the Grit asked of him, "Mr. S., if you were about lending $1,000, to which of these men would you sooner entrust the money?" The Conservative studies for a few moments, and then frankly said, pointing to one of the pictures: "To this man, for he has an honest face; the other looks like a rogue." Imagine his feelings when informed that the pictures were those of Hon. Alex. Mackenzie and Sir John A. Macdonald. Of course it was Mr. Mackenzie he pointed out as the trustworthy man.

Mr. Cameron has never been noted for either prudence or deep insight into the circumstances of any case with which he has dealt on the floor of the House. It is his wont occasionally, from the height of his intellectual and social superiority, to look down with considerable contempt on those around him. Believing, as he does, in the old family compact, and taking care frequently to let his views on that matter be known, one can readily believe that he does not give the inhabitants of the rural constituencies much credit either for education, or even for ordinary intelligence. But surely the most common place respect, either for himself or his friends, should have prevented, the declaration he made the other day in the House of Assembly. He opposes giving the Magistrates the statutes. And why should this legal luminary, this scion of all the virtues the Goddess of law requires in a son of hers, wish others to be deprived of the privilege which has been of so much service to him, viz: the free interpretation of the Provincial Code. Is it what Mr. C, fears that those afternoons he is so much in the habit of spending outside the House, where he is paid for being in it, may be less profitable? Profesedily not! It is, says the great leader of the Conservative hosts, because many of the Magistrates cannot read these laws. Will Mr. C. rise and explain? It surely cannot be possible that his bosom friends by whom the greater part of these Magistrates were appointed, could have been so lost to their duty to their country, as to place men in these positions, of trust utterly unfit to fill them. Verily we should not have thought so, but the mighty Mr. C. says it is true, and surely we may be pardoned for saying he knows whereof he speaks.

MECHANICS LIEN AMENDMENT ACT.

The following is the text of a Bill introduced in the Ontario Legislature by Mr. Robinson, and entitled "An Act to amend the "Mechanics' Lien Act."

Whereas it is desirable to afford greater protection to the earnings of the working Mechanics, Labourers and suppliers of material, than is now provided by law; Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows:—

1. Section eleven of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, chapter one hundred and twenty, intituled, "An Act to establish liens in favour of Mechanics, Machinists, and others," is hereby amended as follows:—"All payments, up to ninety per centum of the price to be paid for the work, machinery or materials, as defined by section three of this Act, made in good faith by the owner to the con-contractor, or by the contractor to the sub-contractor or by one sub-contractor to another sub-contractor, before notice in writing by the person claiming the lien has been given to such owner, contractor or sub-contractor (as the case may be), of the claim of such person, shall operate as a discharge pro tanto of the lien created by this Act, but this section shall not apply to any payment made for the purpose of defeating or impairing a claim to a lien existing or arising under this Act"

2. The said lien shall operate as a charge to the extent of ten per centum of the price to be paid as aforesaid by such owner, up to ten days after the completion of the work or of the delivery of the materials, and no longer, unless notice in writing be given as hereinbefore provided.

Employment of Prisoners Outside of Gaol Limits.

The following is the Government Bill to provide for "employing prisoners without the walls of common goals":—

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows:—

1. The Lieutenant Governor in Council may, from time to time, direct or authorize the employment upon any specific work or duty, beyond the limits of any common goal, or any prisoner who, after a prison sentence of imprisonment for any breach of any law of Canada, or of any Province of Canada, is sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labor in such goal under the authority of any statute of Ontario, or for the breach of the by-law of any municipal corporation in this Province.

2. Every such prisoner shall, during such imprisonment, be subject to all the rules, regulations, and discipline of the goal so far as applicable, and to any regulations made by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council under the first section of the Act of Canada, passed in the fortieth year of Her Majesty's reign, chaptered thirty-six, for preventing escapes and preserving discipline.

3. No such prisoner shall be employed save under the strictest care and supervision of officers appointed to that duty.

4. Every street, highway, or public thoroughfare of any kind along or across which prisoners may pass in going to or returning from their work, and every place where they may be employed under this Act, shall, while so used, be considered as a portion of the goal for the purposes of this Act so far as the legislative authority of this Province extends in this behalf.

MIDLAND CENTRAL POULTRY SHOW.

Second Annual Exhibition.

The second annual exhibition of the Midland Central Poultry Association was held in the old Music Hall in this town on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week closing to-day, and is far in advance of that of last year, the entries numbering about 200, and made by parties from various parts of the Province. Some of the birds shown were very fine specimens, especially in Brahmas, Cochins, Hamburgs, Dorkings, Leghorns and Game. There were also entries in Bantams. Great praise is due to Mr. John McClelland, President, and Messrs. Robert Hall, John Taylor and James McWilliams, for getting up the exhibition, and carrying it to such a successful issue. The enterprise of these, and other gentleman in town in importing first class fowl for the improvement of this class of stock deserves encouragement and praise. The mere prizes are no reward for the great outlay occasioned by importing these birds, as several of those shown have been purchased at prices varying from $25 to $50 and some as high as $100, showing the spirit manifested in keeping up the Association. Below is the prize list in which will be seen the names of all the successful exhibitors:

RELATIONSHIP.

"A and B are brothers, what are the terms of relationship of the children of A and B. respectively named E and D, and what between E and the children of D, also between the children of E and the children of D?

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Seeing the above in the Examiner I submit the following in answer:—E and D. are known as cousins; and the cousins stand each to the children of the other in the community called relationship of second-cousins. The same term is used to denote the relationship between the children of cousins. The legal distinction is now definite. A and B descended from a common father, to whom they stand in the first degree of relationship, are to each other in the second degree. Their children E and D are removed one degree farther on each branch of the family tree, and are to each other in the fourth degree of relationship. The children of E and D are another remove on either side, and are to each other in the sixth degree, those of E being to D and those of D to E in the fifth degree.

SOLON.

HOW BORROWERS ARE BLED.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

A practice prevails with some Loan Societies of bringing persuasion and compulsion to bare in placing the risks of their borrowers with favourite insurance companies, and collecting commissions on the business thus done. These corporations have arrangements with different insurance companies, under which directors and managers make it a condition of a loan that the borrower must get his insurance in, or, if already insured, transfer his risks to, thus favorite underwriters. These charge the borrower one per cent above current fire rates, and out of the money extorted hand over ten to twenty per cent to the loan associations for acting as agents. This money is not entered among the receipts of the Loan Societies, but is pocketed by the management. Sometimes a man about to obtain a loan on mortgage has just paid the premium on the policy which covers his buildings. The cancelling of his policy by the new contract which the Society compels him to enter into causes him to lose the money so paid. In this way he suffers a double loss:—In the sacrifice of the Premium paid; and in the extra rate charged for the new policy. Landed Credit Societies are not alone in these dark transactions. Some legal firms of high standing bring pressure to bear on their clients in order to obtain commissions in the same way. And agents in the branches of different banks have been regularly paid for forcing customers into the insurance fold.

The interests of the public generally, even considered on purely commercial or financial grounds, demand that such sharp practices should be resisted and exposed. Where managers and directors are corrupt we need only expect that their subordinates will be dishonest. But looked at even as affecting the standing of the Societies directly, and not through the untrustworthyness of officers or clerks, the practice of taking commissions may lead to serious losses. It is not necessary that borrowers should tamely submit to such robbery, for there are many of the leading companies above anything so dishonourable. Then too some indignant client may possibly apply to the Court of Chancery for an injunction to compel the restoration of moneys taken from him in the way we have been considering. Indeed we understand that this step is already contemplated. Although the commissions have not been ranked among their receipts, the Societies may presumably be held responsible for the acts of their officers, and be compelled to refund. Should such action become general, shareholders would suffer for sins they are at least morally responsible for permitting.

Yours truly, JUS.

THE TOWN ASSESSMENT.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir.—As the time is approaching when the Council will be called upon to provide for the proper assessment of the Town. I would like to make a few suggestions as to the propriety of selecting an experienced man who will efficiently perform that important duty,

The last assessment taken, I have no hesitation in saying—from the examination I have been enabled to make of the roll—in the most inaccurate that has ever been made for the town of Peterborough, witness property assessed at $1700 instead of $17000. Income in schedule delivered $1000 instead of $10,000, &c, &c.,

The remedy for this state of affairs is quite simple viz:—appoint one responsible man at a salary of $250, as has been done in other places, thereby saving $100 besides the guarantee that it will be well done. If one good man, and a man of substance is appointed, the council will then know whom to blame if any mistakes occur, and against whom to proceed, to recover the penalty for neglect of duty.

As it is now, one Assessor says it is not his fault, and the other repeats the same story, consequently it becomes a question of veracity between them, and the upshot is, they get "Scot free," and the town "pays the piper."

I have heard with what truth I cannot say, that there is a certain wire-pulling, Councillor who is desirous of rewarding a protege of his, by having him appointed Assessor, not because of his fitness for the office, but for political purposes alone.

The council might as well appoint a mere copying clerk to the position of Treasurer of the town, and ignore the training and experience necessary to qualify a man for the proper discharge of the duties devolving upon him in that capacity, as to appoint a man assessor, simply because a certain clique desire it, and he happens to be a member of the same political party. I hope the council will see the advisability of adopting my proposition, and appoint one good and competent man irrespective of politics, or religion and only look to the general good of the town.

BOBCAYGEON AND LINDSAY RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Any person who, at the present time, can say or do any thing to prevent the people of Bobcaygeon from committing themselves to an impracticable and unprofitable undertaking, in the form of a railway to Lindsay, would be doing them a good service. I don't blame them for desiring to have an outlet somewhere, and I don't wonder at there impatience, but they ought not to precipitate an event which in the end may do them more harm than good. They have waited so long, let them wait a little longer. A false step now would be fatal to all their future progress. What they shall do let them do it after the most mature consideration—for they must remember that a mistake in an important matter of this kind made by a municipality is fatal in all its consequences and is not so easily remedied as a mistake made by an individual. A mistake of this kind not only involves the creation of a large debt and the payment of heavy taxes, from a cent to a cent and a half in the dollar, for all time, but it deprives the people of this village of the ability of trying other means, should this proposed road prove a failure. To be complete, the road must have a swing bridge over the river into Lindsay, which may be estimated to cost at least $15,000, besides the expense of a bridge tender, and these items must be added as part of the expense of the road. Neither Verulam nor Harvey will give anything to this scheme. Verulam is already served by the Victoria railway and Harvey, except a very small part north, could not use the road if it were built. But even suppose both these townships did contribute, where is the rest of the money to come from? Lindsay has not such an interest in the road as to induce it to give a dollar, and I would like to know how the road is to be built. It is perfect nonsense to expect any help from the government to such a road as this. The people of Bobcaygeon appear to be falling into the same mistake that they committed, when, some few years ago, under a special charter for building a road from Peterborough into the back country, the people of Bobcaygeon, through Mr. Boyd, was persuaded to throw away the only opportunity for obtaining an outlet to the front and to the rear, by means of the charter referred to. At that time they appeared to think that all they had to do was to look on and a railway would be made to their doors, and it was only when it was too late to remedy the evil that they discovered their error. Times and circumstances have changed since then. The Victoria railway has been built and now the people of Bobcaygeon find themselves isolated and cut off from the trade which they might have secured had they only been wise in time.

My advice to them is to try to induce Mr. Hugel to give them a road to connect with the Midland at Omemee—when it would have the advantage of the Grand Junction railway, which before very long, will connect at that point. In that case the people would have a natural outlet to tide water and then they could afford to exert themselves to obtain the trade of the surrounding country by reason of the facilities which they would then possess. If they can offer Mr. Hugel a reasonable contribution—he, with the aid of Peterborough and the Grand Junction, might be induced to make the connection. Whatever the people of Bobcaygeon may say to the contrary, I venture to tell them that this is their best and only chance to obtain the railway facilities which they desire.

A FRIEND.

That Unfounded Statement.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir.—I was taken by surprise to find in your last issue a communication from William Robson Esq., headed "an Unfounded Statemeat," charging me with making false statements at the Town Hall, on the day of the election, the whole of which I deny in toto. Had Mr. Robson ever hinted to me that I had said as I am reported by him, I could in a few moments time have removed such an impression having never said, or ever thought anything of the kind, as it is I am certain, his informant is mistaken in his man. And if he(Mr. R.) would inquire of Messrs. Chas. Brealy, or Samuel Bennett, they perhaps could enlighten him on the subject. In the concluding part in which he refers to the means taken to secure my election, none knows better than Mr. R. the falseness of that charge, as he stated on the day after the election, in the Commercial House, before several witnesses, that he was fairly and honorably beaten and was satisfied with the result, and hoped we would never be any worse friends. And the next thing he did was to publish me to the world for breaking the ninth Commandment! Consistency thou art a jewel! With respect to the charges against my friends which it is well known, are composed of the most honourable, influential and intelligent electors in the township. Notwithstanding anything he (Mr. R.) may say to the contrary, as he evidently feels his defeat sorely, my friends, I am sure will treat his insinuations and insults with the contempt they deserve. I now leave him to see the folly of rushing into print, as I think after the professions of friendship he made towards me during and after the contest, I do not think he is acting the part that he professed to be willing to carry out, and desired of me.

I am yours truly,

HENRY COLLINS.

OTONABEE.

The following correspondence speaks for itself:—

John Reid, Esq., P. L. S. Ashburnham.

Dear Sir.—At the nomination of Councillors at Keene, on the 31st of December last, some of the ratepayers found fault with your charges for placing monuments along the Base line of Otonabee, and Mr. Wm. Lang, an ex-Reeve of the Township, was very much excited, and said that you did not get all of the $500 charged, as the Councillors did not tell how much of that was given back as a rebate, as a bait, and declared that you would not have got the contract, had you not paid back part of the amount named to them. You will, therefore, favour by stating, by return mail, whether there was any bribery or not in the transaction; if so, how much was the rebate given and to whom, and whether or not, any of the Councillors sought for or expected to receive, either directly or indirectly, any rebate or offer of a rebate or a favour in any way whatever. If any Reeve, Deputy Reeve or Councillor did so, or sought for it, or expects it, he should be known to all the ratepayers. I am persuaded the whole charge is without foundation, but to set the matter right before the public, your kind reply of all facts, either understood or implied in reference to these matters will be accepted as a favor.

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant,

JAMES MILLER.

Otonabee, January, 26th 1878.

REPLY.

James Miller, Esq., Reeve, Otonabee.

Dear Sir.—I received your letter of the 25th instant, yesterday, stating that it was said that I had been paid too much for planting the monuments along the Base line of Otonabee, and also that Mr. Wm. Lang stated that I had bribed the Councillors, by which means I got the contract.

In reply I say that I was the person who had the contract for planting the monuments on the Governing Lines of North Monaghan, and on the westerly five concessions of Douro, in both of which I was paid a higher price than in Otonabee.

As for Mr. Lang's assertion that I bribed the Councillors, I solemnly state that to the value of one cent I did not bribe, the Reeve, Deputy Reeve, any Councillor, or any Ratepayer. I also think that Mr. Lang by this time should have nicks enough in his horns to have avoided making assertions for which there is not a shadow of truth, but some people are very long getting common sense.

Had I alone been accused by Mr. Lang I should have treated the whole matter with silent contempt, as it only shows his own ignorance, but as if true the bribed would be equally guilty for accepting as the briber for offering, it is but right to answer such accusations, particularly as you asked for a reply.

You are quite welcome to make any use you please of this letter.

I remain, yours truly,

JOHN REID.

LOCAL NEWS

The Grangers are shipping their wheat just now to Portland.

For Ottawa.—Messrs. Bertram and Hall left town yesterday, for Ottawa, to take their seats at the opening of Parliament to-day.

Curling.—A game of curling between the Peterborough and Keene Clubs on Tuesday, resulted in a victory by the Peterborough Club, of two points.

For Sale.—The cottage on Brock street occupied by H.C. Rogers. Post Master. Possession given in May. For particulars. apply at the Post Office. 6-3t

The Catholic Bazaar.—The bazaar in connection with St. Peters Church in this town closed last Thursday and came up to the utmost expectations of its promoters—the receipts amounting to about $2,000.

St. Luke's Church Bazaar.—The bazaar in aid of St. Luke's Church Ashburnham will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Monday and Tuesday, March 4th and 5th. Further particulars will be given in due season.

Prayers at Council Meetings.—A notice has been given by Ald. Hallan, of Toronto, that he will move for the appointment of a committee for the purpose of considering the advisability of opening the meetings of the Council with prayers. Who will make a similar motion here?

Insurance.—We direct attention to Mr. John Ritchie's advertisement in another column. He has secured the agency in this district for the "Northern" of London, and the "Scottish Imperial" of Glasgow, both old and reliable companies and offers to do business on the most reasonable terms.

Trotter Drowned.—Capt. Cottingham, of Omemee, lost his valuable trotting horse "Tuss Tuoss" on Saturday last, by drowning. He was being exercised on the ice course by the groom, when the ice gave way and the horse was drowned. The Captain's short time ago refused $700 for the animal.

The Ice.—The Little Lake is now effectually sealed over with ice, which may be expected to hold out until the general dissolution of all wintry things in the spring. So strong has the ice became that our "local sports" have a track for speeding their horses in the afternoons. The weather has changed since this has been written, the ice may go any minute.

A Protest.—We have been requested to state that a paper in the way of a protest against the erection of a Mortuary Chapel out of the surplus funds in the hands of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, will be at this office for signature, and parties opposed to said outlay are invited to call and attach their names to it, that it may be presented to the Directors before they take any decided action in the matter.

Clearing Out Sale.—Attention is directed to W. Fairweather & Co's advertisement in another column. For thirty days a great clearing out sale at sweeping reductions will be held in order to make room for a large importation of goods for the Spring and Summer trade. Parties desirous of getting real bona fide bargains should not let the opportunity pass as the stock will be well assorted and extra inducements offered.

Selling Grain.—Wiser men than we pretend to be are of opinion that farmers would act wisely by selling at present prices. There is nothing to justify a rise, and if the war should collapse, the great wheat p rt of Southern Russia—Odessa—will send its millions of bushels to crowd the market. Upon the whole it may be deemed a safe maxim—"Better sell at fair prices in the present than to wait for a speculative rise in the future."

The Weather for February.—Vennor is out with another weather forecast. He thinks we are to have a little winter weather yet. The storm of last week was shaken out of February's bag. It comes a short distance only in advance of some very heavy snow-falls and very cold weather. In the early part of February, the winter of 1878 will set in. The St. Lawrence can hold out but for a few days longer, and when bridged, will remain so, in all probability, until the first week in May.

The Market By-law.—By reference to our report of the Town Council, in another column, it will be seen that the committee appointed to amend the Market By-law reported recommending among other things—a free market on Wednesday. This will meet the wishes of the majority of the merchants and the business men of the town and secure two market days in the week instead of one as at present. When in operation a few years ago, the free market day on Wednesday was found to work well and distributed, the trade of the week more evenly, and not confining it altogether to one day, to the annoyance of the merchant and the lack of attention to his customers.

Musical and Dramatic.—We are requested to announce that a Musical and Dramatic entertainment will be given on Wednesday evening 20th instant, in Bradburn's Hall, under the auspices of "Carswell" Temple. We understand a varied and interesting programme will be presented, and that an entertainment worthy of support will be given. As this is the first entertainment given by the members of this Temple, it will no doubt, as it should be, liberally patronized, and if the same success attends it that has attended their labors in building up a new temple, we can safely predict a bumper house. We might here add, that although but two months organized, they have on the roll a membership of nearly one hundred.

Church Anniversary.—The anniversary of the Bible Christian Church, Peterborough, will be held (D. V.) on Sunday and Monday next, the 10th and 11th days of February. On Sunday three sermons will be preached. In the morning, at 10.30, by the Rev R. Roberts; in the afternoon at 2.30, and evening at 6.30, by the Rev. G. Webber, of Toronto. On Monday a public tea will be served from 5.30 to 7.30 p.m. After tea Rev. G. Webber will deliver his instructive and popular lecture on the "Stuart Kings of England," or the "Struggles of Protestantism in the Seventeenth Century." Mr. Webber's well known ability as a lecturer being one of the first in the Dominion, should ensure him a large audience. Tickets for Tea and Lecture, 40 cents. Tea or Lecture, alone, 25 cents.

County L. O. L.—At the annual meeting of the County of West Peterborough Orange Lodge held on Thursday afternoon last, in the Orange Hall, in this town, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

W. Master	Bro. J. R. McWilliams.
Dep. Master	" S. Nelson.
Chaplain	" W. S. Nerbey.
Secretary	" John Smith.
Treasurer	" Richard Warsam.
D. of C	" G. W. Hall.
Lecturers	" R. Weir.
	" W. Thornton.

The Secretary has been instructed to issue invitations to the District Lodges in the Counties of West Northumberland, East Durham, South Victoria, and East Peterborough to join with this County in celebrating the coming anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

Little's Living Age.—The first two numbers of the new volume of the The Living Age, bearing date January 5th and 12th, respectively have several noteworthy articles, among them being: Russian Agression as specially affecting Austria-Hungary and Turkey, by Louis Kossuth, ex-Governor of Hungary. In the next weekly number a new serial by William Black will be begun, from advance sheets, which promises to be his best work. To new subscribers for 1878, the last seven numbers of 1877, containing the first parts of the German serial, and a story by Miss Thackery, with other valuable matter, are sent gratis. For fifty-two numbers, of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3328 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; or for $10.50 any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies is sent with The Living Age, for a year, both postpaid. Little & Gay, Boston, are the publishers.

Dominion Telegraph Co.—This institution appears to be in a prosperous condition, the directors having just declared a dividend of three and a half per cent. for the last half year, an increase of one per cent. on that previously paid. The increased dividend has been declared only after payment of all charges for interest on the Company's bonds and debentures, and seems to be fully justified by an increased business. The gross earnings of the Company in the year 1877, amounted to $177,864 against $145,-886 in 1876, being an increase of $31,978. The working expenses in 1877 amounted to 70½ per cent. of the gross receipts against 73 per cent. in 1876, being a reduction of two and three-quarters per cent, a feat which speaks very favorably for the management of the Company. During 1877 the lines have been greatly extended in Ontario, and outside the Province to the principal points in New Brunswick, and within a few months they intend to connect the wires in the Maritime Provinces with those in Quebec, making the Company a Dominion institution in reality as well as in title.

St. Paul's Church.—The annual congregational meeting of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, was held in the basement of the church on the 23rd of January, at the which there was a large number of members present. The session report showed that after the roll had been carefully purged, the membership of the church was found on year ending Nov. 30th, 1877, 668; a net increase of 44 over the preceding year. The Sabbath school report showed that the average attendance for the year was 324, being an increase of 45 over the average attendance last year. Besides the church school there is a mission school in the south part of the town with an average attendance of ninety scholars, and the other seven several schools in the country parts with an many more. The report of the Missionary Society showed that there had been raised for strictly missionary purposes $1,116.39, $140 of which had been raised by the Sunday school. In the report of the Deacon's court it was recommended that something should be done to increase the sitting accommodation of the church, as there was a large number of applicants for pews. It was decided to take a vote of the congregation with respect to the introduction of an organ into the church. The congregation have had to mourn the death of Rev. J. M. Reagh, who labored among them for more than forty years, and they resolved to erect a memorial tablet as a token of their esteem.

Public and High Schools.—We have received from the Department of Education a copy of the annual report of Public and High School of the Province of Ontario for the year 1876. We learn from it that the total receipts for all public school purposes for the year 1876 was $1,388,054, showing an increase of $88,201 over the total receipts of the preceding year. The total expenditure was $1,382,453, being an increase of $13,275. The school population (comprising children between the ages of 5 and 16 years) reported by Trustees was 485,350, an increase of 1,167. The total number of pupils attending schools is 420,827, an increase of 10,-282. Of these, 220,289 were boys, and 200,738 girls. The number reported not attending any school is 9,580, being a decrease of 1,462. In the 5,042 schools reported, 6,135 teachers were employed, 2,769 males and 3,366 females. The highest salary paid to a male teacher in any county is $900, and the lowest $120. In a city the highest salary is $1,600, and the lowest $600. The number of Roman Catholic Separate Schools is 167, being an increase of 11. The total receipts was $160,[illegible] total expenditure, $156,482. The number of pupils in attendance was 25,294. Number of teachers employed, 262; of these, 95 were male and 267 female. The total receipts for High Schools amounted to $221,125, being a decrease of $20,228. The total expenditure was $220,813, a decrease of $27,624. The number of pupils in attendance was 6,541, and the number of each pupil 1,164. The number of Collegiate Institutes is 8, and High Schools 97.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW.

On motion, Mr. Geo. A. Cox was heard before the Council in reference to a summons that had been served upon him for an infraction of the Building By-law. He said he was about to build a house on Water street, and for that purpose was tearing down a long row of sheds. In going on with the construction of the ice house was a contravention of the By-law—then he would outline a portion of one of the sheds, but he considered he was loosing the risk.

Councillor Smith said by a recent decision of the Police Magistrate no resolution of the Council could over-ride the By-law, and that to grant Mr. Cox's request a By-law would have to be passed.

The Inspector stated that had he known what Mr. Cox was going to do he would not have lodged the complaint. He thought there was one of the Council taking any action in the matter as he would withdraw the case.

AMENDMENTS TO THE MARKET BY-LAW.

Councillor Smith, as Chairman of the Committee on amending the Market By-law reported as follows:—

The committee appointed to consider the Market By-law, beg leave to report:—

That it is inexpedient to make the Market free but that Wednesday in each week be a free market day, except as to wood.

That the tolls on fish should be struck out, and that clause 2 be amended accordingly.

That clause four be amended by substituting the word "may" for the word "shall" in the latter part of said clause.

That clause five be amended so as to make it lawful for the Clerk to seize and destroy all tainted meat, fish, poultry, etc.

That clause ten be amended by adding the words to the following effect:—"Provided no such license shall be granted after the first day of July in any year.

That clause fourteen be amended so as to include wood therein, and that the words heifer and colt be transposed so that the tolls on a colt shall be 15 cents and on a heifer 10 cents. That the necessary words be added to this clause providing that every threshing machine &c., manufactured out of Peterborough, must be driven by horses, steam or water power, and exposed for sale on the market, a fee of $1 shall be charged. On the same goods manufactured as aforesaid to be driven or worked by hand and exposed for sale on the market, a fee of 50 cents be charged. And that tolls imposed on beef, mutton, lamb, fresh pork and veal be struck out.

That clause sixteen be amended by providing a fee of five cents to be charged for weighing coal.

That clause eighteen be amended so as to provide that the Clerk shall not be obliged to lodge complaints for any infraction of the By-law, but that he may do so at his own expense.

That motion fifteen be amended so as to provide that coalmerchants may upon paying the [illegible] expressly reserved [illegible] on the public streets, and that they may sell in private places without the payment of any tolls.

That a clause be added providing that a cut off small coales shall be kept by the Market Inspector and that the same may be used free of tolls.

That your committee would recommend that in order to put an end to all disputes respecting the tolls on wood the Wood By-law be re-enacted.

The foregoing recommendations to take effect on the first day of March next.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. H. SMITH, Chairman.

The report was received and a By-law thereto with ordered to be prepared.

COLLECTION OF TAXES BY INSTALMENTS.

Councillor Smith introduced a By-law providing for the collection of taxes by instalments. He said the system had been tried in Toronto and had worked well, had he thought it would be advisable to introduce it here. If the taxes were thus collected, say on the 1st of June and the 1st of October, a large saving to the town would be made in the matter of Bank discounts.

The By-law was read a first time and referred to the Finance Committee.

OVERDRAWN ACCOUNTS.

Moved by Councillor Cahill, seconded by Councillor Smith.—That the Treasurer be authorized to pay accounts out of any moneys he may have on hand, but that in no case shall he pay any money without the authority of the Council.—Carried.

PRINTING TENDERS.

Moved by Councillor Smith, seconded by Councillor Ormond.—That the communication of Toker & Co., J. R. Stratton, and W. H. Robertson & Co. be referred to the Printing Committee with instructions to consider the same and with power to receive tenders, subject to the approval of the Council, for the printing that may be required for the ensuing year.—Carried.

LICENSE BY-LAW.

Councillor Rutherford moved, seconded by Councillor Miller.—That a By-law to regulate the issuing of licenses and the amounts to be paid therefor be now read a first time.

Councillor Smith said the matter had been previously referred to the License Committee and that they had not reported, and consequently the motion was out of order.

The objection, however, was not held good and the By-law was read a first time.

Councillor Rutherford moved.—That the Council go into Committee of the Whole on the second reading of the By-law.

Councillor Smith objected, and moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor McBain.—That the By-law be referred to the License Committee.

Councillor Cahill criticised Councillor Rutherford's action in reference to introducing a By-law without bringing it before the other members of the Committee.

Councillor Rutherford said that under the present law the wholesale licenses were reduced to a small number, and that a proper rate for the licenses should be placed upon them. The Council could not raise the licenses higher than $200 without a vote of the people, and the By-law to become law must come into force on the 1st of March. It was thus necessary to pass the By-law through its several stages at once in order that it be advertised the requisite number of times, and voted upon by the ratepayers $1,000 was not too much to ask for a wholesale license when a monopoly was secured to two or three.

Councillor Smith thought it was an extraordinary course in thus springing the By-law upon the Council without even bringing it before the License Committee.

Councillor Denne, as a member of the License Committee objected to the manner in which the By-law was being pushed through and held that it should go to the Committee.

On a vote being taken Councillor Rutherford's motion was carried, the vote being as follows.

For the second reading,—Councillors Ormond, Paterson, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Carlisle and Millar.

Against,—Councillors Cahill, McBain, Smith, Rountree and Denne.

The Council then went into Committee of the Whole on the second reading, Councillor Millar in the Chair, when after considerable discussion, the Committee rose and asked leave to sit again next evening in order that a solicitor might be consulted.

Council resumed.

Councillor Smith moved, seconded by Councillor McBain.—That the Clerk be instructed to consult Mr. J. F. Deanistoun as to the legality of submitting this By-law to the people, Mr. Scott being from home.

Moved in amendment by Councillor Rutherford, seconded by Councillor Yelland.—That it be referred to Messrs. Scott & Edwards, Town Solicitors.

The amendment was carried.

ACCOUNT ORDERED TO BE PAID.

Moved by Councillor Cahill, seconded by Councillor McBain.—That the account of Geo. Mitchell be paid.—Carried.

UNFINISHED DOCUMENTS.

Moved by Councillor Paterson, seconded by Councillor Rountree.—That the Clerk hand over any unfinished documents to their respective committees, and said committees to report on the same as soon as possible.

POLICE COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Moved by Councillor Paterson, seconded by Councillor Millar.—That the Clerk report monthly to this Council the proceedings of the Police Court.—Carried.

SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

Moved by Councillor Rutherford, seconded by Councillor Denne.—That the Street Inspector be requested to have one of the rods now broken in Smith Street Bridge repaired.—Carried.

Council adjourned till next evening to consider the License By-law, when they met in Committee of the Whole, and after receiving the the opinion of the Town Solicitors, referred the By-law to the License Committee to report at next meeting of Council.

The Mayor read a telegram from Mr. Scott, asking if he, as Mayor, could extend the term for raising the $100,000 bonuses for Toronto and Ottawa Railway, to June, 1879.

On motion of Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Denne, the Mayor was instructed to signify the willingness of the Council, to extend the time till June, 1879.

A By-law was then passed to repeal a By-law granting leave to construct a switch on Bethune street, beside Mr. Beavis's stove house.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The Board of School Trustees met at the Union School buildings on Tuesday evening last. Present—Messrs. Stevenson, Donnistoun, Romaine, White, Lesh, Cox, Ernest, Shaw, Edmison, Dumble.

The Secretary took the Chair and announced that he had received notice from the Town Clerk that Messrs. Stevenson and Dumble had been re-appointed High School Trustees by the Town Council, and that Messrs. Romaine, Ernest, Dumble and Cook had been elected Trustees for the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Wards, respectively, and that these present had made the necessary declarations of office. He then called upon them to elect a Chairman for the current year.

ELECTION OF CHAIRMAN.

On motion of Mr. Donnistoun, seconded by Mr. Edmison.—Mr. James Stevenson was re-elected Chairman for the current year.

Mr. Stevenson thanked the gentleman present for the honor conferred upon him, and trusted that he would continue to fill the position to the satisfaction of the Board.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Edwards entered and took his seat.

DRAFTING THE STANDING COMMITTEES.

Moved by Mr. Donnistoun, seconded by Mr. Dumble.—That Messrs. Shaw, Edmison, Dumble and the mover, be a committee to draft the standing Committees for the year, and to report the same to this Board forthwith for further action of the Board with regard thereto.—Carried.

LOCAL SUPERINTENDENT.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Donnistoun.—That Mr. James Stratton be re-appointed Inspector of Public Schools for the Town of Peterborough for the current year, at a salary of fifty dollars.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Edmison, seconded by Mr. Romaine.—That Mr. W. A. Morrow be re-appointed Secretary Treasurer for the current year. Some discussion arose as to whether it was necessary for the new Board to reappoint Mr. Morrow, his previous appointment not stating any period of time, and the matter was laid over for further consideration.

Mr. Cook and Dr. Kincaid entered and took their seats.

On motion of Mr. Shaw, the Special Committee was allowed the use in order to prepare report on standing Committees.

After a short recess, Mr. Shaw reported as follows:—

The special Committee appointed to name the standing Committee for the year 1878, beg leave to report as follows:—

Finance.—Messrs. Shaw, Donnistoun, Cox, Edmison, and Dumble.

Appointments.—Messrs. Donnistoun, Cox, Edwards, and Dumble, Romaine, Ernest and Edmison.

Property.—Messrs. McClelland, Kincaid, Lesh, Cook and White.

School Superintendence.—The Chairman of the Board, and Messrs. Kincaid, Edwards, Dumble, Lesh and Edmison.

Your Committee recommend the above named as the Standing Committees, and that the first named on the several Committees be the Chairmen, and that three members be a quorum.

Your Committee have suggested an additional Committee on School Supervision, in lieu of the former visiting Committee, which we hope will [illegible] in the meeting. It will be expected of this new Committee that they will frequently visit the Schools, and bring before the Board any matter which they think will be for their benefit.

Dr. Kincaid objected to being on the Property [illegible] Committee, as he could not properly attend to them.

Mr. Donnistoun explained that the Committee on School Supervision took the place of the old Visiting Committee, and thought the Board was fortunate in having the services of a professional man like Dr. Kincaid on the committee, as besides inspecting the schools he would be able to render valuable service in seeing that the rooms were in proper condition for the health of the children.

The Doctor then agreed to act on this Committee but refused to act on the Property Committee

On motion the report was adopted.

Moved by Mr. Cox, seconded by Mr. White.—That Dr. Kincaid's name be added to the Committee on Appointments.—Lost.

COMMUNICATIONS.

C. D. Macdonald, Town Clerk, stating that Geo. A. Cox and James Stevenson were re-appointed High School Trustees by the Town Council.—Received.

From the Town Clerk, announcing the result of the late elections for School Trustees.—Received.

From the same transmitting a report of the Special Committee of the Town Council in reference to school matters. The report was published in a late issue of this paper. Referred to Finance Committee.

From a Furnishing House in Chicago, enclosing a catalogue of school furniture.—Received.

From Mr. McKee, stating that owing to severe and protracted illness in his family his present salary was insufficient to meet his wants and asking for an increase.—Referred to Committee of Appointments.

From Esq. Pearce, County Clerk, transmitting an extract from the report of the Finance Committee of the County Council, offering a grant of $200 to the Institute provided county pupils were admitted on the same terms as resident pupils.—Referred to Finance Committee.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT OF ATTENDANCE FOR MONTH OF JANUARY.

A report from the Principal giving the attendance at the Schools during the month of January, was read, as follows:—

Collegiate Institute.—Number on the Roll, 154; average attendance, 152; residents, 109; county pupils, 43; other counties, 9.

Central Public School.—On Roll, 294; average attendance, 248.

South Ward School.—On Roll, 187; average attendance, 149.

West Ward School.—On Roll, 158; average attendance, 129.

Auburn School.—On Roll, 81; average attendance, 58.

Total number on the Roll for all the schools, 1,168; total average, 926.

The Secretary announced that the receipts from the schools for the month of January was as follows:—Collegiate Institute, $149.55; Public Schools, $11.69.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were handed in and read by the Secretary:—

From Educational Department	$15 50
Henry Owens	13 20
Mr. McFadden	14 20
R. Cowperthwaite	21 75
Coal for 3rd Ward School	21 80
Henry Best	44 40

Referred to the Finance Committee and ordered to be paid if found correct.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Mr. Shaw, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reported, recommending the payment of several accounts, and stating that Wilson & Davis' tender for stationery had been accepted. Accompanying the report was a balance sheet and statements of receipts and expenditure in connection with the Collegiate Institute and Public School, and various other matters of importance. We regret not having space this week for it, but will publish it next week.

On motion the report was received and adopted.

The Chairman stated that during a period of 26 or 25 years he had never heard such an excellent report, either in the School Board or the Council, and congratulated the Board on having such an efficient Finance Committee.

REPORT OF PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

Mr. Lesh as Chairman of the Property Committee reported as follows:—

The Property Committee beg leave to report that they have accepted Mr. T. Fitzgerald's tender for the supply of wood, his being the lowest tender, at the following rates:—4-foot beech cord wood, at $2.50; and sawed, two feet, double length, at $2.85, to be delivered at the school building on or before April 30th, 1878.

Your attention is further drawn to the enormous consumption of coal for heating the West Ward School—twenty tons of coal will be required during a winter at the cost of $140, whereas with a supply of wood, thirty cords would be sufficient, at the cost of $84.

CLERGYMEN VISITING THE SCHOOLS.

Mr. Donnistoun said he had a matter to bring before the Board to-night, one which he thought would be of benefit to the schools. He was anxious that as much interest as possible should be taken in the schools by those outside of the Board, and as the School Law gives to Protestant ministers and others certain rights which he believed had not as yet been exercised by them in this town, he thought it would be productive of good were an invitation sent them. He understood the clergymen of the town had formed an association, and this was just such a matter as the Association might deal with. It could not help but be productive of good.

Mr. Edwards said that the clergy, doctors, magistrates and judges were by law constituted ex-officio visitors. They no doubt would be able to throw out valuable hints, and the Board he thought would not be above accepting information from them.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Donnistoun,—That the Secretary of the Board be instructed respectfully to draw the attention of the clergy, magistrates and others concerned to those parts of the School law which invite their active interest in our Schools, with an intimation that this Board will be pleased if they will assume the liberty and functions to which the School Act invites them.—Carried.

NEW QUARTERS.

Dr. Kincaid suggested that the Board change their place of meeting to the Council Chamber, as it would be more convenient, and possessed better facilities than the room at present used. He would therefore move, seconded by Mr. Ernest,—That in future, with the permission of the Town Council, the meetings of this Board be held in the Council Chamber.

Mr. Shaw objected to changing, and said it would necessitate more expense, besides the room at present occupied was quite sufficient in all respects for the requirements of the Board. If on any special occasion the Board wished to make a public exhibition of themselves they might adjourn to the Council Chamber. (Laughter.)

The motion on being put was declared lost, the mover and seconder only voting for it.

A QUESTION FOR THE COMMITTEE OF APPOINTMENTS.

The Principal said he wished to make mention of a subject which he asked to have referred to the Committee on Appointments. Mr. Dixon had some time ago received an offer of an increase of salary from the Collingwood High School, and had at the time sent in his resignation. He had however, withdrawn it at that time, but now the Collingwood School offered him an increase of $200, if he would take charge of their School. It was hard to get a good mathematical teacher, and much of the success which attended our late examinations was due to Mr. Dixon. He merely asked the matter to be referred to the Committee on Appointments, for their consideration.

The matter was then on motion referred to the Committee.

On motion the Board adjourned.

BY-LAW No.—

A By-Law to aid and assist the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company by giving by way of bonus to the said Company the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars in Debentures of the Town of Peterborough.

WHEREAS the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough deems it that a railway should be constructed from the City of Toronto passing through the said Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa and the said Company under an Act of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario passed in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company" and amendments thereto are empowered to construct such a railway, and it is considered that any Municipal Corporation which may be interested in securing the construction of the said railway or through any part of which the line which the railway or works of the said company shall pass or be situated may aid the said company by giving money or Debentures as by way of Bonus, Gift or Loan;

And whereas the name of the said Company has been changed to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company;

And whereas by an Act of the Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough and to authorize the issue of Debentures on the security of Town property and for other purposes," it was enacted that certain property therein mentioned should be vested in the Commissioners therein named, and their successors [illegible] Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust, and that it should be lawful for the Mayor and Town Council of the said Town of Peterborough from time to time being to cause to be issued Debentures under the seal of the said Corporation, signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer of the said Town, and by the Secretary of the said Commissioners and to the amount and for the purposes and in the manner in the said Act designated, and that it should be lawful for the said Commissioners to issue new Debentures if required from time to time upon which to raise funds to retire outstanding Debentures, and that the Town Council of the said Municipality should annually upon the application of the said Commissioners raise upon and from the rateable property of the said Municipality the Interest and Sinking Fund requisite for the ultimate redemption of the said Debentures according to the said Act;

And whereas heretofore the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough by By-law duly ratified by the ratepayers of the said Town of Peterborough and subsequently sanctioned by the Legislature of Ontario granted aid by way of bonus to the said company to the amount of the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars;

And whereas by the first section of an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario passed in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-seven and chaptered Forty it was declared lawful for the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough notwithstanding such Act of Consolidation to grant aid by way of bonus to the said Company by way of substitution of the said grantee for the cited By-law and in an amount not exceeding the said sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars upon such terms and conditions as to the said corporation may seem expedient and by the Second Section of such last recited Act it was further provided that the Debentures to be issued under such By-law be issued and redeemable in the manner provided by the said Consolidation Act;

And whereas it is deemed expedient to grant aid by way of bonus to the said company by way of substitution of the By-law heretofore passed as aforesaid;

The Municipality of the Town of Peterborough by the Council thereof therefore enacts as follows:—

1. That it shall and may be lawful for the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough to aid and assist the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company in the construction of a railway connecting the City of Toronto with the City of Ottawa and passing through the said Town of Peterborough by granting by way of bonus to the said Company Debentures of the said Municipality to the amount of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars in the manner and on the conditions hereinafter contained:

2. That for the purposes aforesaid it shall and may be lawful for the Mayor and Town Council to cause to be issued Debentures of the said Municipality under the Seal thereof to be signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Treasurer of the said Town and the Secretary of the said Commissioners to the said amount of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the said Town at the time follow-ing, that is to say: Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Sixteen years from the issue thereof; Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Eighteen years from the issue thereof; and Debentures to the amount of Fifty Thousand Dollars at the end of Twenty years from the issue thereof; such Debentures to be for the sum of One Thousand Dollars each, and to bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half yearly; such interest and the redemption of such of the said Debentures as may be converted into money and negotiated as hereinafter set out to be provided for in the manner and subject to the provisions of the said hereinb

A CATASTROPHE.

No human being who saw that sight
But felt a shudder of pale affright,
He sat in a window, three stories high,
A little baby with no one nigh.

A stranger saw him and stopped to stare;
A crowd soon gathered to see him there.
A gleam ! a flutter !—in airy flight
Came past the window a butterfly bright.

From fields of clover and perfumed air,
Wayfaring lancet what brought you there ?
The baby saw it and eagerly
Reached out to catch it with crowning glee—

With fat, pink fingers, reached out—and fell,
The awful horror no tongue can tell ;
Poor little baby, so sweet and bright !
Pale faces quivered and lips grew white ;

Weak women fainted, strong men grew weak ;
Up rose one woman's heart-piercing shriek,
Harrah for the awning ! Upon the fly
It caught the youngster and tossed him high.

The bounce prodigious made baby scowl :
He caught his breath, sir, and cut up a howl.
All blessed the awning that had no flaw ;
But a madder baby you never saw.

SOWING CLOVER SEED ON SOD.

When a farmer has sod land, on which the grass is thin, and run out to some extent, it may be seeded to clover, sowing the seed upon the sod early in the spring, then harrow the land, and roll it, and the seed will catch well. If a dressing of manure be applied before the land is harrowed, the result would be beneficial, especially if the land is poor. As soon as the grass gets so high as to smother the young clover, put on the mower, and cut it close to the ground : and in a few weeks cut the grass again, when the clover will be large enough to sustain itself ; and by fall it will be a heavy growth. A farmer who sowed clover seed as above in 1876, said of the crop of 1877 : "In the spring there was a fair start, the clover, having the advantage, though the weather was unfavorably early, there being a lack of moisture and warmth, old meadows particularly suffering ; but it was not until after the first cutting, and a dressing of plaster freshly ground and of excellent quality, was given, aided by timely showers and warm weather that the growth really set in, and now there is a cloud of clover smothering the grass and the few weeds that strive for existence. Nothing can be finer than this—so acknowledged by all who see it.'

CARE OF YOUNG STOCK.

I see no reason why young stock should not be as well cared for as that which is mature. It may be said truly, that a first class cow, or a valuable horse, cannot be reared from a poorly fed calf or colt. Such stock should be kept in a uniform, thriving condition. In mild winter weather, they may lie at night under a shed, and have the run of the yard in the day time, which is better than to keep them housed ; but in very cold weather they should have warm quarters, not only for their comfort but to save feed. If it costs ten cents a day to keep a calf in good growing condition in warm quarters, it will cost fifteen cents a day to keep a calf in the same condition in cold quarters. An English farmer writes : 'It is this attention to young stock, sheep &c., in England, which makes the tenant farmer so successful and causes the extra mutton and wool ; and it is this false economy in the United States of 'husbanding' as it is called, the best feed, and keeping the cattle and sheep short, in consequence of which they so lose flesh, that farmers are afraid of the winter, and they sink money instead of gaining.'

Canadian Poultry in England.

A correspondent writing from London, England, under date of Dec. 20th, says :—'There was a considerable consignment of Canadian turkeys this week for our Christmas markets. Bristol, Liverpool, and Manchester were the country markets that received supplies. London, (Leadenhall market) also had a good many barrels. Unfortunately the weather on the arrival of the birds here was mild and there condition not good. A consignment of turkeys from the Eastern Townships was spoiled by holes having been bored in the barrels. I saw the birds in Leadenhall market condemned as unfit for food.' They were destroyed by order of the Sanitary Inspector. Another lot sent by Mr. Dawson of Brampton, Ontario, were packed in their feathers, in barrels, and carried very well, but the weather was against them, and they had a bad smell. which prevented them realising remunerative prices. I bought fourteen of these turkeys at six shillings a piece, but when cooked they were unsatisfactory, being rather 'high' and smelling like game long kept. I have taken great interest in the competition of Canadian poultry, as there is a great trade to be done. but the birds must arrive in first rate condition. English turkeys of the same size as these birds, 8 to 9 lbs each, sold at double the price. Poultry from Canada must be packed in the feathers, the heads to be put under the wings, in boxes—no barrels—practically air tight. On arriving here the birds should be hung in a draught of air for twenty-four hours, and if the weather is cold, their condition will be first rate. There is an unlimited market in England for a good article at remunerative prices. but the condition must be nearly equal to that of home-fed poultry. I would strongly urge on Canadian consigners of poultry the advisability of feeding their birds fat before sending them. The Canadian geese in this market fetch a very low price, because they were lean compared with the home-fed bird displayed by their side. Messrs G. Brooke & Co., of Leadenhall market, received the Canadian poultry for sale, and they are very ready to promote the trade as much as possible, but of course they are unable to dispose of inferior poultry at good prices. In the first place the bird must be fat, and in the second place they must be in good condition when they arrive, if the trade is to be satisfactorily established.'

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The council met on Monday Jan. 21st at 11 a.m.. Present the Reeve Mr. Barnard, Councillors Messrs Lightfoot, Wood and Rutherford. Each of the members with the exception of Mr. Fisher filed their declarations of qualifications and of office with the Clerk and afterwards adjourned for dinner. At one p. m. they reassembled. The Reeve. Mr. Barnard, in the chair.

D. Rose, Esq., late Treasurer, requested that his accounts be audited in public. On motion Council adjourned to meet at Warsaw for the audit of the Treasurer's accounts at the call of the Reeve.

REVIVAL IN TRADE.

No doubt very much of the hostility that has presented itself in England against any direct interference as between Russia and Turkey, has sprung from considerations of a commercial kind. Trade and manufactures have been in a very depressed state for a long time past, and if to the existing conditions was to be added the dead weight which war would be the parent of, a very unhappy state of things would be brought about. As it is, it is difficult to discover any immediate prospect of a revival of trade in any quarter. No doubt people are paying the penalty to-day due to former imprudences. Society is undergoing a period of purification, during which process the commercial forces are engaged not much in seeking new growth as in getting rid of effete material. The wrecked banks and rotten trust companies in the States, the heavy failures in Canada ; the silent mills and iron-works in England, speak not of causes arising to-day, but of those that had their origin long ago. The foundation for the existing state of things arose when everything 'went kiting.' When people made money but spent more, and when it was foolishly imagined that prosperity would last forever. Then it was that railways were overbuilt that manufacturing in all departments were overdone, when the world had too much of everything. Too much lumber. Too much petroleum. Too much sugar and tobacco. Too much hardware. The glut in the markets was such that prices went down with a rush, and people who had the misfortune to hold large stocks of goods were brought to naught by a sudden springing from an unlooked for, an unanticipated quarter. The blow was as sudden as it was stunning. It put people all abroad. Few knew what might be coming next and many began to fear an even more widespread area of disasters than that which had really presented itself. But adversity, like prosperity, cannot last forever. The long lane take a turn at last, and when the commercial world has by means of a painful process disencumbered itself of hurtful conditions a new era of satisfactory procedure will present itself. Scientific observers have said that matter is never lost. That it changes its conditions merely. The solid has assumed the condition of a fluid. The fluid has put on a gaseous form. That which was visible to the eye is no longer appreciable to the senses. Its nature, but its constitution has been changed. So, too, it may be said, with regard to commerce and capital. Capital may be "lost" with respect to one enterprise or another, with reference to one person or another, but it remains in existence still. The great motive power of society—labor, is as potent to-day as ever. Men and muscle are as they were. Steam can be called as readily into action as an assistant as ever. The ultimate medium of exchangeable value—gold, is as plentiful as ever, while the facilities and conveniences of life continue to increase and multiply day by day. But if activity is in abeyance, it has become more profitable for the general well-being that it should find the development of its energy restrained. To go a manufacturing for, or importing to, a market already satisfied, is something like pouring into a vessel that is filled already. The liquid runs over, and waste is the result. No one can compel a sponge to absorb and retain more than its capillary action is equal to Yet one experiment has been made to endeavor to make the commercial sponge take up more than its capacity will permit. The result is the same in all cases, and will continue to be so. By the action that is going on, painful though it is and has been, preparation is being made for a renewed demand upon labor. When capital has readjusted itself, and industry in all its ramifications—finds new employment, the lethargy and loss that have been present will have passed away for another period, and energy having scope for development, will find profitable employment. But the period, the advent of which we are all hoping for, must come gradually as it will surely. The beaten tracks are those along which society as an aggregate can move. If it refuses a sturdy patience to wait for the good time coming, wait we must ; nor is it wise to look to effect by empirical devices that which natural causes can alone effect.
